The province of Laguna was not organized until July 1, 1902, but some of its municipalities were organized prior to that date, and became entitled to refunds of internal revenue and forestry collections under legislation by the Commission.

The provincial act, as amended by act No. 133, requires the auditor and the treasurer of the islands to examine once each quarter the accounts of each provincial treasurer. Every effort has been made to comply with this legal requirement, but it has been found impossible to do so, very largely on account of inadequate means of transportation. Examiners have been unable to get to and away from provinces promptly. However, as all accounts of provincial treasurers receive a rigid audit in this office the public interests have not suffered.

In view of the practical experience acquired during the past year the auditor now very earnestly recommends that the provincial law be so amended as to authorize the employment of the auditor's examiners exclusively in visiting the provinces for the purpose of giving instructions to the various treasurers and clerks relative to the proper rendition of their accounts and in the application of provincial and municipal laws thereto. While engaged in this work the examiners would also be able to give instructions to other officers collecting and disbursing insular revenues in the provinces and on their routes. The result would be a great improvement in the service in a very short time.

The laws of the United States contemplate a "double check" on all accounts, i. e., an examination by the administrative branch of the government as well as by the proper auditor. (See sec. 14 of the act of July 31, 1894, known as the Dockery Act.) While we have no similar law for these islands, the spirit and purpose of the law cited may well be observed in certain classes of accounts. The administrative examination of the accounts of provincial treasurers may be safely intrusted to the able corps of examiners under the direction of the treasurer of the archipelago operating alone, while the auditor's examination may be as well done in this office as in the field. The examinations by the force under the direction of the treasurer should be largely for the purpose of determining that the provincial treasurer has charged himself in his accounts with all collections actually made by him, and that he has exercised due diligence in making the collections contemplated by law, and in ascertaining that the provincial treasurer has on hand the proper amount of cash as shown by his collections and his aggregated credit vouchers. No scrutiny as to the detail of these vouchers need be exercised, as that work will be done, down to the minutest detail, in the office of the auditor. There is no element of the accounting except that involving failure to take up an item which should have been charged and evidence of the actual possession of the cash balance which may not be determined with absolute certainty in the audit of the account in the provincial division of the auditor's office.

I can not impress too strongly upon all concerned the desirability of confining the efforts of the examiners of this office almost solely to the work of instructing accountable officers throughout the archipelago. The frequent changes which occur in the provincial treasurerships and the office forces render this all the more necessary. This work can not be satisfactorily done, however, so long as the examiners are employed in the field in making long and tedious examinations which must necessarily be repeated later in this office by the regular clerical force.

Respectfully submitted.

A. L. LAWSHE, Auditor.

Hon. Henry C. Ide, Secretary of Finance and Justice, Ayuntamiento.

The Subig Bay Naval Reservation, as created by the Executive order cited, placed this territory outside the jurisdiction of the War Department and insular government, but under instructions of the President the auditor for the archipelago was later charged with the duty of settling and adjusting the accounts arising under the government of the reservation.

The cash balance in the general revenue account of the treasury at the close of business October 21, comprising both United States currency and local currency at 2.40 to 1, was equivalent to $7,315,382.86} United States currency, which was depreciated on the morning of the 22d by the difference above stated.

a The extraordinary expenses for the fiscal year include $75,000 for "Suppression of epidemic diseases and pesta," and $50,000 for expenses in connection with establishment of a leper colony at Culion. The extraordinary expenses for the quarter ending September 30 are due to epidemic of cholers.

b The extraordinary expenses are for repairing wharf and buildings at Mariveles and cost of transporting disinferting barges to Hollo and Cebu.

As the expenses of the forestry bureau are to be deducted from the receipts before such receipts are turned back to the provinces, the expenses and receipts are not summed up in the final statement.

Taking this as a basis of an estimate for revenues during the fiscal year 1903, the central government should receive $9,389,858.36, and the city of Manila $1,407,926.78, or a total of $10,797,785.14.

In this statement is not included the revenues that will be received from the bureau of agriculture, but this will probably not amount to a large sum during the fiscal year 1903. There is also not included either the expenses or the revenues of the forestry bureau, as under a recent law of the Commission the revenues of the forestry bureau will be returned to the provinces in which they are collected, after deducting the expenses of collection. Should it be decided to deposit the revenues with the central treasury and the expenses of collection be charged to the insular government, the expenditures for the fiscal year 1903 should be increased by $106,568 and the revenues increased by approximately $300,000.

In all probability the estimate of receipts of the city of Manila for the fiscal year 1903, as based upon the revenues received for the last half of the fiscal year 1902, is less than will be actually received.

The amount of land tax collected prior to July 1 was $370,779.02. The estimated amount of land tax which will be collected during the fiscal year 1903 is $950,000. It is true that the land tax prior to July 1 was collected during the last six months of the fiscal year, and the result, therefore, in doubling the revenues of the city of Manila for the six months prior to July 1 (in estimating the revenues for the fiscal year 1903) was to double the amount of land tax collected prior to July 1, which should, in reality, be charged to the whole year and not merely to the six months. However, the estimated amount of land tax that should be collected during the fiscal year 1903 is $208,441.96, more than double this amount, and consequently, for the fiscal year 1903, will exceed the amount estimated by this sum.

In this statement there is not included either the amount due the Eastern Extension, Australasia and China Cable Company, or the amount they owe under their charter with the Spanish Government. There is some doubt whether, upon final settlement, an amount will be due them from the Government or by them to the Government. In either case the amount will be small.

In the statement of revenues collected is not included the refundable export duties collected in Manila, nor is there included the customs receipts of Philippine goods imported into the United States. This latter sum, however, as far as can be learned, for the present will be comparatively small under the present circumstances. Taking, however, the revenue of the insular government for the fiscal year 1903 as double the amount collected during the last half of the fiscal year 1902, or $9,389,858.36, the expenses, both running and extraordinary, of the central government, including therein 30 per cent of the expenses, both running and extraordinary, of the city of Manila, will exceed the revenues by $828,149.24, the total estimated expenditures of the above mentioned being $10,218,007.60. On the other hand, the city of Manila should be able to pay from their revenues 70 per cent of their expenses, both running and extraordinary. Their revenues during the fiscal year, as estimated, will amount to $1,407,926.78, while 70 per cent of their expenses, both running and extraordinary, will amount to $1,352,629.62. The estimated revenues of the central government for the fiscal year 1903, however, will be more than enough to pay for the running expenses of the central government and 30 per cent of the running expenses of the city of Manila.

The total estimated expenditures of the central government and of the city of Manila is $11,570,637.22, the estimated revenues, $10,797,785.14; making the probable excess of expenditures over revenues $772,852.08. In considering the probable balance available for appropriation at the end of the fiscal year 1903, the sum of $208,819.67, received during the first quarter of the present fiscal year as reimbursement of the central government for boats taken by the Navy, should be considered. This sum has not been included in the estimated revenues of the insular government, but would reduce the actual deficit at the end of the fiscal year by the same amount. If, therefore, the expenses of the central government are not increased over the amount estimated the balance available for appropriation at the end of the fiscal year should be, approximately, $3,500,000, as against $4,005,643.06, the bal-

CITY OF MANILA, OFFICE OF THE MUNICIPAL BOARD, June 30, 1902.

The Executive Secretary,

Manila, P. I.

Sir: In compliance with section 14 of the charter of the city of Manila, by direction of the municipal board, I have the honor to submit herewith in itemized form and detail all information regarding the financial condition of the city of Manila as of date June 30, 1902. To compile this information the actual figures have been taken from August 7, 1901, to May 31, 1902, and in some cases as of the cash in the treasury to June 10, 1902, and the receipts and expenditures for the balance of the fiscal year estimated. This is the only method that could be used in submitting this report, owing to the fiscal year closing June 30, and the charter requiring the report at an earlier date.

A. Inventory of lands and buildings and other property, real and personal, belonging to the city, including cash in the treasury.

1. Inventory of lands and buildings and real property of the city.

Note.—This list of property and the valuation is as complete as it is possible to make it at the present time. There is a large amount of city property in the city now in the possession of private individuals who have no title to it whatever, but on account of the incompleteness of the old city records, much of it has been lost sight of, but it is gradually being looked up and titles proven and the property registered in the name of the city. It has been impossible up to the present time to list and value all the entire estero bridges in the city, but that work will be taken up and completed as soon as it is possible.

2. Inventory of personal property of the city by departments.

Norm.—This statement has been a difficult one to compile on account of much of the property having been turned over to the city at the time of its inauguration and the prices of articles are difficult to obtain. However, the value, taking into consideration the deterioration for wear and tear, is approximately correct.

3. Statement of the cash in the treasury June 10, 1902, with the estimated receipts and withdrawals for the balance of the month.

B. Statement of the liabilities of the city, including the overdraft on the treasury June 30, 1902. The liabilities in this statement include all contracts entered into by the city which are now being carried out and upon which payment will be due when completed.

C. Estimate of the revenues of the city from all sources for the ensuing fiscal year, with a comparative statement of the amount received from these sources during the preceding twelve months.

Norz.—This statement only includes the amount realized from all sources since August 7, 1901, the date of the inauguration of the government of the city of Manila, and shows the exact receipts to June 10, and an estimate of receipts from June 10 to June 30.

D. Estimate of the ordinary expenses of the ensuing year, with a statement of the expenses during the preceding twelve months.

Nors.—This statement contains the ordinary expenses of the city since August 7, 1901.

E. An estimate of such extraordinary expenses as may be necessary for any purpose, the approximate total expenditure recommended, and the amount it is expected to expend during the ensuing fiscal year; also a statement of the extraordinary expenses during the preceding twelve months.

Note.—This statement only includes expenditures from August 7, 1901.

Recapitulation.—Estimates of total extraordinary and ordinary expenses for the fiscal year 1903, and a comparative statement of the extraordinary expenses of the fiscal year 1902. Very respectfully,

BERT EDDY, Acting Secretary.

SPECIAL REPORT OF THE COLLECTOR OF CUSTOMS FOR THE PHILIPPINE ARCH-IPELAGO, COVERING THE PERIOD FROM JUNE 1, 1901, TO SEPTEMBER 1, 1902.

> Office of the Collector of Customs for the Philippine Archipelago, Manila, October 8, 1902.

Sir: In accordance with your instructions of September 29, 1902, I have the honor to submit herewith a report of the operations of the Philippine customs service from June 1, 1901, to September 1, 1902.

The limited time available for the preparation of this data will necessarily make the report very brief and principally statistical in its nature.

Very respectfully,

W. Morgan Shuster, Collector of Customs for the Philippine Archipelago.

Hon. HENRY C. IDE, Secretary of Finance and Justice, Philippine Commission, Manila, P. I.

REPORT.

The customs service of the Philippine Archipelago is charged with the collection of the customs revenue, the enforcement of the Chinese exclusion and general immigration laws of the islands, and with certain limited quasi-consular duties.

A number of important laws regulating the customs service have been passed during the period covered by this report.

On September 17, 1901, the Philippine Commission passed "An act to revise and amend the tariff laws of the Philippine Archipelago," No. 230, known as the "tariff revision law of 1901." This law was confirmed and enacted by Congress on March 8, 1902.

The tariff revision law has done much to simplify and expedite the collection of the customs revenues and no serious grounds for complaint against its schedules have yet been found.

On February 6, 1902, the Philippine Commission passed "An act to constitute the customs service of the Philippine Archipelago and to provide for the administration thereof," known as "The Philippine customs administrative act."

This law has rendered possible an effective organization of the customs service of these islands, and as its provisions have gradually become known they have received the hearty compliance of the public having business with the different customs offices of this archipelago.

This act is largely modeled upon the principles of the customs administration which prevail in the United States, though many departures in minor respects have been made necessary by the different conditions here.

On March 3, 1902, the Philippine Commission passed "An act to reorganize the personnel of the Philippine customs service." This law repealed all former acts or orders providing for customs employees, and gave uniformity to classifications, grades, and compensation.

Since the new tariff went into effect several laws relating to the customs service, in addition to those above mentioned, have been passed, among them act No. 265, "Requiring persons whom the collector of customs has reasonable grounds for believing guilty of aiding insurrection seeking to land in the Philippines to take an oath of allegiance." * * *

PORT OF MANILA.

During the past year numerous changes have been made in the business methods of the Manila custom-house, principal among them being the adoption of the United States system of appraisers' returns, the establishment of an insular surveyor's office, the regulation and limitation of overtime work by customs employees, the complete separation of the cashiers' and bookkeepers' divisions, and the institution of the usual checks on one division by another.

The duties and responsibilities of each class of customs employees have been carefully defined, and complete series of instructions, general and special, have been issued on all questions arising up to the present time.

PORT OF ILOILO.

The general trade conditions at the port of Iloilo have been satisfactory during the past year, though the receipts for the last fiscal year fall considerably below those of the preceding one.

The equipment for customs work is good, except for the state of the lower arm of the inner harbor or river, where, from time to time, a large proportion of entering vessels become stuck in the mud and are delayed until they can be pulled off at high tide. A complete survey of the harbor has just been completed by the U. S. Army engineer officer in charge, whose plan contemplates the expenditure of $1,200,000 during the next five or six years. A part of the plan covers the dredging of 1,650,000 cubic yards of mud. A preliminary estimate of the work which is needed at once in order to keep the river open to foreign vessels includes the purchase of a suction dredge and three scows and the dredging of 300,000 cubic yards, amounting in all to about $127,500.

In view of the undoubted injury which is being done the business interests of Iloilo by these poor harbor facilities, it is recommended that an early appropriation be made to cover the preliminary work above outlined, and that hereafter a certain percentage of the customs receipts of the port be appropriated for continuing the harbor improvement in accordance with a definite plan.

PORT OF CEBU.

The foreign trade of the port of Cebu has steadily increased for the past three years, and is in a very flourishing condition.

The customs equipment and facilities are, however, in a lamentably poor state, and the need of a substantial appropriation for harbor improvements, docks, landing piers, and a custom-house is more pressing than at any other port in the archipelago. Several harbor surveys have been made and plans submitted for the betterment of the port, and as it is understood the matter of an appropriation and the adoption of plans is now before the Philippine Commission, no further recommendation is made than that the port of Cebu receive the first available appropriation for this kind of work.

PORT OF JOLO.

The business of the port of Jolo has fallen off somewhat during the past year, due partially to the advantage being taken of the Moro "free-entry law." This privilege, though doubtless made necessary by conditions existing during the time it was effective, was a serious drawback to regular importations in the Jolo Archipelago.

Jolo is essentially a transshipment port, only a small portion of the imports being consumed, and a similar portion of the exports originating, in its immediate neighborhood. This port is the natural outlet for the products from the islands of the Jolo Archipelago.

There is urgent need of a new custom-house at Jolo. The present offices are in a rented building, which is old, beyond permanent repair, small, and unsafe for keeping Government records, goods, or money. It is inconveniently located with respect to the water front, which fact entails a serious loss of time to importers and exporters, especially at a transchipment port. It is earnestly recommended that the recently presented plan of this office for a new custom-house at Jolo be approved.

The port of Siassi was formerly a subport of entry, under the immediate supervision of the collector of customs at Jolo, but on June 1, 1902, it was discontinued as such, in view of the very limited amount of foreign imports and exports which passed over its wharves. It is now a coastwise port and the headquarters of the Siassi coast inspection district.

PORT OF ZAMBOANGA.

Zamboanga is the sister port of Jolo, though somewhat inferior in its volume of trade. It is, like Jolo, a transshipment port, and has shown a remarkable increase in imports and exports during the past year. Zamboanga is the port of shipment for the products of southern and southeastern Mindanao.

PORT OF APARRI.

On June 1, 1902, the former coastwise port of Aparri, in northern Luzon, was tentatively opened as a port of entry, and although as yet no appreciable foreign trade has visited there, the prospects for the future development of the port are extremely good.

COASTWISE PORTS.

There are at present 156 ports open to the Philippine coastwise trade, of which 16 are headquarters of coast inspection districts.

The entire coast line of the archipelago has been divided into twenty coast inspection districts, each in charge of a customs officer, who is required to make the tour of his district, visiting all the ports as often as transportation facilities will permit. In this way a more or less complete supervision of the coast line and of local trade is maintained.

The greatest difficulty encountered by customs officers in this work is the lack of suitable water transportation, travel by land being practically impossible.

CUSTOMS CUTTERS.

The customs service possesses at the present time butsix cutters available for practical coast inspection and customs work. These vessels are from 80 to 90 feet long, having a maximum draft of 7 feet, and average about 8 knots speed under ordinary conditions. They are eminently suitable for their work, and can enter nearly every port in the islands. Their crews consist entirely of natives, with the exception of the master, and sometimes the mate, who are Americans. The cost of operating these vessels is very slight, and in the charge of the customs inspector of the district to which they are assigned they earn on an average their entire cost of operation through the collection of license fees, etc., which would otherwise go uncollected, to say nothing of the security which they give the customs revenue in the prevention of smuggling and deterrence of other possible violators of the laws.

The present assignments of these cutters are as follows:
Customs cutter Sora to the Legaspi coast inspection district; customs cutter Scoter to the San Fernando de Union coast inspection district and the Aparri collection district; customs cutter Sula to the Manila collection district, which includes the Iba and Batangas coast inspection districts; customs cutter Sanderling to the Paragua coast inspection district; customs cutter Seagull to the Tacloban inspection district; customs cutter Skua to the Jolo collection district.

These vessels have also from time to time assisted the constabulary, the judiciary,

SMUGGLING.

Reports have been received from time to time of somewhat extensive smuggling operations between Borneo and the island of Paragua, the Calamianes, and of the Jolo Archipelago, from which places contraband has been shipped, in some cases, to the islands of Negros and Panay. Two customs cutters are at present assigned to the work of breaking up this illegal traffic.

TRADE CONDITIONS.

The general trade of the archipelago is in a flourishing condition, and it is believed that only the recent cholera epidemic has prevented even greater development.

The coastwise trade has increased considerably during the past ten months, due to the encouragement given by the opening up of new ports.

CHINESE IMMIGRATION.

The enforcement of the Chinese exclusion laws of the United States in this archipelago has been rendered especially difficult by two conditions, which do not exist in the case of the home government, to wit, the proximity of China and the great demand for Chinese labor in these islands at the present time. The recent act of Congress of April 29, 1902, has greatly increased the strictness of the Chinese exclusions in force here, due to the fact that the laws of the United States have been somewhat modified at and subsequent to the date of the military order putting them into

The most frequently used method of attempting to enter these islands is by stowing on board vessels from Hongkong to Manila, Iloilo, or Cebu, one steamer arriving at the latter port some months ago having been found with 134 Chinese stowed in her cargo. They were returned to Hongkong and prosecuted by the ship's agents there. During the course of the trial the existence of an agency in Hongkong for bribing subordinate ships' officers to stow Chinese persons for the Philippines was clearly established.

CUSTOMS EXPENSES.

The disbursements of the customs service during the past are by no means a fair criticism of the normal expense of collecting the revenue. During the period referred to the number of coastwise ports has been nearly doubled, equipment and supplies for all the open ports of the archipelago have been purchased, permanent repairs have been made, army officers acting as customs officials have been replaced by civil employees (with the exception of a few ports in provinces still under military control), a small revenue service has been purchased, equipped, and put into operation, and the practice of recompensing underpaid employees by an extensive permission of overtime work, for which the employees were paid by the owners of the goods, has been restricted to the actual necessities of the public business, making necessary a considerable increase in the regular salaries of certain classes of employees.

In addition to the above, the amount of imported merchandise which has been handled during the past fourteen months has greatly exceeded the amount handled during the fiscal year of 1901, as will be seen from the following data:

During the fiscal year ended June 30, 1901, there was imported into Manila foreign merchandise to the value of $28,500,000, upon which the duties collected amounted to about $6,867,000, or an average ad valorem rate, under the former tariff, of 24+

During the last fiscal year (ended June 30, 1902) foreign goods were imported to the value of over $36,500,000, upon which the duties collected amounted to about $6,289,000, or an average ad valorem rate under the present tariff of less than 18

The cost of collecting the customs revenue in the Philippine Islands is less than it is in the United States.

The statistics of customs transactions in the United States during the last fiscal year are not yet available here, but the official records for the fiscal year ended June 30, 1901, show the following comparison with the Philippine customs service:

The port of San Francisco offers the best comparison with the port of Manila. At San Francisco during the fiscal year of 1901 the sum of $7,484,338.86 was collected, at a cost of $437,427.11; cost to collect one dollar, $0.058.

At Manila during the last fiscal year the sum of $7,240,369.77 was collected, at a cost of $345,903.99; cost to collect one dollar, $0.0477.

Analyzing the records of the respective ports of San Francisco and Manila, it will be observed that while San Francisco only exceeded the latter in collections to the extent of $243,968.89, or an increase of 3½ per cent, her expenses were greater than those at Manila by $91,520.12, or an increase of 24 per cent.

It should also be borne in mind that many items appear in its total customs expenses at the port of Manila which are carried entirely independent and paid for out of separate appropriations in the customs service of the United States. Among them the following items are prominent:

(1) Cost of customs (revenue) cutters and launches.
(2) Maintenance of the immigration division.

(3) Cost of all supplies, such as stationery, record books, blank forms, and office furniture.

(4) Janitor service and night watchmen.
 (5) Fuel, lights, water, etc.

(6) Repairs and preservation of public buildings, and,

(7) Compensation for detectors and informers.

By deducting the above-enumerated items from the total expenditure at the port of Manila during the fiscal year ended June 30, 1902, the total expenses which should be included in the cost of collection are found to be $250,225.86, making the actual cost to collect one dollar $0.0345, or $0.023 less than the cost to collect one dollar at the port of San Francisco, slightly less than at the somewhat smaller port of New Orleans, and practically the same as at the large port of Boston, which collects over $20,000,000 a year. All comparisons are made with collections in the United States during the fiscal year of 1901 for reasons above stated.

As very pertinent to this comparison, the further fact should be noted that whereas the average ad valorem rate of the Dingley tariff in the United States is between 35 and 40 per cent, the average ad valorem rate under the present tariff of the Philippine Islands is less than 18 per cent, or about one-half of the Dingley tariff. It follows, therefore, that whereas the actual and necessary cost of assessing and handling the present volume of imports is unchanged, the cost of collecting one dollar in the Philippine Islands is practically doubled as compared with the United States, owing to the fact that the return of the duties upon the inspection and appraisal of a given amount of merchandise is only one-half here of what it is under the Dingley tariff.

CUSTOMS PERSONNEL.

One of the greatest difficulties which attends the administration of the customs service here has been and is the practical impossibility of securing competent and experienced employees. This state of affairs has two causes—one, the distance from the home government creating a lack of available material; the other, the insufficiency of the salaries paid in many instances to secure and hold competent, reliable employees for customs work. It is perhaps safe to say that in no other large branch of either the insular or the home government, except perhaps the judiciary, do the personal responsibility, loyalty, and integrity of all grades of officers and employees play such an important part as in the customs service, or a similar large revenue-collecting agency. There are many branches of a government in which quite as much, and perhaps more, technical knowledge is required of the ordinary classes of employees, but in hardly any other service is the general combination of skill and integrity so vitally essential as in customs work. In the United States this fact has been recognized by making the customs branch the best paid and best equipped one in the Federal service.

The following table of changes in the personnel of the Manila custom-house during the past year will partially explain the difficulty above discussed:

|                                                    |                            | Separa                           | tions.                          |             | Number                                               | Number                                 |

The monthly average of employees for the past year was 487.4. During that period the number separated from the service through resignation, discharge, transfer, or death was 381, or 78 per cent of the average monthly force. The entire personnel at this rate would change in about one year and three months, so that the average period of service of customs employees is a little over seven and one-half months.

The difficulties of organizing offices and divisions requiring experience and a high degree of technical skill under such conditions need no comment.

REVISION OF FORMS.

A complete revision of all customs forms in use in this archipelago has been made, and nearly three hundred are now in use. Owing to the essentially different methods of internal custom-house work which prevail here the United States customs blanks have only been available to a limited extent.

REFUNDS.

The amount of customs refunds on reliquidations or reclassifications made during the past year was only $4,444.06, as compared with $6,548.40 refunded during the year from September 1, 1900, to September 1, 1901, showing a decrease for the past year of nearly 33\frac{1}{3} per cent.

ARMY TRANSPORTS AND NAVAL SUPPLY SHIPS.

Since the passage of the Philippine customs administrative act army transports and naval supply ships arriving in these islands have been placed under customs supervision, with certain special regulations and provisions to facilitate the business of those two branches of the government.

This opportunity is taken to acknowledge the uniform cooperation and courtesy which have been extended to the customs service by Rear-Admiral Fred Rodgers, formerly of this station; Rear-Admiral Frank W. Wildes, the present squadron commander; Col. Charles F. Humphrey, chief quartermaster, division of the Philippines; and particularly to Maj. J. B. Aleshire, quartermaster, U. S. Army, in charge of army transport service.

COURT OF CUSTOMS APPRALS.

The appellate tribunal, established by the administrative act for all classes of customs cases, has been of great assistance both to the officers charged with enforcing the customs laws and to the public, who are thus afforded, by a most simple procedure, a prompt, inexpensive, and ever-ready method of having their rights finally adjudicated.

This court has been of special assistance in furnishing a prompt trial of criminal cases arising under the customs laws.

SUPPLEMENTAL REPORT OF THE COLLECTOR OF CUSTOMS FOR THE PHILIPPINE ARCHIPELAGO, ON THE GENERAL EFFECTS PRODUCED BY LOWERING CER-TAIN DUTIES IN THE TARIFF REVISION LAW OF 1901 ON FOOD PRODUCTS.

> OFFICE OF COLLECTOR OF CUSTOMS FOR PHILIPPINE ARCHIPELAGO, Manila, P. I., October 24, 1902.

My DEAR Mr. SECRETARY: I send you herewith a brief supplemental report on the general effects produced by lowering certain duties in the tariff revision law of 1901 on food products.

You will note from the annexed table of importations that there has been a large increase in the amount of these articles imported. In hardly any case, however, with the exception of salmon, perhaps, and similar canned goods, have the increased importations made up for the amount of duties lost by lowering the rate. In other words, the smaller amount imported during the preceding year at the higher rate of duty produced more revenue than the larger amount of importations received during the last year at the low rate. I have not found this a very fertile field for making any deductions, except that the consumption of canned goods and certain foods hitherto comparatively unknown here has greatly increased during the past year, and we may reasonably expect a similar increase during the coming year.

Very respectfully,

W. Morgan Shuster, Collector of Customs for the Philippine Archipelago.

Hon. HENRY C. IDE, Secretary of Finance and Justice, Philippine Commission.

SUPPLEMENTAL REPORT ON THE GENERAL EFFECTS PRODUCED BY LOWERING CERTAIN DUTIES IN THE TARIFF REVISION LAW OF 1901 ON FOOD PRODUCTS.

By the tariff revision law of 1901, which took effect November 15, 1901, the duties upon food products were greatly reduced, and during the past year there has been a substantial increase in the importation of most of that class of articles. This increase is believed to have been due primarily to the reduction in the rates of duty, and, secondarily, to the increased demand for products which have hitherto been practically unknown in the general food consumption of the Philippines. This demand has been produced by introducing these articles into the markets here, and putting them before the people of the provinces, and as the process of educating a people to new tastes is necessarily a slow one, the effects of the past few years are just commencing to show.

The importation of rice has nearly doubled during the past year, and from what causes it is impossible to state with certainty. The duties upon this article were lowered about 30 per cent, but the enormously increased importation must be attributed to a short crop in the islands, or some similar cause.

The following table of the importations at Manila of the principal food products upon which the rates of duty were substantially lowered will serve as an index to the effect of that portion of the new tariff on trade throughout the islands. (The figures given are in round numbers.)

Wheat.—The former duty was 47 cents per 100 kilos; present duty, 25 cents per 100 kilos. There was practically no wheat in grain imported during either the calendar year ending November 15, 1901, or from that period up to the present time.

Wheat flour.—The former duty was $1.63 per 100 kilos; present duty, 40 cents per

over the preceding year of from 114,000 to 151,000 barrels.

Hay, forage, and bran.—The former duty was 14 cents per 100 kilos; present duty, 5 cents per 100 kilos. The importations of these articles have increased over those of last year from 700 to 3,000 tons.

Canned fruits.—The former duty was 15 cents per kilo; present duty, 2 cents to 4 cents per kilo. Increase in importations from 42,000 to 700,000 pounds.

Canned meats.—The former duty was 15 cents per kilo; present duty, 5 to 20 cents per kilo (the greater proportion of these goods going under 5 cents per kilo). There has been an increase in the importations of canned meats from about 6,000 to 165,000

Jerked beef.—The former duty was $4.82 per 100 kilos; present duty, 75 cents per 100 kilos. The importations of this article have increased from 300 to 2,500 pounds.

Hams.—The former duty was $9.13 per 100 kilos; present duty, $3 per 100 kilos. The importations of this article have increased from 692,000 to 1,800,000 pounds.

Lard.—The former duty was $9.13 per 100 kilos; present duty, $1.60 per 100 kilos. The importations of this article have increased from 1,200,000 to 2,000,000 pounds.

Canned salmon.—The former duty was 15 cents per kilo; present duty, 3½ cents per The importations of this article have increased from about 8,000 to 1,500,000 poun ds.

Caviar, etc. (in cans).—The former duty was 15 cents per kilo; present duty, 20 cents per kilo. The importations of this article have decreased from 12,000 to 7,000 pounds.

Rice (unhusked).—The former duty was 59 cents per 100 kilos; present duty, 40 cents per 100 kilos.

Rice (husked).—The former duty was 63 cents per 100 kilos; present duty, 50 cents per 100 kilos. The total amount of rice, husked and unhusked, imported into this port has increased from 194,500,000 to 340,000,000 pounds.

Respectfully submitted.

OFFICE OF COLLECTOR OF INTERNAL REVENUE, Manila, P. I., October 17, 1902.

Hon. HENRY C. IDE.

Secretary of Finance and Justice, Manila, P. I.

Sir: Pursuant to your request of October 13 I have the honor to hand you herewith a brief report of the operations of this department for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1902, and a supplementary statement of receipts and disbursements covering the period from July 1, 1902, to September 30, 1902. It is impossible, however, to give a correct statement of the collections for this period, as no reports have been received from the collectors at Dapitan and Pollok for the months of August and September, and no reports from the collectors at Isabela de Basilan and Jolo for the month of September. During the period covered by this statement (July, August, and September) civil government has been further extended until, on September 30, this department had supervision over the following parts of the islands only: Island of Mindanao (except the provinces of Surigao and Misamis) and the Joló Archipelago with 11 collectors, 6 of whom were army or marine officers, 3 customs officers performing the duties of collectors of internal revenue, and 2 native collectors with a force of only 7 clerks.

Very respectfully,

ELLIS CROMWELL, Acting Collector Internal Revenue, Philippine Islands.

OFFICE OF THE COLLECTOR OF INTERNAL REVENUE, Manila, P. I., October 16, 1902.

Hon. HENRY C. IDE,

Secretary of Finance and Justice, Manila, P. I.

Sir: In compliance with your request of October 13, I have the honor to submit the following report covering the operations of this department for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1902:

At the beginning of the fiscal year this department was collecting revenue in nearly all parts of the archipelago, except in provinces where civil government had been established, in which provinces the revenue was being collected by provincial treasurers.

On July 1, 1901, the department consisted of 46 collectors, most of whom were army or marine officers detailed for this purpose, and 85 clerks employed in 45 offices. In view of the fact that officers detailed as collectors of internal revenue have never been relieved from their military duties, and of the frequent changes of such details, the taxes have been wholly or partially uncollected in some parts of the archipelago.

On August 7, 1901, Manila was incorporated as a city by act No. 183, United States Philippine Commission, which took it out of the jurisdiction of this department. The collector of internal revenue was then appointed city assessor and collector, and under the provisions of section 62 of the above-mentioned act, which provides that the city assessor and collector shall also act as the collector of internal revenue in those parts of the islands not within organized provincial governments and not within the city of Manila, the city assessor and collector has been performing the duties of the acting collector of internal revenue of the Philippine Islands since that date, using the clerical force of the city assessor and collector to perform the duties of that of collector of internal revenue.

During the period covered by this report civil government has been established in various provinces throughout the islands, which has gradually reduced the supervision of this department until, on June 30, 1902, it had supervision over the following parts of the archipelago only: Laguna Province, island of Samar, island of Mindanao (except the provinces of Surigao and Misamis), and the Jolo Archipelago, including the islands of Basilan and Siassi and the Tawi-tawi Islands, with 15 collectors, of which number 9 were army and marine officers and 2 were customs officers performing the duties of collectors of internal revenue, and a force of only 15 clerks.

The following statement (Exhibit A) shows the collections from the various offices and the city of Manila for the fiscal year 1902 and the cost of collections, the percentage of expense of collections for the entire department being 9.33 per cent:

There were sold in Manila during the period from July 1 to August 6 internalrevenue stamps amounting to $6,297.17½ United States currency, which is a decrease of 19.25 per cent as against amount of sales during a similar period of the fiscal year 1901.

The total internal-revenue collections for the city of Manila during the month of July, 1902, and six days in August (Exhibit B) show an increase of 18.77 per cent over the collections for a similar period of the fiscal year 1901, which is caused by an increase of business in the city and higher values of property. The per cent of styping to collections for the city of Manila was 41.

expense to collections for the city of Manila was 4½.

The industrial taxes collected for this period in the city of Manila amount to $54,164.61 United States currency, which is an increase of 20.4 per cent over the amount collected during a similar period of the fiscal year 1901. There were in force on July 1, 1901, 12,716 patentes. There were issued during the period 1,076 new patentes and canceled 500, leaving extant on August 7, the date on which the Manila office was turned over to the city assessor and collector, 13,292 patentes.

The urbana taxes collected in Manila from July 1 to August 6, inclusive, amount

The urbana taxes collected in Manila from July 1 to August 6, inclusive, amount to $19,642.63 United States currency, which is an increase of 35 per cent over the amount collected for a similar period of the fiscal year 1901. There are no delinquent urbana taxes.

The comparisons, however, given above are of little value, as the period of collections (thirty-six days) is not sufficient to make comparisons.

The cedula, or certificate of registration tax, now in force in this department is the old class, which sells for 20 cents Mexican. The following is a statement of all certificates handled by this department during the year:

FIRST ANNUAL REPORT OF THE SECRETARY OF PUBLIC INSTRUCTION, YEAR ENDING OCTOBER 15, 1902.

REPORT OF THE SECRETARY OF PUBLIC INSTRUCTION.

OFFICE OF SECRETARY OF PUBLIC INSTRUCTION, Manila, P. I., November 1, 1902.

The Philippine Commission.

Gentlemen: I have the honor to submit to you the first annual report of the secretary of public instruction, which, except where otherwise indicated, covers the year ending October 15, 1902, and relates to the organization and activity of the bureaus of education, of architecture and construction of public buildings, of public printing, of archives, of public libraries and museums, of statistics of the census, and of the Official Gazette, embraced in accordance with act No. 222 and the acts establishing them, under the executive control of the department of public instruction.

ORGANIZATION OF PUBLIC INSTRUCTION.

In organizing the system of public instruction in the Philippines, with an incomplete knowledge of the actual conditions of the country, it was not to be expected that the provisions made in the beginning would be found permanently satisfactory. The administration of the affairs of the bureau of education was originally placed in the hands of a general superintendent, who was assisted by 10 division superintendents. The division superintendents resided in the 10 divisions into which the archipelago was divided. Under the supervision of the general superintendent, each division superintendent exercised immediate control over the schools in his division. more teachers were employed and the school affairs of more towns required the attention of the division superintendent, it was found that the 10 division superintendents could not properly perform the work expected of them. Then by an amendment enacted July 24, 1901, the number of division superintendents was increased from 10 to 18. Under this organization nearly 1,000 American teachers were appointed and assigned to positions in different parts of the archipelago. work of placing the teachers where they were most needed the division superintendents rendered valuable assistance to the general superintendent. They made themselves familiar with the conditions in their several divisions by systematic investigation and personal inspection, and were authorized to select from the teachers already appointed, subject to the approval of the general superintendent, such teachers as seemed to them best fitted to establish and conduct schools in the different parts of their several divisions. In the course of time, however, the work required of the division superintendents became too great to be successfully performed by them without assistance. supply this deficiency the general superintendent in some cases assigned teachers to act as clerks in the offices of the division superintendents, and in order that there might be some person in each province of the division with whom the division superintendent might correspond and who might perform such work of supervision as might be required of him, a law was enacted on September 20, 1901, providing for the appointment of deputy division superintendents. By this law the deputy division superintendent was required to be a teacher actually engaged in instruction. He was authorized to exercise, under certain limitations, the functions of the division superintendent, but his action was subject to confirmation by that officer. The limitations referred particularly to the power to appoint school-teachers for the municipalities and to fix their salaries, which could be done only by the division superintendent himself. The number of deputy division superintendents was to be determined by the general superintendent as they seemed to be needed in the several divisions, but this number in any division might never exceed the number of provinces in that division. It was originally expected that the work required of the deputy division superintendent might be performed without interfering with his regular work as teacher, and in this view it was required by law that he should be a teacher actually engaged in the work of instruction. The extension of the work of the bureau of education soon demanded all the time and energy of the deputies, and under this demand they were temporarily relieved by the general superintendent from their work as teachers and ordered by him to devote themselves exclusively to the business of organizing and supervising the schools in the several provinces in which they resided. This arrangement had two defects. In the first place, it was not in accordance with the requirement of the law of September 20, 1901; in the second place, it was not sufficiently simple to work with the most economic expenditure of force. The deputy division superintendents corresponded with the division superintendents and these in turn with the general superintendent. In order, therefore, to bring the educational affairs of all parts of the archipelago more directly under the head of the general superintendent and to provide for a more efficient management of the school affairs in each province, an important change in matters of school supervision was made by the law enacted October 8, 1902. Among other provisions, this law repealed the act fixing the number of division superintendents at 18, the law establishing the office of deputy division superintendent, and parts of certain other laws in conflict with the provisions of the act itself. It divided the archipelago into 36 school divisions. eral divisions, except in a few cases, were made to coincide with the In each of these divisions, except those corresponding to the provinces of Benguet, Lepanto-Bontoc, Nueva Vizcaya, and Paragua, a regularly appointed division superintendent was provided for. In each of the four provinces excepted it was provided that the governor should act, without additional compensation, as division super-This arrangement is justified by the fact that in Benguet, Lepanto-Bontoc, and Nueva Vizcaya the majority of the inhabitants are Igorrotes, living in a semisavage state, while the province of Paragua embraces, in addition to the northern half of the island of Paragua, a large number of small islands belonging to the Cuyos and Calamianes groups, and contains a limited and scattered population. Assistance in carrying on the office work of the division is provided for by authorizing the appointment of one clerk for each division superintendent. In addition to the teachers appointed for the municipalities by the division superintendent, whose salaries are paid by the municipalities, the general superintendent is authorized to keep in the service of the insular government a force of 1,000 trained teachers for the primary schools and such other additional trained teachers as may be necessary for the provincial schools of secondary instruction. salaries of the teachers of primary schools range from the few dollars received by the Filipino teacher in the poorest pueblo to $1,500 per For the salaries of secondary teachers an upper limit of $1,800 per annum has been fixed. The annual salaries of the division superintendents range from $1,500 to $2,500; only three of this number, however, receive the highest salary. The salaries of the division superintendents, of the teachers of the provincial schools, of the American primary teachers, and of the clerks in the offices of the division superintendents are paid with funds appropriated from the insular treasury. The offices of the division superintendents are provided by the several provinces.

While under the new organization the number of division superintendents is increased from 18 to 36, the office of deputy division superintendent is abolished, so that the total cost of the work of superintendence is reduced by about 25 per cent and its efficiency is greatly increased.

In addition to the general superintendent and the division superintendents already provided for, it will probably be found necessary, in view of the exacting duties of the office of general superintendent and the desirability hereafter of his spending considerable time in the several divisions, to appoint an assistant general superintendent to divide with the general superintendent the work of the office and the work of inspection in the field. In making this appointment it will be well to promote to this office, when created, a division superintendent who has become familiar with the affairs of his division and who has shown in his work knowledge, adaptability, and good judgment. On September 25, 1902, Dr. F. W. Atkinson, general superintendent

On September 25, 1902, Dr. F. W. Atkinson, general superintendent of education, presented his resignation to the civil governor, to take effect December 31, 1902. The suggestion here made with respect to an assistant general superintendent may very well be carried out when

Dr. Atkinson's successor assumes the duties of his office.

THE AMERICAN TEACHERS.

The American teachers have been appointed or selected in general in two ways—either directly by the general superintendent or by persons or institutions in the United States authorized to select a definite number. It is not to be expected that some mistakes would not be made in appointing so large a number of persons in a very limited period, but, considering the whole number of teachers, the quality has been eminently satisfactory. These teachers were not, however, all brought from America, but a number were appointed who were already in the Philippines. Among these latter were included discharged volunteer and regular soldiers, and wives and relatives of officers and civilians. At the outset those who were sent into the more remote towns suffered certain hardships, not the least of which was their isolation. Their food was often such as they were unaccustomed to, and the change from the conditions which they had left was often such as to cause homesickness and a certain measure of dissatisfaction with their lot. The long intervals which sometimes occurred between the coming of the mails, and the consequent difficulties of hearing from friends and receiving their pay promptly, tended to develop in many cases a considerable measure of discontent, and when the pay arrived it was, by reason of the depreciation of the local currency, found to be worth less than at the time when they should have received it. In addition to these causes they were also sometimes affected by the difficulties which they encountered in sending money to the United States. But as the monetary difficulties disappeared, as they became adjusted to their new surroundings, as the civil supply stores made available a better quality of food, and as they became more intimately acquainted with the people, they turned to their work with new zeal, and appear, in many cases, to have found in it a high degree of satisfaction. It might be added that the increases in a large number of their salaries during the year tended to impress upon them the thought that their services were, after all, appreciated. The strong desire on the part of the more intelligent Filipinos to have their children educated, and the aptitude of the children to learn have generally made the way of the American teacher easy, and given him or her a high place in the regard of those among whom they worked. This friendly attitude of the people toward the teachers has been met by the heroic efforts of many of the teachers in behalf of the Filipinos afflicted with cholera. When the scourge appeared and the schools were closed, in almost every instance the teacher stood at his post and did whatever was possible for him to do to relieve the sufferings of the people and impede the progress of the disease, and four of them became its victims.

The number of American teachers connected with the bureau of education between January, 1901, and September, 1902, was 1,074, but the highest number on the rolls at any one time was 926. May, 1902, and September of the same year this number was diminished so that on the 1st of September, 1902, there were 845 American teachers This number included the division superintendents in active service. and deputy division superintendents. The total number separated from the service during the period in question, from the beginning of 1901 to the 1st of September, 1902, was 229; 15 of these by death, 2 on account of the death of other persons, 61 by reason of sickness either of the teacher himself or some member of his family, 69 wives of soldiers and other transient residents who had been appointed in the islands, 10 women married, 24 men appointed to civil positions, 3 commissioned as military officers, 8 dismissed or discharged, 7 deserted, and 30 resigned—some of these last for the good of the service, others on account of dissatisfaction with monetary and other conditions, and a few to engage in business or other affairs.

In addition to the American teachers there have been employed in the period in question a large number of Filipino teachers. In view of the fact that some of these teachers were appointed by the municipal authorities before the organization of the public-school system and some since its organization in violation of the provision placing the appointment in the hands of the division superintendent, it has been impossible to keep in the general office an accurate statement of the whole number of Filipino teachers in the service at any given time.

In the day schools of Manila in July, 1901, the number in attendance was 5,123. On account of the cholera the number in August. 1902, was 3,044. In the report of last year it was said that at the time there were probably over 150,000 Filipino pupils enrolled in the free primary schools and over 75,000 in actual attendance. It was stated that there were probably 3,000 to 4,000 elementary Filipino teachers, 1,800 to 2,000 of whom were receiving one hour of English instruction daily; that there were at least 10,000 adults receiving instruction in English in the evening schools, and that there would shortly be from 20,000 to 30,000 attending these schools. During the present year there are more than 200,000 Filipino pupils enrolled in the primary schools, about 65 per cent of whom are in actual attendance. number of Filipino teachers appointed by the division superintendents is 2,625 and the total estimated number 3,400. There is a combined teaching force of Americans and Filipinos of 4,227. The night school enrollment for the past year has been about 25,000, and the estimated actual attendance is about 70 per cent of this number. Between 15,000 and 20,000 pupils are already enrolled in the provincial schools of secondary instruction.

A majority of the American teachers now engaged in the Philippines arrived at nearly the same time, and their several terms of service will expire during the coming year. In view of this fact it is imperatively necessary that prompt action should be taken either to place the whole body of teachers who have rendered satisfactory service during their residence in the islands in the classified civil service, or by some other means to assure them of the determination of the government to retain them in their positions. In the beginning a large number of teachers were required on short notice, and it would probably have been impossible to have secured them within the proper time by the means employed under the civil-service law. It was inevitable under the system that there would be complaints about unjust discrimination. The person whose qualifications are inadequate for a given position is not always the person who first recognizes this inadequacy, and when he is left out he sees no reason for being passed over, except a determination on the part of the authorities unjustly to discriminate against In making appointments, however, by the method adopted of giving authority to various institutions and a few officers of the educational system of the United States, each to select a limited number, the authority to appoint was very widely distributed, it being understood, of course, that the general superintendent of education retained also large authority to select and appoint. No discrimination beyond a discrimination on the basis of proper qualifications is known to the government, except that in certain instances special efforts were made to secure teachers of the same religious faith as the bulk of the inhabitants of the islands, but in spite of these efforts the person. having the power of appointment found it impossible to secure as large a number of qualified persons of this class as they were willing to appoint.

THE FILIPINO TEACHERS.

While the American teachers have already rendered very important services in beginning the work of public instruction in accordance with American ideas, it is nevertheless true that the ultimate character of the public instruction in the Philippines must depend on the character of the Filipino teachers which it will be possible to develop. Under the old régime the salaries of Filipinos were insignificant, and at present they average about $6 a month for women and $8 a month for men, in money of the United States. The upper limit of these salaries actually paid is about $25 a month, while the lower limit is about $1, which in some instances is for long periods withheld. happened that a teacher receiving a salary of $16.50 a month has hired a substitute for $4.50, and has lived as an independent gentleman on the remaining $12. The establishment of the native constabulary, with salaries ranging from $8.75 to $18.75, when the ability to read and write is required only of those receiving the highest salary, has naturally aroused more or less of discontent among the Filipino teachers and led them to inquire why a government which can pay its police sergeants the munificent salary of $18.75 is not able to pay its teachers with equal liberality. This unfavorable contrast may also be made in other cases, for the Filipino teachers are paid less than the drivers and

In addition to the fact that the salaries of the Filipino teachers are extremely low, there is the other fact that there is sometimes great uncertainty about the payment. By law the division superintendent is authorized to appoint the Filipino teachers in the municipalities and some of the municipalities have raised the question as to whether they were expected to pay the salaries of teachers appointed by officers not belonging to the municipality. "They argued that since the government appoints the teacher and fixes his salary the government expected to pay that salary. Others, when instructed to pay the salary, have assumed the right to fix it and also to appoint the teacher." Even where there is no question about the obligation to pay, the payments are often made irregularly, sometimes in other articles than money, sometimes at long intervals, and sometimes not at all. It is clear that under a system like this the Filipino teacher can never become a very effective factor in the development of public enlightenment; but as the bulk of the population must in the long run rely upon the Filipino teacher, either the municipalities must rise to a proper recognition of their obligations toward the public school teacher or a more satisfactory arrangement for their payment be made through some other authority. It may also be stated that some means must be taken to inspire the Filipino teacher with a sense of duty with respect to the work to which he is called. A letter from an American teacher in Panay, referring to what happened to his school during the few days of enforced absence by illness, illustrates what is meant in this connection.

"When I returned on Wednesday morning," he writes, "only 2 of my 6 teachers were present and my attendance had dropped from 140, when I left, to 25 when I returned. During my six days' absence scarcely any work had been done. Thursday and Friday there was a big fiesta here, and consequently it was impossible to hold school. This morning I attempted to collect the pupils and get started once more. I find my teachers are fully as badly demoralized as I expected they would be. Maria Garingales was the only one that came on time; Maria Girago came half an hour late and then wanted to get excused for the day. Francisco Girado came in an hour and a half late, and then only because I sent for him. Norberto Girado was at his home asleep and would not come at all, although I sent for him twice. He did not come to the school, but went to the cock fight instead, and as there is another cock fight to-morrow I have no reason to expect him at that time. All of my teachers, with the exception of Maria Garingales, who is always on time, have of late grown very slack in regard to their attendance. Norberto is an old offender and does not seem to improve. I have done everything in my power to impress upon him some sense of his obligation as a teacher, but during this month it is safe to say that he has been absent half the time."

This is probably a somewhat extreme case, but it illustrates the fact that before anything in the way of social reform can be accomplished through the people themselves there must be breathed into them the spirit of a new life. They must be led to feel a sense of moral obligation in their public work.

MANILA NORMAL SCHOOL.

During the past year increased attention has been given to plans looking to the development of facilities for preparing Filipinos for more efficient work as teachers. These facilities have been furnished by the Manila normal school, the branch of the Manila normal school organized for the training of Filipino teachers actually engaged in the work of instruction in Manila, in the provisions of the provincial schools for normal work, and in the various normal institutes held during the summer vacation. The Manila normal school is, perhaps, the most important single institution which has been organized within the bureau of education. Its forerunner was the preliminary school organized in Manila while Dr. David P. Barrows was city superintendent of schools. In its present form the Manila normal school was organized by Dr. E. B. Bryan, its present principal. In its beginning its sessions were held in the building known as the "Escuela Municipal," in the Walled City. On account of the occupancy of the building by the Manila grammar school in the forenoon, the classes of the normal school were assembled only in the afternoon. The curriculum covered five principal subjects-English, geography, American history, arithmetic, and science—which were taught on five days in the week, and two subordinate subjects, music, and art. The former was taught on two days and the latter on three days in the week. Prior to January 1, 1902, there were 310 pupils enrolled, of whom 292 were young men and 18 were young women. Here, as in all the schools of the archipelago, it was at first difficult to secure regular and continued attendance, so that with a total enrollment of 310 there was an average enrollment of only 220 and an average attendance of 202. The pupils in the school came from 24 provinces and were taught by 11 American teachers.

The limited quarters in the municipal school building, and the fact that sessions could be held only in the afternoon, made it very clear that new quarters must be obtained at a very early date. On the advice of the secretary of public instruction, the Commission offered to purchase the building belonging to the Assumptionist Sisters, and previously occupied by the army as the second reserve hospital. The building was constructed for a girls' school which had been maintained here by the Assumptionist Sisters with a subsidy from the Spanish Government. At the time the offer to purchase was made the Sisters were in Europe and undecided as to whether or not they would return The offer was therefore refused. No other building suitable for the work of the school was known to be available, and it was not thought desirable to wait for the construction of such a building. The secretary of public instruction then recommended that certain buildings which had been erected for the exposition in 1896 be repaired and set apart for the use of the Manila normal school. gave the school quarters at least temporarily adequate and enabled the sessions to be held during both the forenoon and the afternoon. view of the fact that the pupils of this school came largely from the provinces its proper work was hindered at the opening of the present school year in June by the prevalence of cholera in Manila and the surrounding provinces. Most of the pupils were reluctant to leave their homes, and those who were willing to do so found great difficulty in traveling on account of the rigid quarantine restrictions; but in spite of these hindrances, which have in some measure lasted until the present time, 330 pupils enrolled in the early months of the school year, with a prospect that with the passing of cholera the number in attendance would reach 500. In the course of time the relative number of young women has increased. Of the 270 pupils enrolled at the end of August 70 were young women.

In its new quarters the school has been enlarged and the scope of the instruction widened. Fourteen American teachers are now engaged and there has been a corresponding increase in the number of subjects

TEACHERS' COLLEGE.

Prior to August, 1902, the schools of Manila held two sessions daily, one in the morning and one in the afternoon. The last hour of the morning session was set apart for the instruction of the Filipino The instruction was given by the American teachers in the schoolhouses where they were severally employed. Given in small groups, without systematic organization or effective supervision, its quality depended largely on the personality of the American teachers. Where the teacher was strong and methodical the work was orderly and effective; where the teacher was weak and lacking in zeal the instruction was fragmentary and unsystematic; but as the purpose of this early instruction of the Filipino teachers was merely to assist them in acquiring a knowledge of the English language, the method adopted, securing close relations between an American teacher and a small group of Filipino teachers, was productive of more or less satisfactory results. In the course of time, however, it became necessary that the Filipino teachers should be subject to a more regular discipline and more systematic instruction. They needed instruction not only in the English language, but also in the various subjects that entered into the curriculum of the primary school. This became manifest at the end of the school year in 1901, when a considerable number of Filipino teachers of Manila had to be dismissed on account of their inefficiency. Some of these were too old to acquire a useful mastery of a new language, and some were indifferent and not in sympathy with the purposes of the government as manifested in its system of public instruction. In order to obviate the necessity of a subsequent resort to this severe method of curing the inefficiency of the city schools, it was determined that the sessions of the schools for teaching the children should be continued throughout the forenoon, that the afternoon session should be abandoned, and that all the Filipino teachers should be assembled at one place and organized into a normal school to be held between 3 and 5 o'clock in the afternoon.

Under this plan the 150 Filipino teachers engaged in the public schools of Manila are assembled for five days in the week in the building in the Walled City known as the "Escuela Municipal." They are divided into small sections and are taught by the American teachers regularly assigned to the Manila schools, each section meeting for three periods and receiving instruction in three different subjects in the two hours of the session. The obligation which was imposed on the Filipino teachers to attend the afternoon session of this branch of the Manila normal school was at first thought by them to be a hardship, on account of the difficulties and expense of securing the requisite transportation, but when it was explained to them that this opportunity was offered by the government in order to enable them to increase their fitness for their work, and thus make them worthy to be continued in their positions, they saw clearly that what was required of them was for their advantage. In bringing the instruction of the children into a single period of four hours in the morning, with two brief recesses, the cooler half of the day was utilized for this purpose and they were released from the necessity of returning to school in the hotter hours of the These advantages were more than sufficient to balance whatever disadvantages may have arisen from establishing one session of four hours in place of two shorter sessions separated by a midday intermission. This plan was carried into effect on August 4. Legally this school is a branch of the Manila normal school, and has been conducted under the general direction of Dr. E. B. Bryan, principal of that school. Much of its noteworthy success, however, is due to the tact and energy of the vice-principal, Mr. E. W. Oliver, who has been in actual charge of the institution from its beginning.

PROVINCIAL SCHOOLS OF SECONDARY INSTRUCTION.

An important step in the development of the system of public instruction in the Philippines was the establishment and organization of the provincial schools of secondary instruction. The law authorizing such schools was enacted March 7, 1902. Prior to this date the bureau of education had been chiefly concerned with the organization of primary As a consequence, many of the more advanced pupils in these schools, who had been taught English, began to entertain serious doubts respecting the possibility of continuing their studies in English in schools of a higher grade, and some of them thought it advisable to resume their studies of Spanish in order that they might be prepared to enter the Spanish schools of secondary instruction. This was particularly true in Manila, where there were several secondary schools which were maintained under the authority of the church. These were the only important schools of this grade that existed in the archipelago at the beginning of the American occupation, and only a comparatively small part of the inhabitants of the provinces found themselves in circumstances which permitted them to give their sons the advantages of these schools. It was advisable, therefore, to meet as early as possible the strong demand in the provinces for schools to which children could be admitted on completion of their primary instruction. With the enactment of the law of March 7 the general plan of the system of public instruction began to assume real form. This plan provided that in the course of time the primary schools should exist under municipal authority, the secondary schools under provincial authority, and higher instruction, together with whatever special schools might be established, should be supported directly by the insular government. Schools of secondary instruction were thus to become the peculiar charge of the provincial government. The provincial board was authorized to provide, by construction or purchase or renting, such school building or buildings in the province as in the opinion of the board might be necessary, to be used for the free secondary instruction of pupils resident

In view of the rude condition of the provincial population with respect to education and in order to provide an effective and simple organization it was determined that the secondary schools in the provinces should cover the widest range of subjects that it might be found necessary to teach. It was recognized that these provincial schools would furnish the highest grade of instruction that would be demanded by any considerable number of residents of the provinces; that they would become in the course of time the colleges for the people; and that the few who might demand such instruction as is given in a university would seek that instruction either in Manila or in the United It was, therefore, provided by law that the secondary instruction given in the provincial schools might include, in addition to academic and commercial subjects, manual training, instruction in agriculture, and normal-school instruction. While it is expected that ultimately the expenses of equipping and maintaining the provincial schools will be borne by the provinces, it is provided that for the time being the salaries of the teachers in these schools shall be paid from the insular treasury. In their establishment and conduct they are subject to the supervision of the division superintendents and the general superintendent of education. When, however, it shall be determined by law that the condition of finances of a province will justify for the future the payment of the salaries of teachers and all the expenses of supplies and equipment for secondary schools for the provincial treasury, such salaries and expenses shall be met by the several provinces. It was recognized in providing for these schools that certain provinces might not for a number of years be prepared to establish schools for secondary instruction, and it was provided that the provincial board of any such province might appropriate provincial funds for the payment of the tuition in a provincial school in any other province or in the city of Manila of such pupils as might wish to enter such provincial school.

Prior to September 1, 1902, 23 provincial schools had been established in the principal towns of the archipelago, and the work of organizing such schools in 11 other towns was in progress. While English will continue to be the language in which the instruction in these schools is given, an opportunity will be offered to such persons as desire it, for business or social reasons, to acquire also a knowledge of Spanish. By reason of the large part which the Spaniards have played in the history of the Philippines and the fact that the principal sources of our knowledge respecting these islands are in Spanish it will be desirable for many years to come that Filipino scholars and men of special cultivation shall, in addition to their knowledge of English, have also such command of Spanish as will make accessible to them the history and information relating to their early institutions. language and its literature, therefore, will constitute one of the subordinate subjects in the curriculum of the provincial school. By authorizing the broadest possible curriculum and by bringing instruction in all of the subjects mentioned under a single organization it is expected that those who have these schools in charge will adapt the work in them to the peculiar conditions of the people in the several provinces where they are established. The wide diversity in the soil, the climate, and the character of the inhabitants make necessary different kinds of instruction for different parts of the islands, and the organization of provincial schools makes it possible for the main work of the school to be adapted to the various needs of the inhabitants. In some instances, moreover, in order to make it possible for students from all parts of the province to attend the provincial school, it has been found necessary to make provision for furnishing them at reasonable rates with board and lodging. This is rendered especially necessary in some places by the extensive destruction of houses during the rebellion. In some parts of the islands the people had heard that Napoleon's great army was defeated in its undertaking against Russia by the burning of Moscow, and burned some of their principal towns as a means of checking the advance of the Americans. They were surprised to find that this means was not effective, that the Americans could sleep out of doors, and that they brought their own food with This useless destruction of buildings has left many important towns without adequate accommodations either for the offices of the government or for the schools. This limitation of quarters imposes upon some of the schools the necessity of providing quarters for at least a certain part of the pupils, and this bringing together boys who are prepared to enter upon their secondary studies and subjecting them to a rational discipline is likely to have a beneficial effect both on their character and their attainments.

NORMAL INSTITUTES.

The normal instruction in the provincial schools is designed to be so arranged that the pupils who have completed two years' work in these schools may take the last two years of their course in the Manila normal school. Thus the pupils from the provinces will be able to spend half of the four years' course in the provincial school and half in the Manila normal school. This will enable all who desire it to have the prestige of graduating from the school which constitutes the central feature of the system of normal instruction.

Another form of normal instruction is that which has been given at normal institutes held during the long vacation. While the work which has been done by the American teachers in one hour a day devoted to the instruction of individual or little groups of Filipino teachers has produced excellent results, it has been found in the provences, as well as in Manila, that it was desirable to assemble the Filipino teachers in large bodies and to give them more systematic instruction and discipline than was possible scattered in the various pueblos and barrios throughout the provinces. In Manila it has been found possible to assemble the Filipino teachers in the branch of the Manila normal school and to give them instruction during the afternoon of the days on which they are engaged during the morning in instructing the children in their respective schools, but, owing to the fact that in the provinces the Filipino teachers are scattered over wide territory, it has not been found possible to assemble them except during the long vacation. To meet this difficulty the vacation normal institutes have been established. The first experiments with the vacation normal school were made in Manila, Iba, and Laoag in April and May, 1901. The work of these three schools in 1901 was found to be so satisfactory that during the vacation of the present year a large number of such schools was organized. Although the long vacation generally occurs in April, May, and June, it is sometimes placed a little earlier and sometimes a little later, as may be demanded by the different conditions in different parts of the archipelago. It lasts twelve weeks, at least four weeks of which have been devoted in most of the provinces to institutes for the instruction of Filipino teachers, the plan involving one such institute for each Owing to the difficulties of transportation it has been found impracticable to gather together the teachers from a territory larger than the province. Attempts to assemble all the teachers of a division under the jurisdiction of a division superintendent have failed on this The three provinces of Iloilo, Capiz, and Antique made up the earlier school division of Panay, but only very imperfect and dilatory means of communication exist between them. For this reason a vacation normal institute was held at the capitol of each of these provinces instead of a large institute, which, it was hoped, might embrace all the teachers of the division. There appears to have been some good reason which induced the Spaniards to fix the boundaries of the provinces as we find them. Where these reasons are natural geographical demarkations, they are at present, as they always have been, magnified by the lack of facilities for communication. present government has seen fit to maintain the lines of separation which the Spaniards recognized. This was done in the new organization of provinces, but these lines were at first ignored in the establishment of school divisions. Under the law enacted October 8, 1902, the separate provinces, with a few exceptions, appear as school divisions. Under this new order of things the vacation institute in each province will be directly under the supervision of a division superintendent. The success of these institutes during the summer vacation of this year was interfered with by the presence of cholera and the consequent difficulties of travel. There were, however, 320 American teachers engaged in this instruction, with an attendance of 4,389 pupils, and an average attendance of 3,986.

To supplement the very imperfect education of the Filipino teachers in the provinces the instruction given in the normal institutes embraces the subjects usually taught in the primary schools. These subjects were used not merely to give the Filipino teachers the knowledge they were expected to impart, but also to enable the American teacher to illustrate the method in which the subject-matter might be properly presented. The Filipino teachers have encountered many difficulties in attending these institutes, due chiefly to their small salaries and, in many instances, to the failure on the part of the municipal authorities to pay what was due them. In this transition period the lot of Filipino teachers is not a fortunate one. Formerly they received low salaries, but they were permitted to require contributions from their pupils. Now many of their salaries have been somewhat increased, but it is expected that they will collect no more contributions. The increases, however, which in many cases they have received are not equal to the amounts they were accustomed to get from the pupils. Attending a normal institute, therefore, when this must be done at great personal sacrifice, as it often happens, shows a certain amount of professional ambition on the part of the Filipino teachers. This state of things will be remedied later when the graduates of the Manila normal school return to their provinces and by their more enlightened services justify higher salaries.

MUNICIPAL SUPPORT OF NORMAL SCHOOL STUDENTS.

There are many small towns and villages in the interior of the islands which are too poor to pay Filipino teachers sufficient salaries to induce those of proper attainments to come from other larger towns to engage in teaching, and which have among the inhabitants no persons of sufficient attainments to warrant their employment in the schools. These places are not of sufficient importance to make it wise for the government to support in them American teachers. The inhabitants of these small interior towns or villages are, therefore, without any means for bringing themselves into connection with the educational plans and purposes of the government or of acquiring knowledge of the kind of civilization which the Americans are hoping to develop in the Philippines. The difficulty here presented is a real one, for it is not desirable that so large a part of the population as is represented by these small towns should be left for long without being brought, either directly or indirectly, under the influence of American ideas. To remedy the existing state of things authority was given by act No. 446 to the municipal council to pay out of any funds in the municipal treasury not otherwise appropriated 40 pesos monthly toward the support of one young man and one young woman while attending a public provincial or normal school. It is understood by the municipality furnishing the support authorized by this act that on returning from the normal school the persons in whose behalf these contributions from the municipal treasury have been made should become teachers in their several municipalities whenever their services might be required. In order to secure the attendance from these small towns of persons properly equipped to carry on the work of the normal school and to give promise of being effective teachers, it was provided that the appointment should be in the hands of the municipal councils, but that the principal of the provincial or the normal school should examine these persons at the end of their first month of attendance. passed this examination satisfactorily, they might be retained as students, receiving the assistance provided from the municipal treasury, but if they failed to pass creditably this examination they should be sent back to their pueblo, and other more promising persons be appointed in their stead. Before the passage of this act information had been received from various small towns stating their desire to have the opportunity thus presented for providing themselves with properly instructed teachers. This act was passed so recently that as yet no information is at hand concerning action taken under it,

SENDING FILIPINO STUDENTS TO AMERICA.

The great need of properly trained Filipino teachers has made of paramount importance the problem of securing them. indicated, the normal school of Manila, with the branch organized for instructing the Filipino teachers of the city, the provincial schools, and normal institutes in the several divisions are at present devoted to the preparation of Filipinos for work in the public schools. In addition to this it would be well for the government to undertake to send to America and maintain in certain normal schools there a considerable number of Filipinos who give evidence of good ability and the other qualifications requisite for a teacher. The academic subjects in which they might receive instruction in America can very well be taught them in the Philippines, but, in addition to this formal instruction, it is impossible to provide here a substitute for the object lessons in American civilization which they will receive in spending three or four years in different parts of the United States. The most valuable lessons of civilization can not be taught by precept, but only by exam-There will be no difficulty in obtaining free tuition in the schools of the required standing, so that the expense to be borne by the government would be confined to the transportation and maintenance of the students for the time being. The services which these young persons would render on their return furnish ample justification for the expenditure on the part of the insular government.

LANGUAGE OF THE SCHOOLS.

Fuller knowledge of the condition of the Filipinos with respect to language seems to justify the decision formed in the beginning to make English the language of the schools. The great majority of the Filipinos are ignorant of Spanish. This is particularly true of the children. Those who profess to be able to use this language have but an imperfect command of it. The native languages are numerous and so unlike that no one of them can be employed as the common medium of communi-There are no books in any one of them that could be advantageously used in a system of public instruction. The few newspapers that are printed in the native languages do not furnish all the intellectual guidance or stimulus needed by the inhabitants of the islands in their aspirations to be counted among civilized peoples. Of such papers there are only two in Tagalog and two in Visayan, but none in any of the other six dialects of the civilized tribes. Elementary books might have been prepared and printed in the various dialects and made the basis of primary instruction. Pupils having passed over this stage of their cultivation by this means would have found only a barren waste before them. There is no great advantage in learning to read in a language which offers nothing worth reading to those who have acquired the art. Children educated in the common schools with only such means as may be provided in Tagalog or Bicol have still practically no access to sources of information regarding the world. The limits of the province remain their horizon. They are shut out from the advantages enjoyed by their more fortunate fellow-countrymen who have had the means to enable them to acquire a language through which may be derived a knowledge of civilized society. The boy who grows to manhood knowing only a language without a literature finds that as the result of his training in school he has not the means for increasing his knowledge, and he very readily falls back into the mental darkness of the semisavage state. The boy who in his school days has learned the language of a civilized nation, even if he has learned nothing else, has put himself en rapport with civilization. Aside from the practical circumstances of his life, it makes little difference whether he learns English, French, German, or Spanish, but it makes a great deal of difference whether he learns French or Tagalog, English or Bicol. makes him a citizen of the world, the other makes him a citizen of a province in the Philippine Islands. If the government were to make the local dialects the media of school instruction, a limited number of the more or less wealthy and influential persons would use the facilities which they can command to learn English for the sake of the additional power or other advantages it would give them in the communities to which they belong, and these advantages or this additional power would tend to perpetuate the prestige and domination of the present oligarchic element in Filipino society. The knowledge of English which the public schools offer to the youth of the islands will contribute materially to the emancipation of the dependent classes and to the development of that personal independence which is at present almost entirely wanting in the great mass of the people, but which is necessary to the maintenance of a liberal government. It may, perhaps, be difficult to change the fundamental ideas of a race, but it is not very difficult, under proper circumstances rendered permanent for a considerable period, for children of one nation in the process of growth to manhood to acquire a complete practical knowledge of the language of a foreign race. The use of a vernacular dialect in the intimate relations of life and of a literary language in the commercial and public affairs is not uncommon. Practically all Filipinos who use the Spanish language in their more important concerns make at the same time more or less use of one or another of the local dialects; yet under Spanish rule no persistent effort was made to give the great body of the people opportunities for learning Spanish, and in many instances not only was no encouragement offered to the acquisition of a knowledge of this language, but positive hindrances were put in the way of acquiring it. The effort of the Americans to give to the Filipinos a knowledge of English is in marked contrast to the policy carried out by some of the European nations in their oriental possessions. This effort has been met by considerable enthusiasm on the part of the people and, considering the brief period during which schools have been maintained, has produced noteworthy results. The pupils in all the schools where American teachers have been stationed are able to receive instruction in English, and in the larger towns most of the Filipino teachers have acquired sufficient knowledge of English to enable them to use it successfully in their teaching. The 150 Filipino teachers of Manila, as students in the recently established branch of the Manila normal school, and the students of the normal school itself use only English in their recitations and reports.

INDUSTRIAL EDUCATION.

The progress of industrial education has met, and will probably continue to meet, with certain obstacles in the Philippines. The people have been accustomed under their earlier instruction to regard education as a means of putting themselves in positions where manual labor is not required. Hitherto the Filipino youth has looked upon the instruction of the schools as a means of preparing him to become a teacher, a civil officer, a clerk, a lawyer, a physician, or a priest. phase of education through which the young man expects to become a skillful workman has lain almost entirely below his horizon. This is not so much a fault of his race as it is a fault of the nation under which he had been a subject for three centuries. Spain has impressed upon the Filipinos her lack of appreciation of honest work and that higher form of skill which comes from systematic education. ever progress, therefore, is made in industrial education must be made in opposition to a strong prejudice; but this prejudice is not thought of as invincible. In fact, the character of the people, the conditions of their life, and the state of their cultivation make it comparatively easy for them to forget. Standing on a stage of civilization distinctly lower than that of the civilized peoples of the West, they are likely in the course of a short time to imitate the members of that nation with whom they are brought into closest relations, particularly when that nation removes all obstacles to their accepting new customs and habits. the course of time, when they learn more about America and come to understand the marvelous progress which has there been made, and that the wealth of the production of that country rests largely on the fact that America is a nation of workers, it is expected that their ancient prejudices will fall away and that they will be inclined to accept, with certain modifications, American ideas with respect to industrial affairs. They are likely to be encouraged in this view by the introduction of machinery and various appliances by which the ratio of human labor to product is diminished. At present they are almost entirely without tools in any way suitable to the cultivation of the soil, and the only carpenters' tools with which they are familiar are those used by the Chinaman and which were antiquated centuries In the public printing office, with its fine modern machinery, they are gradually adapting themselves to the new condition. view of the fact that Americans who receive larger salaries than they ever hoped to receive are not ashamed to work, their ancient aversion to labor is beginning to appear somewhat absurd. One of the delicate tasks of the industrial schools is to break down this ancient prejudice, and on their success in this undertaking depends the possibility of introducing and carrying to successful results the system of industrial education. Hitherto comparatively little has been accomplished. This is due in part to the lack of appliances and in part perhaps to the difficulty of acquiring a knowledge of the Filipino's attitude toward this work and of hitting upon the proper means of overcoming his prejudices. At the same time numerous requests have been received from the provinces asking that facilities be furnished for industrial instruction in some of the simpler forms of work; and to furnish a legal basis for such instruction it has been especially provided in the provincial schools of secondary instruction that the curriculum should embrace manual training. Under this provision steps have already been taken in many of the provinces to provide an industrial department in the provincial school. This, together with the instruction in agriculture provided for by the same law, will enable the provinces to cover the whole range of practical teaching. As there are already between twenty-five and thirty provincial schools established, it may be clearly seen that provision has already been made for a very wide extension of industrial training, and when each province shall have organized its provincial school the industrial feature of secondary instruction will be as widespread as any other phase of education.

EDUCATION OF THE IGORROTES.

The presence of a large number of Igorrotes among the interior mountains of northern Luzon makes it impossible for the government to ignore the problem of their education. They do not appear to wish either our religion or our clothes; yet from this we may not safely infer that we are able to give them nothing for their advantage which they may be willing to accept. In their present condition they have many admirable qualities. By their physical development and marvelous powers of endurance they put to shame the thin, weak, and indolent dwellers of the lowlands. They are able to work, and when put to a task perform it with energy without the constant prodding of They are much more honest than many wno have had the advantages of civilization. It is not, however, to be supposed that by a single step they can be advanced to the status of civilization. The only education required by them at the hands of the government is that which will enable them to make the most of the circumstances in which they live, and in which, without material change, they are destined to remain for an indefinite period. It has been thought unwise, except in cases where individual Igorrotes are removed to and live in civilized communities, to give them any other teaching than that which will fit them to perform more efficiently the labor necessary in their rude state. They need to be taught to be better masons, better carpenters, better gardeners and farmers, and more skillful makers of the various articles that are used by them. They need, moreover, sufficient knowledge of a cultivated language to enable them to deal advantageously with the civilized inhabitants by whom they are sur-This ideal is not very high, but it is the highest the Igorrotes as a people can at present attain. Undoubtedly individual Igorrotes, separated from their ancient surroundings, might acquire much knowledge and adopt the customs of civilized men; but as a people, scattered among the mountains, living in very small isolated hamlets, they can make use of only a very gradual way upward. For reasons here involved the education that is being prepared for the Igorrote is a simple form of industrial training, in acquiring which he will not be obliged to depart very widely from his habitual course of life. Care should continue to be taken, however, to impress upon him the fact that the horrible filth in which he lives at present is neither necessary Schools to furnish training in accordance with the plan here indicated have been established in Lepanto-Bontoc and in Benguet, where they are placed under the general direction of the provincial governors, who are required by law to act as division superintendents for their provinces.

THE NEGRITOS.

Hitherto no attempts have been made to reach, by any educational process, the feeble and declining tribes of Negritos, who lead the wandering life of wild men in the mountains of some of the provinces. They are comparatively few in number and are very near the bottom of the social scale. They are apparently a hopeless fragment of humanity, not sufficiently advanced to establish and maintain for themselves permanent abiding places, and are therefore ignored in the system of education which embraces the other people of the islands.

EDUCATION OF THE MOROS.

The Moros, on the other hand, can not be wisely left out of consideration. Like the Igorrotes they manifest little or no desire to place themselves under the civilizing influences which the government may exert. Their religion appears to satisfy their present needs, and they show no inclination either to accept or tolerate any other. Occupying some of the richest lands of the archipelago, they appear to have abundant food, and whatever excitement is needed to contribute to their happiness they find in the intertribal conflicts which mark their history. For generations they have been as they are, and they see no reason why they should be plunged into that uncomfortable stream which we call progress. The knowledge of the wisdom and traditions of their ancestors apparently satisfies them. Instruction among them, to be successful, must start from their point of view, and the instructor has to exercise great care not to do violence to their traditional ideas. In accordance with this view, teaching among the Moros on a limited scale has been undertaken in two schools, one in Zamboanga and another in the island of Joló, but at present the Moros are not manifesting any considerable eagerness to be taught by Americans. many other people in the rudimentary stage of social development, they entertain an exaggerated idea of the importance of their power and popular wisdom. As long as they remain in the delusion that they are invincible, it will not be possible by any system of instruction to break the authority of their inherited views. No change is likely to be made in these views except as a consequence of recognizing the physical superiority of some other people. The education of the Moro must, therefore, follow his awakening to an appreciation of his feebleness as contrasted with the powers of a civilized nation.

LOCAL SELF-HELP IN EDUCATIONAL AFFAIRS.

It is possible that if no other consideration has been taken account of in the development of the schools and the construction of school buildings, much more might have been accomplished if the funds and forces at the disposal of the insular government had been used more freely. By reason of many generations of subjection to a strongly centralized administration, the Filipinos have failed to develop the spirit of local self-help and the sense of local responsibility in the municipalities and provinces, and in view of the fact that the government here established provides for a certain degree of self-government in the municipalities and provinces, it was recognized that it would be desirable to stimulate the sense of municipal and provincial responsibility as far as this could be done without sacrificing the present too much to the future. It was manifest that the people were especially interested in education and were willing, in many cases, to make extraordinary efforts to secure proper schools. By allowing them to understand that American teachers would be furnished wherever suitable accommodations for schools were provided, the spirit of local pride was in a measure aroused, and in many cases the municipalities have made noteworthy efforts either to build suitable schoolhouses or to repair those which had suffered some years of neglect. Evidence of the beginning of a healthy activity in this respect comes from various quarters. The Commission, in act No. 74, indicated that $400,000 might be spent in building and equipping schoolhouses, but only a very small part of this has been actually used, and in view of the improvement in the finances of the provinces it is not probable that large sums will be required by them from the insular government.

Another step tending toward the ultimate development of local initiative in school affairs was taken in the provision for the organization of local school boards. In many places these boards were not organized until very recently, when the division superintendents and the teachers had become acquainted with the people of the various towns and were able on personal knowledge to make a proper selection of persons to serve on these boards. In practice the American teachers, after due observation, make recommendations of persons who by their ability, interest in school matters, and influence in the town seem to be suitable persons to be consulted in connection with the conduct of schools. These recommendations are made to the division superintendent, who appoints one-half of the members of the board. Hitherto these boards have exerted but little influence in the conduct of the schools. This is what might be expected on account of their want of previous experience in educational affairs, but by being associated with the teachers and the division superintendents they are gradually acquiring familiarity with the plans and purposes of the Americans in the establishment and conduct of the public school system. One obstacle which prevents the local school board from exercising any considerable authority or influence in school matters is the very great power which by custom resides in the president of the municipality. The people of the town are practically dominated by him, and as long as custom maintains his influence the school board will be able to exercise very little authority, but the fact that in the school board another power has been created indicates the possibility of its becoming more important and thus curtailing somewhat the absolutism of the municipal president. It is possible, and indeed probable, that this policy of placing the municipalities in a position where their desire for the service of trained teachers has induced them to pursue a plan of self-help has at the same time left a certain number of very poor towns without the assistance that might justly have been given them. In the great majority of cases, however, this policy has had beneficent results, and in carrying it out that phase of social growth has been stimulated which is vital under the system of government that has been adopted. The old régime led all the communities to look to the central government for its countenance and support. Necessary to the success of the new régime is the spirit of local initiative and local independence in economical affairs. policy for the future involves the difficult problem of determining how much assistance may be warranted by the condition of the insular treasury and how much may be afforded by it without stunting the zeal and pride and ambition of the local communities to be self-supporting and independent bases for the upholding of the social and political system.

INSTRUCTION IN AGRICULTURE.

The organization of the school of agriculture provided for by act No. 74 has been delayed with a view, if possible, to bringing it into connection with the proposed experimental sugar plantation in the island of Negros. While this project was under consideration and investigations were in progress to determine the proper plans for such a plantation it was impossible to fix definitely the site of the proposed Finally, in view of the large amount of work devolving upon the general superintendent of education, and in view of the fact that the bureau of agriculture would have constantly in its service a number of experts who might be used for some part of the year as instructors in the school and at other times carry on their various investigations, it was determined that the school of agriculture proposed for the island of Negros should be placed under the bureau of agriculture, and the government farm at La Granja was selected as its site. thus the school of agriculture is placed under the jurisdiction of the bureau of agriculture, arrangements have been made by which certain teachers in the provinces will be employed to cooperate with the bureau of agriculture in making various experiments and in gathering such information as may be useful in promoting knowledge of the agricultural conditions of the islands. At the same time the law establishing secondary instruction in provincial schools provides for the extension of the curriculum beyond the ordinary course of high school instruction and makes it embrace not only commercial subjects and manual training, but also normal school instruction and instruction in agriculture, which means that the provincial schools may on a larger or smaller scale, as the authorities of the province may determine, carry on instruction and experiments in such branches of agriculture as may be supposed to be adapted to the conditions in the province in which any provincial school is established.

COMPULSORY SCHOOL ATTENDANCE.

Hitherto it has not been thought advisable to carry out any general system of compulsory attendance on the public school. At the outset of its deliberations on the subject of free public education the Commission took up and carefully considered the question of the desirability of adopting a general law compelling the attendance of children between certain ages either at public schools or at private schools of recognized standing. For lack of schoolhouses and teachers it was impossible to accommodate all the children of school age, either in Manila or in the provincial towns. If, therefore, a compulsory school law had been passed, it would have been impossible to carry it out. In many of the municipalities the municipal officers would have been likely to interpret it as meaning compulsory attendance at a public school, and might therefore have interfered with the freedom of teaching which has been approved, provided that teaching fulfills the condition of a certain standard. Moreover, on account of the poverty and the unsettled condition of the population, a compulsory school aw would have imposed a real hardship on many parents and placed an embarrassing obligation on the officers of the government. Such an order issued by the insular government might very well have removed from the local authorities the opportunity to consider this subject independently. Under existing conditions the question of attendance at the schools has been brought to the attention of many of the municipalities and they have had an opportunity to exert their local influence in the matter, thus stimulating their sense of local responsibility. This opportunity of the people of the town to act on a project in which they are vitally interested has furnished another occasion in which to develop the spirit of self-help, and this although the towns have not the legal authority to pass ordinances making education compulsory. However, the town has been, in some measure, able to reach and affect this question by the development of a local public opinion in favor of public education. In the course of time it will probably be found desirable, when schoolhouses shall have been constructed and a sufficient number of teachers trained, to pass a general law affecting this question, either making attendance at schools of a certain standard generally compulsory throughout the archipelago or authorizing the provinces or the municipalities to legislate on the subject.

NIGHT SCHOOLS.

The night schools were originally organized in Manila in September, 1900, for the instruction of persons who had passed beyond the age when they could be expected to attend the primary schools. These were chiefly young men who wished to learn English that they might use it in their business or in clerkships. Filipino teachers also attended these schools to prepare themselves for the contemplated change from Spanish to English as the language of instruction. When the pupils had acquired a sufficient knowledge of English to enable them to use it with some degree of facility in their studies the curriculum of the night school was made to embrace certain subjects that had a practical value for those in attendance. Some of the schools introduced bookkeeping, stenography, typewriting, and telegraphy, and more of them history, arithmetic, and geography. They have been attended by young men wishing to enter the civil service in order to acquire the necessary knowledge of English, and by persons already in the service to fit themselves for promotion to the higher grades.

The immediate and striking success of the night schools in Manila seemed to warrant their introduction into the towns in the provinces. In a large number of places therefore where American teachers were stationed night schools were established and taught by one or more of the day-school teachers. These schools were attended by members of all classes, including the municipal officers and sometimes the governors of provinces, as well as by young men and young women living in the town. They have exercised no little influence in giving the more influential classes ideas respecting the methods and purposes of American education. There have been employed in the Manila night schools many persons not otherwise engaged as teachers, such as persons with the requisite attainments regularly engaged in the civil service, while in the provinces the night schools have been almost exclusively taught by American teachers regularly engaged in the day The demand for night schools, both in Manila and in the provinces, has been strong and constant, and the teachers have been willing to teach in them for a compensation of $15 a month for three During the past year nearly 500 teachers have nights in the week. taught in these schools, and nearly 20,000 pupils have been enrolled.

Two thousand and fifty-seven of these have been in attendance in the

To correct what appeared to be an abuse of the system, the Commission provided by law that no night school should be maintained in the city of Manila or elsewhere at the public expense in which the average attendance was not at least 25 pupils over the age of 14 years. This section was introduced into an appropriation bill passed on the 14th of July, 1902. This required average attendance was found, after a brief experience, to be too high, particularly in the provincial towns. Owing to the irregularity of attendance in the schools generally a large and unwieldy number had to be enrolled in order to secure the required average attendance. With this large number it was impossible to do as effective work as had been done in the schools with a limited number of pupils. Prior to the enactment the schools had been organized and carried on chiefly by administrative authority. When therefore the law of October 8, making extensive changes in the organization of the system, was passed, it was determined to give the night schools a proper legal status, and to fix the number of average attendance at what seemed to be generally feasible and not too great to interfere with the desired efficiency of the instruction. The provision of July 14 was therefore repealed and 15 fixed as the required average attendance. By this law the general superintendent of education was given authority to establish night schools, but it was required that no night-school class should be maintained at the expense of the city of Manila or the insular government at which the average nightly attendance in each school month under each teacher should not be at least 15 pupils over the age of 14 years. The salaries of the teachers in the night schools, except in the city of Manila, are paid by the insular government. In Manila the expenses of maintaining the night schools are borne by the city treasury.

NAUTICAL SCHOOL.

The increasing number of pupils in the nautical school and the noteworthy record made by those who completed the course at the end of the last school year seem to justify the plans which have already been formed for the reorganization and enlargement of the institution. These plans involve giving it new and adequate quarters by the sea and providing for it dormitories so that the young men there enrolled may be constantly under the control and discipline of the superintendent of the school. They involve, moreover, erecting suitable buildings on the shore of Mariveles Bay, where advantage can be taken of the excellent water that has been brought from the mountains to the barracks near the town of Mariveles, and where such ships and boats as may be had for the use of the school can lie in perfect safety in all kinds of weather. They also involve giving authority to the several provinces to appoint a certain number of persons to become students in the nautical school, while certain other candidates may be appointed at large by the civil governor. The number to be appointed by each province and by the governor will depend upon the number it is desired to have enrolled and maintained in the school. This organization will entail on the government the expense not only of furnishing instruction, but also of providing quarters and subsistence for the students. Among the advantages, however, of such an organization may be set down the fact that the young men will form a distinct corps under careful instruction and be subject to strict discipline, and be thus prepared for intelligent service in the bureau of coast guard and transportation as well as on ships engaged in the interisland trade. On October 4, 1902, the Commission, on the recommendation of the secretary of public instruction, adopted a resolution appointing Commissioner Moses a committee of one to confer with the commanding general on behalf of the Commission to learn whether it might be possible to secure a proper site for the nautical school at Mariveles within the lines of the military reservation if it should prove that the only land available for such purpose lay within the reservation. Under this resolution a conference between Maj. Gen. George W. Davis, commanding Division of the Philippines, and the secretary of public instruction was had, and steps taken toward selecting a site for the nautical school on the shore of Mariveles Bay. On the 15th of September Admiral Rodgers, in accordance with instructions from the Secretary of the Navy, detailed Lieut. Commander J. H. Glennon to become superintendent of the school in place of Lieut. Commander J. J. Knapp, who was recalled to the United States.

SCHOOL OF TELEGRAPHY.

With the establishment of peace and the withdrawal of the bulk of the soldiers from the islands, the military authorities are ready to transfer the telegraph lines to the civil government. In order to be able to undertake their operation the government has found it necessary to make special preparation for the training of a considerable number of Filipinos to become operators. For the purpose of providing this force a school of telegraphy, as a department of the trade school, was opened in Manila on February 12, 1902. The instruments were provided by the Signal Corps of the Army. The opportunities afforded to young men by this instruction were clearly seen, and a considerable number of pupils were enrolled at once. At present there are 74 in the school. Of this number 15 are already able to act as operators in offices. When brought into the service they will be enrolled in the constabulary, since the bureau of constabulary will have charge of the telegraph and telephone lines in the islands. The need very soon of a larger number of operators than will be provided by the Manila school has led to the establishment of two other schools. one at Vigan and one at Iloilo. The school at Vigan is expected to train Ilocanos who may become operators in northern Luzon, the school at Manila to train especially Tagalogs for service in central Luzon, while the school at lloilo will provide instruction for Visayans who will be able to take charge of the stations in the southern islands of the archipelago.

MUNICIPAL, PROVINCIAL, AND INSULAR SUPPORT OF SCHOOLS.

While the public school system as at present organized provides for primary and secondary instruction and for certain special schools, as yet no important step has been taken to make provision for higher or university education. This form of instruction in a very short time will be imperatively needed, since the students from the provincial schools of secondary instruction will have completed their courses, and many of them will require opportunity for further study and training. While it may be desirable to send considerable numbers to the United States, where, under the actual conditions of life, they may acquire a knowledge of American civilization, yet for the great body of Filipinos there must be provided in these islands all the opportunities for education which they will ever be able to enjoy. A university, therefore, organized to supplement the instruction given in the provincial schools will be demanded by the Filipino youth. They will need to be taught not only in those legal and historical subjects which will tend to enable them to comprehend and aid in the administration of the government under which they live, but also those practical sciences, such as civil and electrical engineering, chemistry and its numerous applications in manufacturing, and the various forms of mechanical work which lie at the basis of the material progress of the country, and such an institution it will be the duty of the government in the very near future to provide.

For further details concerning the public schools during the past year reference is made to the report of the general superintendent, annexed hereto as Exhibit A.

CONSTRUCTION AND REPAIR OF PUBLIC BUILDINGS.

The necessity of repairing many of the public buildings which had been neglected for several years, of enlarging others, and of erecting new ones induced the Commission to send a cablegram, dated May 11, 1901, to the Secretary of War, asking him to appoint a competent architect to become the chief of the bureau of architecture to be created by the Commission. In accordance with this request the Secretary appointed Mr. Edgar K. Bourne, who arrived in Manila October 10, 1901. A few days later, October 18, an act was passed creating a bureau of architecture and construction of public buildings. It was provided that this bureau should have charge of the constructing and repairing of public buildings belonging to the insular government and such other buildings or proposed buildings as might be assigned to it by the civil governor. Mr. Edgar K. Bourne was made the chief of this bureau and charged with the duty of making all necessary plans and specifications for the construction and repair of public buildings. He was also charged with the further duty of providing, in cases where it is required that work shall be done under contract, all means necessary for obtaining bids for the work to be done, and he was authorized to accept bids and award contracts subject to the approval of the civil governor, and to superintend, either in person or through an officer of the bureau appointed for that purpose, all the work of constructing and repairing public buildings authorized by the insular government. The increase in the work required of the architect led to the gradual enlargement of the personnel of his office and the difficulty of finding draftsmen among the Filipinos who were more than excellent copyists led to the necessity of securing American draftsmen by application to the Civil Service Commission in Washington. Immediately after his arrival the architect was requested by the secretary of public instruction to undertake the reconstruction of the building in which it was proposed to install the printing plant. After delays that seem unavoidable in connection with the processes of building in the Philippines, the structure was so far advanced toward completion that the printers were able to occupy some part of it in May of the present year. Standing isolated in a large lot with the amplest opportunity for the free circulation of air around it and through it, it offers as favorable conditions for work as exist in Manila.

The two most important buildings at present under construction are the addition to the custom-house and the building for the government The increase in the shipping of the port of Manila has made necessary a further enlargement of the facilities for receiving and storing goods. By extending the present building some distance down the river the available frontage for receiving goods from the cascoes and lighters will be increased from 250 to 406 feet, and the crowding and delays which have hitherto been an annoyance both to the merchants and the officers of the customs service will be set aside. The building for the government laboratories is in process of construction on the southeast corner of the exposition grounds. This large tract, extending from Calle Faura to Calle Herran, if existing plans are carried out, will become the center of a number of special schools and laboratories, including the normal school, trade school, and ultimately a university. By ranging the necessary buildings for the several schools, laboratories, and libraries around a great court extending from Calle Faura to Calle Herran, not only the maximum conven-

In the immediate future, in carrying out the plans for the nautical school, it will become necessary to construct buildings suitable for class exercises, for dormitories, and for other purposes incidental to ience will be attained, but also the minimum cost of furnishing water, the maintenance of this school.

Whenever the government of the Philippine Islands shall be empowered to meet the imperative necessity of a stable coinage by coining the proposed Filipino peso and the requisite subsidiary coins, it will be necessary either to remodel the existing mint building or to provide an entirely new structure. The existing building stands in the Walled City, which for many years to come will be a less desirable place for either residence or for carrying on any kind of work than the more open parts of the city outside of the walls.

But for some time to come the construction of schoolhouses, both in Manila and in the provinces, will be the most important work in the line of public buildings. This work, however, devolves largely on the municipal or the provincial authorities. The chief of the bureau of architecture and construction of public buildings may be required, however, to furnish plans for schoolhouses to be constructed by either the provinces or the municipalities. These structures will be necessarily simple and will be designed to meet two essential con-They will be constructed to keep out the rain and to let in as much fresh air as possible. The problem of heating may be ignored, so that there will be no chimneys to construct, and consequently the danger to the crowds of children assembled from fire will be reduced to the minimum. A provision of the law bearing on this subject is that the general superintendent of education shall approve plans made by the chief of the bureau of architecture for the construction of schoolhouses to be built by the municipalities or provinces.

Under the old régime, when the church and state were closely allied, some of the functions of the government were performed by the ecclesiastical authorities, and thus certain buildings now belonging to the church were in a measure used for the purposes of government. Complete separation of church and state has led to a larger demand than formerly existed for buildings for purely secular use, and for this and other reasons the buildings at the disposal of the government are inadequate to its needs. This has led to the necessity of renting buildings for certain bureaus and for the municipal government, but this arrangement is only temporary, and it will be advisable in the course of time to withdraw from the use of these rented buildings and construct buildings better adapted to the purposes for which they are used.

After having made careful observations extending over more than a year concerning the meteorological conditions of the province of Benguet, the Commission finally determined to take steps to provide accommodations for persons in the civil service who might find it necessary to resort to a cooler climate for the recuperation of their health. Having become fully persuaded of the desirability of constructing a sanitarium at Baguio, in this province, the Commission authorized the building of 6 cottages to be used in connection with the convalescent hospital. This was an undertaking of considerable difficulty. In the first place there was no lumber in the province but extensive forests In the second place, the only means of access to Baguio was over a rough trail of about 30 miles in extent beyond Naguilian, the limit of the wagon road. Whatever tools, building material, food, and laborers it was necessary to have in Baguio for this undertaking had to be taken over this mountain trail. All lumber needed in the construction of the buildings proposed had to be sawed by hand from the forest trees in the neighborhood. After considerable expense and much delay a party of 30 Chinese skilled workmen were taken to Baguio, and the work of felling trees and sawing lumber was begun. At the same time a number of Igorrote laborers were engaged to construct roads on the grounds set apart for the sanitarium. Some part of the expense and delay was due to the fact that the undertaking was made in the cholera season, when the movement of laborers and material was subject to the serious restriction of the quarantine. These operations have resulted in the completion of the main sanitarium building, which will accommodate about 60 persons, while a number of cottages, each containing from 3 to 6 rooms, are in process of construction. An incidental result of this undertaking has been to give the rude people of the province object lessons in better methods of building and in training a number of Ilocanos to become more skillful carpenters. From the Igorrotes it was impossible to obtain skilled For the work of road building they were, however, found to be very efficient. Their experience in building narrow trails over the mountains has been in some measure a preparation for the work here required of them.

In the absence of the civil governor the work of repairing the Malacanan Palace was undertaken. This house had suffered very seriously from neglect. Under some portions the foundation had sunk and all portions were seriously in need of repair in order to make it a comfortable dwelling and at the same time to protect the interior from the driving storms. A few thousand dollars were appropriated for this purpose, and when the process of repairing began it was necessary to limit the work simply to the most necessary changes or improvements. After some months of more or less satisfactory work the undertaking was concluded, with the expectation that the repairs that had been made would permit the building to be used comfortably for still a few years. This building stands on the right bank of the Pasig, in the middle of an extensive lot. For lots similarly situated there is at present a strong demand. Its long river frontage, not far from the center of the city, makes it very valuable as a site for warehouses. It might, therefore, be sold with very great advantage, and with the price obtained it would be possible to purchase suitable grounds and construct a house much better adapted than this to the needs of the civil governor.

Many other repairs and new interior constructions have been under-The semaphore station, used by the bureau of coast guard and transportation for observing incoming vessels and the display of weather and other signals for the benefit of the shipping in the bay, has been almost entirely rebuilt above the foundations. A portion of the treasury or intendencia building has been set apart as a cash room and interior furnishings have been introduced, fitting it for the purpose for which it is designed. The walls about Bilibid prison have been strengthened, the top of the city walls over certain casements have been repaired, extensive improvements and additions have been made to the buildings that have been rented for the civil hospital, new private offices and waiting rooms for the collector of customs and other improvements in connection with the custom-house have been completed, the buildings on the exposition grounds remaining from the exhibition held shortly before the American occupation have been elaborately repaired for the use of the normal and trade schools, and many other additions and repairs demanded by the extension of the government offices have been made.

For details of the work completed and the work now in progress by the bureau of architecture and construction of public buildings, refer-

TRAINING OF WORKMEN.

It is desirable that the bureau of architecture and construction of public buildings, like every other bureau in which skilled labor is involved, should be in some sense a school for the Filipinos. bureau, having a certain number of men in various departments of special skill, aims to introduce as assistants or apprentices a number of Filipinos who may be instructed in the use of American tools, and may thus be helped to acquire a degree of proficiency in work which will ultimately justify payment to them of higher wages. If we may judge from the quality of work involved in the making of certain pieces of furniture that have been manufactured in the country, there seems to be good reason for supposing that the Filipino may become, under proper instruction, capable of doing excellent work. The Chinaman has his method of doing things and proposes under all conditions to abide by it. He has little ambition or willingness to adopt a new The Filipino workman, on the other hand, appears to be more ready to accept suggestions and to adapt his efforts to new con-The embarrassing feature of the situation is that the number of Filipino carpenters is extremely limited and there is no prospect that the number will be increased with sufficient rapidity to meet the increasing demand. Apparently, therefore, the main reliance of builders for some years to come must be on Chinese workmen, and since further immigration is prohibited those in the islands will become more and more inadequate to the performance of the work required, and their exorbitant demands will make the business of building more difficult and less profitable.

PUBLIC PRINTING.

The fact that the facilities in Manila were inadequate to the work required by the government led the Commission to establish a government printing office. After some correspondence with the Secretary of War, Mr. John S. Leech was appointed public printer on the recommendation of Hon. Frank W. Palmer, Public Printer of the United States Government. Under instructions furnished by the chief of the bureau of insular affairs the machinery and supplies required were purchased and shipped to Manila. The Commission had expressed the wish that a complete printing plant should be purchased, including appliances for stereotyping, electrotyping, and photo-engraving. Schedules of the material required were made in Washington, and bids for furnishing this material were invited. The plant having been purchased, Mr. Edwin C. Jones and Mr. James A. Hogsette were ordered to proceed to Manila to assist in installing the machinery and making provision for the proper storing and caring for the supplies. They arrived in Manila on October 15, 1901. They brought definite information as to the size of the building required for the use of the printing office. Already it had been decided to reconstruct the building formerly occupied by a trade school, and on October 17, 1901, a resolution was adopted by the Commission providing "that the secretary of public instruction be, and he is hereby, authorized to install the government printing plant in the building near the first reserve hospital, used as a trade school under the Spanish administration, and to use such part of said building for a trade school as may not be required for the purposes of the printing office, and to cause to be made all necessary repairs and changes in the present structure." After careful examination it was found to be desirable to add a second story to the building, and on October 29 the Commission passed an act appropriating $50,000, in money of the United States, for making repairs and additions to the building to be occupied by the public printing office, for grading and laying out the grounds about the building, and repairing the fence surrounding these grounds. This sum was found to be inadequate, and subsequent appropriations were made, making the total cost of the building and improvement of the grounds, up to September 1 of this year, $89,121.68, in money of the United States. Owing to the difficulties encountered by the contractor in securing the requisite number of skilled laborers, there were unexpected delays in completing the structure. In the meantime, by resolution adopted October 31, 1901, the public printer was authorized to employ such carpenters and masons and other laborers as might be necessary to put in order the public printing building and to install therein the machinery and other appliances belonging to the public printing plant. On November 7, 1901, a law was enacted by the Commission creating the bureau of public printing and providing for the organization of this bureau and defining the duties of the chief of the bureau and his subordinates.

The public printing office as established has its own power plant, with boilers adapted to the use of either coal or crude oil as fuel; it has its own machine shop and gas plant, and each machine is run by an independent motor. Considering the difficulty of obtaining an adequate number of skilled workmen, the bureau of public printing has already made a satisfactory record.

In order to provide opportunities for young Filipinos to learn the printer's trade, it was determined instead of establishing a class for the instruction of printing in connection with the trade school to introduce a number of boys as apprentices in the public printing office. With this end in view the secretary of public instruction addressed a letter to the several division superintendents of schools throughout the archipelago, asking them to recommend a certain number of boys for apprentices to the bureau of public printing, stating that it would be made the duty of certain employees of that bureau to give them instruction in the art of printing. Several have been recommended and appointed, and are now actively engaged in the different divisions of the bureau of public printing. In this case, as in many other cases where instruction in trades has been offered, a considerable prejudice is found to exist on the part of parents against encouraging their children to learn a trade that involves manual labor. This arises very largely from ignorance as to the economic advantages of skill in the higher trades, and is strengthened by the preference which seems to exist in all countries some time under Spanish rule in favor of clerkships under the government. It is expected that a new and more healthy view in this matter will appear with the passing of the traditions and prejudices of the old régime.

The number of employees in the bureau of public printing on the 15th of October of the present year was 164. Of these, 60 were Americans and 104 Filipinos and Chinese. As a people the Filipinos are physically weak, but here we have a kind of employment making no great demands on their strength, but requiring simply care, good taste, and persistence. The character of the work done by many of the Filipinos is satisfactory, and it is believed that with opportunities and training in connection with the excellent mechanical appliances of the public printing office they will show themselves efficient workmen.

Bills contracted prior to June 30, 1902, on account of the bureau of public printing, were as follows: For equipment, $124,182.75; for supplies, other than printing paper, $24,325.61; for paper, $45,360.92; for transportation and other charges, $7,441.51; sundries, $10,137.11, making a total for equipment, material, supplies, transportation, and other charges to June 30, 1902, of $211,447.90. Of this sum bills to the amount of $4,432.56 remained unpaid on that date, making the total disbursements prior to June 30, 1902, $207,015.34. Disbursements for salaries and wages for the second, third, and fourth quarters of the fiscal year 1902 amounted to $34,489.37, making the total disbursements by the bureau of public printing to June 30, 1902, $241,504.71. The details of these and other expenditures are set down in Exhibit C.

ARCHIVES.

The work of the bureau of archives during the past year has been directed to two principal undertakings. The first task has been to bring into more complete order the vast mass of papers that have been gathered from the various administrative offices and placed in charge of the chief of the bureau. This work is still far from completion, and before it can properly be accomplished more adequate quarters must be provided for the archives. The papers are at present kept in the first story of the treasury or intendencia building, where their deterioration from moisture is much more rapid than it would be in the drier apartments of the second story. In the course of time, however, all available space in this building will be needed for the offices of the treasurer and auditor, and for this reason it is desirable that arrangements should be made as early as may be to provide for the archives proper rooms elsewhere.

The second task has been to furnish from the archives such documents and copies of documents as have been required by the officers of the government and other persons for their information or to settle questions in dispute concerning titles to property and other matters.

In view of the half-decayed condition of some of the older documents it is desirable that steps should be taken to make a selection of the most important of these ancient papers and have them carefully copied and printed, a translation in English being given with the original. The demand on the part of libraries in the United States and elsewhere for reliable information concerning the early and at present obscure history of the Philippines would contribute somewhat toward the expense of such publication. For further information concerning the archives reference is made to Exhibit D.

THE AMERICAN CIRCULATING LIBRARY.

Moved by patriotic zeal many persons in the United States made contributions of books and money for the establishment of a library which was originally designed as a memorial to those officers and men of the military and naval forces of the United States who have lost their lives in the service of their country in the Philippines. This library was originally under the independent control of the American Circulating Library Association of Manila, and in the spring of 1901 it consisted of about 10,000 volumes. The object of the association was to create a source of instruction and profitable entertainment for all residents of Manila, whether permanent or transient, or of whatever race or nationality, and to disseminate useful knowledge and literary diversion among those officers and men of the military or naval forces who are stationed throughout the archipelago. In enlarging the library a plan was formed, which to a certain extent has been carried out, to establish sections which shall continue to be special memorials to conspicuous men who have fallen in the Philippines.

In 1901 the board of trustees and the executive board of the association proposed to convey the library to the military government and any succeeding government in the Philippine Islands in trust for the free use of the United States soldiers and sailors stationed in the Philippine Islands and all the residents of the city of Manila. This trust was to be administered under the legislative control of the military government or its successor, the civil government of the Philippine Islands, which should make suitable arrangements for the proper care and circulation of the books in accordance with the purposes of the original gifts. It was provided, moreover, that the memorial feature should be perpetuated and that the magazines and such books as could be spared should be sent to the outlying districts

The offer of the association was accepted, and by a law enacted March 5, 1901, it was provided that the military governor should appoint a board of trustees, to consist of five members resident or stationed in the Philippine Islands, two of whom should be members of the Army or Navy of the United States and two of whom should be natives of the islands. Under this law the trustees were charged with the care and custody of the books and other property of the American Circulating Library Association of Manila, with the duty of providing the necessary rooms or buildings, of appointing the necessary librarians, janitors, and other employees, and of making rules for the circulation of the books in accordance with the terms and conditions of the trust.

This library has been open to the public since March 9, 1900. During this period the library has continually increased and at the beginning of October, 1902, it contained 13,000 volumes, almost entirely gifts from America. The later additions have been of excellent quality and seem to indicate that although the bulk of the army is withdrawn from the islands, the library, which had its main original purpose in furnishing a source of knowledge and profitable entertainment for the soldiers, should remain an established institution and become an important public library for residents of Manila. Notwithstanding the withdrawal of the army the number of books taken out during the last months has shown a marked increase. One thousand four hundred and ninety-seven were taken out in July, 1,525 in August, and 1,656 in September. Recognizing the need of more central and better quarters for the library, the authorities have in contemplation providing a suitable building with free and airy reading rooms, in which it is expected the library will come to perform the real functions of a public library; and there are indications that the friends of the institution who gave their time and their energy to its foundation and early support will continue to give their assistance to the work of collecting books with which to insure its continuous growth.

THE MUSEUM.

Recognizing the advisability of beginning early to make collections illustrating the ethnology, natural history, and commerce of the Philippines, the Commission passed an act October 29, 1901, establishing in Manila an insular museum of ethnology, natural history, and commerce, and appropriated $8,000 in money of the United States for maintaining the same and paying the expenses of collecting, caring for, and preserving the objects illustrating the ethnology of the Philippine Islands. The museum thus established was placed temporarily under the immediate direction of the chief of the bureau of non-Christian tribes, and he was authorized to expend, from time to time, such sums out of this appropriation as he might find necessary for the collection of the objects authorized by this act to be purchased. Under this act a large amount of material illustrating the ethnology of the islands has been collected, and is now preserved in the building at No. 228 Calle Nueva, now used as a museum. A proper structure to be used as a museum and public library is very much needed at the present time.

One of the divisions of the museum is devoted to ethnology. In a pamphlet issued by the bureau of non-Christian tribes, giving directions to volunteer field workers, some space was devoted to the museum, asking the cooperation of teachers, provincial officers, officers of the army, and Americans and Filipinos generally in the work of making representative collections of specimens illustrating the industries, customs, and mode of life of the many tribes living in these islands. In view of the fact that many of the best of such specimens were rapidly disappearing, a special plea was made that such objects as had already been collected might be placed in a public museum rather than be held in private collections. Much correspondence has resulted, some specimens have been secured by purchase and as gifts to the museum, and various small sums of money have been placed, largely with teachers, for the further collection of specimens.

It was soon apparent, however, that the best way to make collections was to send into the field for that purpose representatives of the museum who would be careful to gather all the necessary information relative to the objects collected. All expeditions made by the bureau of non-Christian tribes serve also as collecting trips for the museum of ethnology. A limited amount of exceptionally good material has already been secured. The first collecting was done in December, 1901, among the Moros of Sulu and Mindanao, by Dr. P. L. Sherman. who secured nearly 300 specimens of the implements of industry, arms. dress, and other manufactured products of the Moros. In the same month Maj. W. H. C. Bowen, then governor of Abra Province, in an expedition through the south and east of that province, gathered about 100 specimens of Tinguiane art and manufacture. Expeditions conducted by the bureau of non-Christian tribes through Benguet, Lepanto-Bontoc, Nueva Vizcaya, and the Cagayan Valley, begun in June and not yet ended, promise rich results in the matter of ethnological collections among the Igorrotes and other tribes of those regions.

Among the gifts to the museum may be mentioned specimens of Igorrote shields and wood fiber blankets by Mr. R. H. Morley. Though properly belonging to the field of natural history, here, too, may be mentioned a collection of birds' eggs presented to the museum

by Judge Ignacio Villamor.

It is the aim of the museum of ethnology to obtain specimens of every article made or used by every tribe in the archipelago. A definite plan will be followed in the display of these objects similar to that adopted by the United States National Museum, using the family as a unit. This is a work that will require many years for its accomplishment. Many things possessing an ethnologic interest are doomed to disappear with the progress of civilization, but before they disappear special effort will be made to secure specimens to be preserved in the museum.

Another division of the museum is devoted to natural history. Work in this branch began November 25, 1901, with the appointment of a collector of natural history specimens and a native assistant. Thus far the specimens collected have been chiefly birds and mammals. The collectors accompanied the secretary of the interior and the commissioner of public health on a trip made in December, 1901, for the purpose of selecting a site for a leper colony, and made collections on the islands of Mindoro, Cagayan de Jolo, Palawan, Cuyo, and Culion during brief visits made to the several islands mentioned. During this hasty trip 187 bird skins were secured, including two specimens of an undescribed Chibia from Cuyo. Two specimens of an undescribed squirrel shrew were also obtained in Cuyo.

During February and March five weeks were spent by the collectors in work at the base and upon the steep sides of Mount Mariveles. in the province of Bataan. The hitherto unexplored island of Ticao was then visited, and an exhaustive collection of its birds was made, after which a considerable collection was secured on the neighboring island of Masbate.

The collectors are at present working on the island of Lubang, north of Mindoro. Collections have never before been made on this island,

A small collection of the rarer highland birds of Luzon was made in Benguet in July by the secretary of the interior while absent on sick leave and donated to the museum.

One thousand two hundred and ninety-one bird skins have thus far been collected, the number of species represented being 209. A considerable number of the rarer land birds of the Philippines are included in this collection, and in several instances where species have hitherto been shown only of individuals of one sex individuals of the other sex have been secured.

Seven species have been added to the list of birds known to inhabit the Philippines. Five species have been added to the known avifauna of Luzon, 1 to that of Mindoro, 3 to that of Culion, 1 to that of Palawan, 12 to that of Cagayan de Jolo, 22 to that of Cuyo, and 10 to that of Masbate, while from the island of Ticao 91 species have been recorded.

Two bulletins, one setting forth in detail the results thus far obtained and the other giving a list of specimens offered in exchange, have been sent to the public printer.

It is proposed to send the collectors in the near future to the Batanes and Babuyanes islands, between Luzon and Formosa, and to Apo, Banton, Burias, Polillo, and the Camotes group, and as opportunity offers they will visit the almost unknown highland regions of Mindoro, Palawan, Mindanao, Biliran, and Panay. Special attention will be given to the gathering of the material necessary to settle problems of geographical distribution which are as yet unsolved.

A good beginning has also been made in the field of entomology, and the cooperation of an unusually well-trained and enthusiastic American teacher now stationed on the island of Negros has been secured in the work of collecting specimens. So far about 10,000 specimens, representing nearly 1,000 species, have been collected, but are yet to be classified. Outside of these two lines of natural history nothing has so far been attempted.

A third division of the museum is devoted to articles illustrating industry and commerce. Active work in the commercial museum was not begun until July, 1902, when the division of commerce was organized and placed in charge of a clerk chosen especially for this task. To acquaint himself with the work of similar institutions, the chief of the bureau of non-Christian tribes visited in the past year the commercial museums of Japan at Tokyo, Kyoto, and Nagasaki, the Philadephia Museum of Commerce, and the recently inaugurated Pacific Commercial Museum, of San Francisco.

With the advent of peace and appropriate legislation capital will seek investment in the Philippines. The commercial museum thoroughly equipped with a collection of the products of the islands, an accurate knowledge of their needs for improved methods and machinery, and complete, comprehensive, and reliable data concerning their productive resources and their domestic and foreign commerce will be of great value not only to investors, but more especially in giving direction to the intelligent and economic development of the resources of the archipelago.

The following is an outline of the work already undertaken:

1. The collection and exhibition, both in crude and manufactured form, of the commercial products of the islands.

2. The collection of data concerning the resources of the islands.

3. The collection and exhibition of the articles imported from other countries.

4. The collection of data concerning commercial possibilities, especially in the Orient, with a view to the extension of the markets for Philippine products.

It is the aim of the commercial museum to use the data and exhibits thus collected to aid persons in the intelligent development of the resources of the archipelago, and to aid in the extension of the domestic and foreign trade relations of the islands. The museum is in correspondence with 22 United States consuls in the Orient, with all the chambers of commerce, and nearly all the important business firms in the city of Manila, and with some of the foreign consuls in Manila for the purpose of collecting desirable information and encouraging cooperation. Correspondence has also been begun with the commercial museums of Philadelphia and San Francisco and with the four commercial museums of Japan.

In addition to making collections in the field, the work of reading and indexing all publications bearing on the resources and commercial interests of the Philippines has been undertaken and an index established of all information received from correspondents. The information gathered will be made the basis of bulletins, which will be published from time to time for distribution in the United States and elsewhere. As soon as the collection of products warrants it exhibits may be exchanged with the commercial museums of the United States and other countries. Also representative exhibits of the most important products of the Philippines will be placed in the best markets

STATISTICS.

After the resignation of Mr. Carl C. Plehn as chief of the bureau of statistics on the 1st of March, 1901, the clerks of this bureau were transferred to other bureaus, and the work was for the time being suspended. The unsettled condition of the population, the abnormal state of trade, and the desirability of minimizing the expenses of the government made it appear advisable to delay the reorganization and expansion of this bureau. In December, 1901, however, Dr. Manuel Xerez Burgos was appointed clerk in the bureau of statistics and was given possession of the records and material of the office, and directed to gather and put in proper order such statistics concerning the Philippine Islands, their population and economical and social affairs, as might be desirable to publish and present at the proposed exhibition at St. Louis. When it became necessary to take the census of the islands under the act of Congress of July 1, 1902, it was deemed advisable to do this by a temporary organization rather than to intrust it to the bureau of statistics sufficiently enlarged for the purpose.

THE CENSUS.

In conformity of the act of Congress approved July 1, 1902, entitled "An act temporarily to provide for the administration of affairs of civil government in the Philippine Islands, and for other purposes," the Commission, on October 6, 1902, passed act No. 467, to provide for taking a census; and on the same day, by authority of the President of the United States, appointed Brig. Gen. J. P. Sanger, U. S. Army, director of the census, and later, on the 16th of October, appointed Henry W. Gannett and Victor H. Olmstead, of Washington, D. C., assistant directors.

The census will include all the islands and their inhabitants as far as may be practicable.

The inquiries relating to the Christian tribes will be classified by municipalities and barrios, and will include the number of persons in each by name, color, sex, age, conjugal condition; whether deaf, dumb, blind, or insane; nationality, citizenship, occupation, education, and the ownership of houses. The agricultural schedule will inquire as to the race of owners and renters of farms and plantations, and the proportion of each; rentals, and how paid; total area of farms and plantations; area cultivated prior to 1896, and now; wooded area and character of trees, as high or low; number of live stock of all kinds; and the amount and value of the crops for 1902. Schedule No. 3 is devoted to the schools, whether public, private, or religious; scope of instruction, and number, kind, and capacity of school buildings; amount paid in rentals; number, nationality, and religion of teachers; race and number of free and paying pupils; average attendance, and the number able to speak and understand English and Spanish. Schedule No. 4 will show the mortuary statistics of each municipality in 1902, as far as may be. Schedule No. 5 will show the social and Schedule No. 6 the industrial statistics of each municipality. No. 7 is for the non-Christian and wild tribes and covers such general statistics as are probably obtainable, but no attempt will be made to enumerate such tribes individually, except where they are tractable, accessible, and live in compact communities. It is proposed to collect the statistics of the Moros through the commanding general, Division of the Philippines, and the admiral of the navy commanding, as they are under military and naval control. It is not practicable to determine on what day the census will be taken, but it will not be later than April 1, 1903, and possibly earlier. Meanwhile, the personnel will be appointed and thoroughly instructed, as any attempt to instruct them after the census has been commenced will be futile.

THE OFFICIAL GAZETTE.

The publication of an official gazette under the general direction of the department of public instruction was authorized by an act passed September 2, 1902. The immediate management of this periodical is in the hands of an editor who was appointed by the civil governor, by and with the consent of the Commission, and who is assisted by a number of clerks. It is made the duty of the editor to receive, collect, and prepare for publication the various laws, orders, decisions, and other public documents which it is designed to publish in the Gazette; also to receive subscriptions from private persons, corporations, and provincial and municipal governments; to collect the amounts of such subscriptions and to deposit the same in the insular treasury; to distribute or cause to be distributed copies of the Gazette to the various subscribers; and to perform such other duties in connection with the publication of the periodical in question as the secretary of public instruction may direct. The Official Gazette is published weekly in two parts, one part in English and the other in Spanish. It is intended to include in the Gazette all laws and all resolutions of a public nature issued by the insular legislature, all executive orders, certain decisions of the supreme court and the court of customs appeals, or abstracts of such decisions. and such other documents as are usually published in an official gazette which may be designated for publication by the secretary of public instruction or which may be recommended for publication by the editor and approved by the secretary of public instruction. By the wide circulation of this periodical it is designed to convey to all persons interested, both in the cities and the provinces, a knowledge of the form and operations of the government; but there is a real difficulty in spreading information in these matters that is not overcome by this publication, for only a comparatively limited number of the mature persons in the provinces understand either English or Spanish. A project to issue the laws and other public documents in the dialects used and understood by the people was found on consideration to be impracticable on account of the large number of such dialects. course of time, however, the thousands of schoolboys in the islands who already have a certain knowledge of English will acquire a sufficient proficiency in that language to become the interpreters for the people, and through them much information will be conveyed to that large part of the population which now understands neither English nor Spanish, and to whom, consequently, the laws and records of the government are a closed book.

Respectfully submitted.

BERNARD Moses, Secretary of Public Instruction.

REPORT OF THE GENERAL SUPERINTENDENT OF EDUCATION FOR THE YEAR ENDING SEPTEMBER 1, 1902.

Manila, P. I., September 16, 1902.

Hon. BERNARD MOSES,

Secretary of Public Instruction, Manila, P. I.

Sir: In compliance with your direction in letter of the 4th instant, I have the honor to submit the following report of the operations of my office from October 1, 1901, the date of my last report, to the 1st of September, 1902.

STATUS OF WORK OCTOBER 1, 1901.

The last report closed with 765 teachers in the field, of whom 572 had arrived and started for their various stations within a month of the date of the report; several of the division superintendents accompanying the teachers were new to their fields, and some divisions were in the care of teachers temporarily appointed, while awaiting the arrival of the regular appointees; vacation normal institutes had been held in Manila, Iba, and Laoag; the Manila normal school, after tentative work under one of the Manila teachers, had been organized under Dr. E. B. Bryan on September 1, and was holding sessions in cramped quarters and during the afternoons only; the Manila trade-school teachers had arrived, the course had been laid out, and buildings were being repaired for its use; the agricultural school in Negros had received consideration and one teacher was on the field, and an appropriation had been made for preliminary experimental work; the native teachers were receiving one hour's instruction daily in English and school management; the office of the bureau had just been moved to the headquarters of the civil government; the privilege of purchasing supplies at the army commissaries had been cut off and the civil supply stores were being organized to supply the need; schoolbooks and supplies which had just arrived were being rushed to all parts of the islands; one death had occurred among the teachers; examinations of applicants in the islands were being made more rigid; night schools were being organized in the provinces and in Manila, and many of the figures relating to school population, enrollment, and attendance necessarily were only estimated.

THE YEAR'S WORK.

The past year has been a busy one, and the educational movement has gone forward with great strides in spite of many difficulties entirely fundamental in character.

Briefly, the tangible results since October 1, 1901, are:

A deputy division superintendent has been appointed for each province; 926 American teachers, including division superintendents and deputy division superintendents (the maximum number at any one time) have been engaged in school work, and thus instruction in the English language has been provided for in about 1,838 schools, in which it is estimated over 200,000 children are enrolled; 400 night schools for adults and those unable to attend during the day have been opened; high schools have been established in 23 provinces, with an enrollment of over 1,500; an enormous quantity of schoolbooks, school supplies, and a few thousand modern school desks have been distributed. Through the efforts of the division superintendents, whose duty it is to appoint native teachers, salaries of Filipino teachers have been increased, and a definite announcement has been made to them that the American teachers are here not to displace them, but to prepare them to take charge of their own schools. The Filipino teachers have received daily instruction in English, and in addition to this, when they have progressed sufficiently with the language itself, have been taught the common branches and the methods of teaching these. Vacation normal courses have been conducted in the various school divisions to train the native teachers. Courses in normal instruction are now provided for in the provincial high schools. Industrial instruction has not progressed rapidly, but the industrial school in Manila has at present a steady attendance of 149. Industrial instruction in rather an elementary way also forms a part of the regular work of the provincial high schools. Plans for trade schools in Benguet, Lepanto-Bontoc, and Paragua provinces are maturing, furthered by a regular appropriation for this work which is now available. As a means of preparing the Filipino for work in the signal corps, telegraphy is now a branch taught in the Manila trade school. The present number pursuing this branch in day and evening classes is 85. An art course has been arranged for in connection with the Manila normal school as a preliminary step, it is hoped, to the establishment of a school of fine arts in the future.

Every portion of the archipelago has been visited by some member of the bureau and the peculiar conditions and special needs of these localities investigated. Circulars of inquiry have been sent out to the provincial governors, presidentes, superintendents and teachers, and a mass of valuable data is accumulating. The needs and conditions of the different provinces, and in some cases the different parts of a province, have been studied carefully in order that the greatest amount of good may be given to those whom we have been set the task of educating. Transportation is an important factor. Very inadequate are the facilities of getting about in this archipelago, made up of several hundreds of islands, extending from north to south

The church and religious affiliations, the seasons of harvesting, the customs and notions that have been handed down for centuries, and last, but not least, the natural inertia of the people, are all conditions which must be reckoned with and most carefully considered, necessitating different methods, different work, and different sessions in the school year in order to obtain the best results.

The following table gives some of the more important data concerning school

THE FIELD.

To give a complete survey of the field and the many factors which enter into the school problem would be very interesting, but would necessitate much time and space. A few extracts from reports will be given, showing in a measure some of the difficulties and the diverse features of the problem. As the center of the archipelago, and the portion most cosmopolitan in its make-up, work in the city of Manila is summed up as follows:

"There are employed in the Manila public schools 48 American teachers. Of these, 5 are engaged in grammar school work with Filipino students, 9 are employed in the American grammar school, 1 is employed in the Chinese school, and the remainder are employed with Filipino teachers in the elementary schools.

"Of the Filipino teachers employed in the city 80 are men and 64 are women. Two of the men are engaged in giving instruction in drawing; 1 of the women is a leper and is engaged in teaching the inmates of the San Lazaro leper hospital. In addition to the foregoing, 2 Chinese are employed in the Chinese public school on Calle Asuncion.

"There are maintained in the city 38 schools, including the American grammar school and the 2 grammar schools for Filipinos. In a few instances 2 schools are located in the same building, and the number of schools is therefore greater than the number of school plants, there being 30 of the latter.

"On account of the prevalence of cholera at the opening of the schools on June 16, 1902, and its slow abatement, also on account of antagonistic ecclesiastical influences exercised during vacation, the schools did not receive the desired matriculation, but, contrary to the records of the preceding year, the number of matriculants has gradually increased, so that on August 30, 1902, there were enrolled in all the schools 3,044 students.

The attendance has been irregular, as is usual during the rainy season, but compared with the previous year is exceedingly gratifying.

"About ten days before the opening of the schools, on June 16, a request was received to discontinue the supervisory plan prepared for the Manila schools and to continue the previous arrangement of assignment of the American teachers to individual schools. This request was compiled with at once.

"The change from two sessions per day to one solid session in each forenoon went into effect August 4. By this arrangement the hour previously devoted to the instruction of the Filipino teachers in each school was abandoned and the teachers are brought together for two hours' daily instruction each afternoon, from 3 p. m. to 5 p. m., in the Escuela municipal. While this works serious hardships to the Filipino teachers on account of the lack of suitable transportation facilities in the city, still much benefit is derived from this common assembling and instruction."

The following extracts from report by the division superintendent of the provinces of Ilocos Sur, Union, Lepanto, and Benguet may be considered as fairly typical of the diversity of conditions and difficulties throughout the archipelago. This division includes not only some of the most thickly settled and progressive portions of the country, but also includes some of the uncivilized tribes, the education of which presents difficulties greater than the work among the American Indians. "Coast plateau.—The coast plateau is just safely above sea level, is free from swamps, is productive to the sea edge, has an average width of 4 miles, extends north and south the entire length of the division, and includes the greater portion of the province of Ilocos Sur and about one-half of La Union. The soil of this plateau consists of sand loam and alluvial deposit from the hills. In northern Ilocos Sur it is light, thin, and poor. There are strong indications that the formation of this plateau is relatively modern. The present base line of the mountains beyond a doubt at one time formed the coast line of the China Sea. In central Ilocos Sur, at a point near Narvacan, where the mountains meet the sea, strong proofs of this theory are found. At this place coral rocks may be seen in the side of the mountain 50 feet or more above the sea level.

"Climate.—The climate of this plateau is generally healthful. Malaria is uncom-A fever called 'dengue' is apt to affect settlers, but it is of short duration In the last five months, which include the hot season, the health and not dangerous. of Americans has been almost perfect. Among forty American teachers I recall only five cases of sickness, and those so simple as to amount to hardly more than a slight indisposition. During the hot season smallpox is not uncommon among the natives. Its general spread, however, is largely due to improper sanitary conditions and lack of perfect quarantine regulations. Prickly heat, so common farther south, is seldom

"There are two principal seasons, wet and dry. During the dry season there is practically no precipitation. The weather is hot, but not enervating, and growth of In some sections growth is forced by irrigating with water from vegetation is slow. During the rainy season a great part of the country is under mountain streams. The mountain streams become raging torrents, carrying away roads and making travel almost impossible. The rains begin about June 1 and bridges, and making travel almost impossible. continue until December. These rains during the months of June, July, November, and December are moderate. During August, September, and October they are very heavy and almost incessant.

"People.—The principal inhabitants of this coast plateau are Ilocanos. They own, occupy, cultivate, and control the greater portion of the arable land in Ilocos Sur and La Union. Along the base of the mountains are a number of small barrios or 'rancherias' containing Tinguianies, perhaps three thousand in number. Here we also find perhaps two thousand Igorrotes and less than two hundred Negritos. The latter are harmless, nomadic, and are rapidly dying off.

"Ilocano.—The Ilocano, I consider, is the most desirable native in Luzon. He is kindly, domestic, not unreasonably ambitious, and seems well disposed toward While possessing perhaps less energy than the Tagalog, he more than Americans. supplies the deficiency by being satisfied to remain at home, till the soil, and educate his children. In the last report of the Manila Normal I notice that Union Province is more strongly represented in its classes than any other province in the Archipelago.

"In general physical characteristics the Ilocano does not differ from the rest of the His face is more pleasant than that of the Tagalog and his stature is perhaps a trifle greater. The home life of these people is peaceful and pleasant.

There are, as in all countries, the two classes, rich and poor. Here, as in most countries, the rich man rules and exacts from the poor; but here, unlike the custom in many countries, the rich support the poor in time of need. The mendicant is seldom turned from the door. The common 'rice paddy hombre' may feel reasonably certain that some of the good things of the flesta will find their way to his table. These people are Christians and have a language and grammar of their own. Spanish is spoken fluently by only the best educated class. In many sections people speak nothing but Ilocano. Their morals are reasonably good. In their dealings with each other they are honest. In method and business instinct they are certainly not American, but much of our criticism is unjust because based upon an imperfect knowledge of conditions and customs.

"Perhaps the best quality possessed by the Ilocano is his peaceful disposition. He is not a warrior by choice. During the days of Spanish rule the Ilocano provinces were quiet and easily managed. Our own experience has been similar. The fighting which was done here was really forced upon the people by their warlike neighbors from the south. It is stated by Spaniards that during a former insurrection practically all Spanish troops were taken from the Ilocano provinces, the natives not being disposed to cause trouble.

"The people commonly included under the term 'Ilocano' may be divided into three classes. The first and I believe the most substantial class consists of the pure blood natives. The next class in point of desirability is the Spanish-mestizo. The third class and the one with which I have experienced greatest difficulty and the members of which show least inclination to accept the American idea is the Chinese-

"The pure-blood native Ilocano is a rather sturdy individual. He is satisfied to work and confine himself to practical things. His ability is not less than that of the other two classes mentioned, as is shown by the advancement made by the native children in school, as well as by the business and professional ability of men of this class who hold prominent positions in the provinces.

"The Spanish-mestizo seems to have so much of history and tradition inseparably connected with him that he is able to acquire new ideas only after a thorough course of forgetting.

"The Chinese-mestizo is an exceedingly difficult fellow to manage. He combines the keenness and stolidity of the Chinaman with the smoothness and secretiveness of the native. The combination is not a particularly pleasant one. The greater portion of the trouble that Americans have experienced in these provinces has been caused by this class.

"Tinguianie.—The Tinguianie is a strange person even in this country of strange He occupies the low foothills between the mountains and the coast. general physical make-up he is rather superior to the people of the coast. The limbs of the latter, including Pangasinans, Tagalogs, and Ilocanos, are, as a rule, thin and bony. Those of the Tingulanies are plump, well rounded, and symmetrical. In carriage they are erect, graceful, and more easy in their movement than the Ilocanos. Many of these people very nearly approach the European standard physically. head is well shaped; the face is long rather than broad; the cheek bones are not prominent; the eyes are bright and pleasant, and, above all, the disposition is bright and cheerful. The pleasant laugh which greets the visitor in a Tinguianie rancheria presents an agreeable contrast to the polite formality of the Ilocano or the animal-like stolidity of the Igorrote. A few of the Tinguianies are Christians, but the greater number of them belong to the class known as 'infleles' (unfaithful).
"The capacity of Tinguianies for education is unknown, schools not yet having been established among them. My impression is, however, that they can learn easily. The Tinguianie is not an aggressive person. He does not impress me as one who would contend strongly for his rights. This is perhaps the reason why he clings to the low foothills between the Igorrotes and Ilocanos. He is satisfied to be allowed to remain alone. His face, though pleasant, indicates a lack of the aggressive element necessary for a successful contest among opposing races.

"As to the origin of these people but little is known. The general impression is that they are descendants of the Chinese fillibusters who, in the sixteenth century, attacked Manila. They were driven off by the Spaniards, and came north and settled at the mouth of the river Agno, in what is now Pangasinan. Later a Spanish expedition was sent from Manila against them; they were defeated and dispersed among the mountains. The Tinguianies are said to be more directly related to the Chinese than to any other race in the islands. Another opinion is that these people nearly represent the pure Malay type.

"The dress of the Tinguianie is almost the same as that of the coast tribes, with the exception that the trousers of the men are longer and fit the leg more closely, and that the skirts of the women leave more of the lower limbs exposed. A curious custom of wearing beads exists among the women. The forearm of an unmarried woman is completely covered with rings of brightly colored beads. After marriage these rings extend to the shoulder. Some of them are very beautiful, and have been handed down from generation to generation as heirlooms. It is rarely that they can be purchased.

"Many interesting customs exist among these people. The symbolical enters largely into most features of their life. They have a number of graceful and interesting dances which are executed in this connection. One of these is executed by girls varying in number from eight to sixteen. They form in two ranks. The ranks face each other and the girls in each rank lock arms and move backward and forward and from side to side, keeping time to a weird and not unpleasant song, in which they all take part. They have dances to celebrate birth, others for death, others which are used to propitiate the particular spirit whose assistance is needed.

"The religion of these people is peculiar and difficult to secure information upon. Ancestor worship exists, but not to such an extent as among the Igorrotes. have small wooden images different from any found upon the coast, to which they attach such great value that I am disposed to believe they are objects of worship.

"The Tinguianie has no disgusting habits. He drinks a liquor of his own production and becomes very happy. While in this state he sings, or croons rather, in a high, quivering voice, which, coming from a big, powerful fellow, as is often the case, seems incongruous in the extreme. He seems easily satisfied in his choice of musical instruments, as in all other things. It is not at all uncommon to see a big man sitting contentedly rasping upon a tiny fiddle made of bamboo. The nearest imitation of music of which these instruments are capable is a faint squeak.

"The morals of these people are good. Stealing is very uncommon. They have marriage customs which are very rigorously adhered to. They are not as industrious as the Ilocanos, but keep their little farms in fairly good condition. The social instinct is particularly strong among them. Their first impulse upon meeting a stranger seems to be to entertain him. To visit a rancheria without being treated to a dance and fiesta is entirely out of the question. In this spirit of entertainment they are entirely unselfish. They are simply good-natured and can not 'help it.

"The Tinguianie in many respects resembles the Kanaka of Honolulu. He is careless, good-natured, not particularly industrious, fond of song and dance, and seems to find pleasure in most of the things of life. The resemblance stops here. Kanaka is weak, easily influenced, and gross morally. The Tinguianie is strong and clings firmly to every detail of custom and tradition.

"The occupation of these people is practically the same as that of the Ilocanos. They raise rice, corn, tobacco, and magey, an inferior quality of hemp, the output of which is increasing. They possess some fairly large herds of cattle, but horses are scarce among them. About the only articles manufactured by them are brightly colored blankets made of cotton, which they raise; they also manufacture beads and a few simple toys.

"Towns.—The provinces of Ilocos Sur and Union are somewhat overpopulated. All through these provinces the people are collected into centers having an average population of 10,000, with an average distance of 4 miles between centers. These towns are practically all built along the coast wagon road, which follows the general direction of the coast line and runs the entire length of the division. The towns are built upon the plan which is general throughout the islands, the poblacion or central pueblo regularly laid out, usually containing good brick or stone buildings, and barrios scattered all around the center.

"My impression is that the towns of Union are generally more prosperous than those of Ilocos Sur. This is partly due to the fact that this province was not so impoverished by war as was Ilocos Sur and partly to the fact that the soil of Union is deeper and richer.

"Schools.—The progress of school work in the coast provinces during the past six months has been entirely satisfactory. Presidentes, with a few exceptions, are interested in school work and every town has a comfortable schoolhouse, fairly good furniture, and a compulsory school law. Local school boards have been organized and are proving helpful. The last vestige of church opposition has been removed. In almost every town the padre is actively interested in school work. In several towns padres assisted at opening of school after vacation. In some towns church bells are rung so as to serve as calls to school. The people seem genuinely interested in the work and have evidently accepted the idea of English as a common language.

"The most valuable work in this direction has been done in the night schools. With few exceptions the attendance in these night schools has been made up of the principales of the town. In many towns the entire municipal government, presidente, vice-presidente, treasurer, and consejales have attended. In this way American influence is brought to bear upon a class of people which can not be reached in any other way. Classes for business men are contemplated in a few towns.

"School attendance is strong and steadily increasing. The complete organization of schools is being perfected, and in most towns the school is the central feature. Almost without exception American teachers are deeply interested in the work. Only one complaint of dissatisfaction with station has reached me. In this case the teacher, who complains of heart trouble, wishes transfer to station with another This transfer has been recommended.

The exceptions are the old ones who "Native teachers are generally satisfactory. come down to us from former times, and whose retention is necessary because of popularity in community. Progress made by younger teachers is remarkable. Some of them speak English almost perfectly, teach like Americans, and are full of ambition. In another year many of these teachers will be qualified to take charge of schools. The normal institute was particularly helpful to these teachers. Teachers' classes also assist materially.

"Barrio school work has been impeded by lack of books. As soon as possible American books shall be placed in these barrios; the American teacher will perfect the work of organization. Inefficient barrio teachers are being removed to make room for younger and more modern workers. These barrio schools even at present contain more pupils than central pueblos. When fully organized and teachers are fully instructed I hope greatly to increase the attendance.

"I am of the opinion that the greatest improvement which has been effected in school work in this division during the past six months is in the case of native teachers, particularly those of the barrio schools. I found a great majority of these teachers absolutely worthless. Many of them, while regularly appointed, had never seen an American, and had no idea of the proper manner of conducting a school. Not 5 per cent of them understood a word of English or showed any disposition to learn.

"This condition has been radically changed. The American teachers almost withbeen organized in the central pueblo and native teachers have been compelled to attend and study. A knowledge of English is rapidly becoming an indispensable qualification. Teachers showing no disposition to learn are dropped. The country is full of desirable young men and women eager to teach.

"I wish particularly to commend the work and attitude of American teachers in this division. From the beginning I have accorded them the greatest degree of latitude consistent with good conduct. In hardly any case has this been abused. They have worked hard and effectively. Perhaps the best results have been accomplished in the direction of organization and conciliation of antagonistic elements among the natives. The greatest effort has been expended upon organization. endeavor has been made and with general success to make the school the strongest and most fashionable institution in the town. In order to accomplish this it has been necessary to work in a number of directions. In the beginning I proceeded upon the assumption that all padres, presidentes, and ilustrados were antagonistic but necessary to our success. Indifference is the worst we have encountered from the common 'gente.'

"The above-described condition has been entirely changed. The work of conciliation has been ably performed by the teachers. As before stated, padres are Presidentes are not so favorable generally, but are assisting us materially. Their activity in enforcing compulsory school laws has gone far beyond expectations. Our hardest work has been with the 'ilustrados,' particularly Chinese-mestizos. For a long time they were disposed to stand aloof and criticise. This disposition was not apparent in Vigan. I am pleased to note that during the month of June the boys' school of Vigan has added to its rolls more than 100 of this class. Great gains have also been made in provincial towns. The following increases during the month of June are so great as to deserve special mention: Vigan, boys, 127 to 293;

Magsingal, 286 to 358; Santo Domingo, 158 to 315.

"Products.—The chief product of these two coast provinces is tobacco. La Union occupies third place among provinces in the archipelago in the production of this plant. Sugar, hemp, copra, indigo, and nearly all of the common vegetables are grown. Commerce is light, tobacco and hemp being about the only exports. Most of the hemp grown in this section is taken from the "magey" plant and is of inferior quality.

"Among fruits are mangoes, bananas, breadfruit, grape fruit, several inferior varieties of plums, chicos, guavas, and a few berries in the foothills.

"Harbors.—The harbors along the coast are numerous and fairly good. The best are at Salomague, in Ilocos Sur, and San Fernando, in La Union. Pandan, the harbor of Vigan, is good during all but the typhoon season. During this season cargo and passengers for Vigan are frequently landed at Salomague. Farther south small harbors are found at San Esteban, Sulbec, Santiago, Darigayas, and Santo Tomas. The harbor of San Fernando is one of the best on the west coast of Luzon. It is deep, perfectly sheltered, and reasonably easy of access. This harbor is badly in need of a new pier.

"Mountains. - The mountainous portion of the division comprises the provinces of Lepanto and Benguet, a portion of southeast Ilocos Sur, known as the Amburayan district, and a considerable portion of northeastern La Union. These mountains have a general direction from north to south, are clearly volcanic in origin, and vary in height from 200 to 8,000 feet.

"Climate.—The climate of the mountains is nearly perfect. At no season of the year is the heat intense. One can sleep comfortably under two army blankets any night during the year. I slept under three most of the time spent there and did not suffer from heat. At Suyoc, Lepanto, in a well-built house owned by Mr. Woodward, a fire was necessary morning and evening. This house, curiously, is the only one I have seen in the Philippines which is built upon an American plan throughout. The floors, walls, and ceiling are made of pine from the hills; the roof is covered with shingles cut from the same pine; the windows are of glass; sashes are American; evetroughs, gutters—even a wood pile assist in completing the effect. This climate is, I believe, as satisfactory during the entire year as any in the United States. season does it become enervating. In it a man can do as much work without suffering disagreeable effects as in California or Colorado. The hardest kind of mountain climbing during the hottest weather does not exhaust.

"Here, as upon the coast plateaus, we have the wet and dry seasons. The dry season is not characterized by the intense heat and disagreeable dust of the coast. All during this season the springs are alive and the mountain streams active. The wet season is not disagreeable unless travel is necessary. During this season the mornings are bright and clear. In the afternoons the rains come regularly. These rains are frequently accompanied by high gusty winds which forcibly remind one of squally weather in the States.

"This splendid climate may be reached in three days' travel from half a dozen places upon the coast. The traveler after a ride of a few hours, which brings him across the first range of mountains, finds that he is in a new world as far as climate is concerned. The relaxed condition so frequently experienced upon the coast is The severe labor necessary in following the steep trails does not seriously The appetite is good and a night's sleep under two or three heavy blankets is apt to cause the traveler to forget that he is in the Tropics.

"It is extremely difficult to decide as to the relative merits of climate in different The points that impressed me most favorably are Suyoc, parts of the mountains. Cabayan, and Daklan in the Agno River district and the high country near Baguio, in Benguet. The lowest temperature which I have experienced in the mountains was encountered at Suyoc.

"In considering the question as to what portion of the mountains is the most healthy I should easily award honors to Galiano, in western Benguet. This town is situated in a pocket of the mountains, which is surrounded on all sides by hills, which deprive it of the benefit of circulation from the mountains above or the coast

"Roads.—Travel in the mountains of Lepanto and Benguet is a serious problem.

The difficulty commences at Salcedo, upon the trail into Lepanto. During the dry season this trail is fairly good with the exception that the Balidbid River must be crossed sixteen times in a short distance. This is a typical mountain stream and when the rains are heavy is, of course, impassable. When Concepcion is reached the mountain climbing commences. This town rests snugly in the shadow of Mount Tila, celebrated because of its pass, Tilad Pass. During the dry season the trail over this pass is good. The distance from Concepcion to Angaqui can be made on horse-back in five hours without dismounting. This trail is perfectly safe with a surefooted horse.

'Angaqui is situated at the eastern base of the Cordilleras del Tila. From Angaqui to Cervantes, the capital of Lepanto, is 18 miles. The trail when in condition is good. The distance may be easily covered in one day. Only one river of any considerable importance is crossed between these two towns. The journey is generally possible during even the rainy season. From Cervantes to Suyoc, near the southern boundary of Lepanto, the trail is steep, but good. Midway between these points is Mancayan, where are found the great copper mines of Lepanto. From Suyoc the trail crosses the divide into the province of Benguet. The first town reached upon this trail is Loo. Quite an effort of imagination is necessary to cause the traveler to believe that this trail at any season of the year is good. It follows the tops of high ridges, with occasional dips from an altitude of nearly 6,000 feet down to one of 2,000 feet and back again to the high altitude in an almost incredibly short distance. The feet and back again to the high altitude in an almost incredibly short distance. trail is really dangerous at best.

"When Loo is reached the real troubles of a journey through this section have just commenced. This town is situated in the extreme upper valley of the river This is easily the swiftest and most dangerous river in northern Luzon. During the entire journey from Loo through Benguet to a point near La Trinidad, amounting to a distance of nearly 50 miles, this river must be considered. The trail follows the bed of the river or the high ridges on either side of it, with at least eight crossings of the main stream and numerous crossings of tributaries.

"Crossing the Agno is a serious matter at best. During even the dry season the downward sweep of water is so great as to render fording almost impossible at any but a comparatively few points. The bed of the river is filled with bowlders. During the dry season these bowlders are generally fixed. During the season of rains they are swept with the current great distances. At such times fording or swimming at these crossings is entirely out of the question. The experiences of several teachers who have attempted to make these crossings when the river was up are thrilling in Mr. Palmer, at Kabayan; Mr. Gallup, at Adaoay; Mr. Sullivan, at the extreme. Daklan; Mr. Force, at Bokod, all relate instances of crossing this river when their escape from destruction was scarcely short of marvelous.

"The Igorrote has a means of crossing these torrents of which he seems the sole He stands upon one side of the stream and jumps into the water at some point where the bowlders are not numerous. He alights in the water feet first and in an upright position. He does not remain in this position for more than an instant before jumping again and alighting in the same upright position. In this way he escapes the full force of the downward rush of the water. He is carried downstream with every jump, but each jump brings him nearer the opposite shore. He sometimes crosses rivers in this fashion when the water is above his shoulders.

"At a number of points along the Agno crossing has been made possible by means of a primitive trolley system. A raw carabao hide is cut into strips 2 or 3 inches in width, and these strips are tied together so as to form a rope long enough to cross the river. The ends of this rope are securely fastened to rocks or trees near the river. An ordinary carabao yoke is then placed across this rope and a shorter piece of similar rope is tied to both ends of the yoke. In this way a traveling sling or crude breeches buoy is formed in which the person about to cross the river sits. A smaller rope long enough to cross the stream is then fastened to the lower portion The Igorrotes, who are supposed to be on the other side of the river, then take hold of this smaller rope and pull, sliding the yoke and its passenger along This journey is not unpleasant until the first knot formed by the the main rope. junction of the shorter pieces of the rope is reached. At this point security requires that the traveler reach up, grasp the main rope with one hand, perform the gymnastic feat of supporting the weight of the body with one hand while with the other he places the yoke upon the further side of the knot. This feat must be performed every time a knot is reached.

"As the width of the river is so great in places as to require a rope containing from ten to twenty of these shorter sections, it is easy to understand how interesting the passage may be. Of course the fact that these knots are apt to become untied or that the rope is liable to break is not supposed to be considered. In this connection I would suggest that these crossings be made easier and safer by introducing light steel cables and regular traveling pulleys. Bridges of almost any description which would require piers are not to be considered. The immense bowlders which sweep down this river would destroy almost any pier which could be constructed.

"This description of the Agno crossings includes the entire rainy season and portions of the dry season, when occasional rains in the mountains bring this river up to the danger point. Beyond this the trails in themselves at best are exceedingly dangerous. At several points between Loo and Buguias a single false step would result in a fall or at best a roll of 1,000 feet. Between Buguias and Cabayan is a portion of the trail perhaps a half a mile in length which follows the top of a very narrow ridge. At almost any point along this trail a horse could travel 1,000 feet by taking one step to the right or left. A generally similar condition prevais all along this trail to La Trinidad.

"A few points upon this trail are so difficult as to deserve special mention. One of these is between Cabayan and Adaoay. The journey from Cabayan to Adaoay, which is a descent, requires but one-third of the time that is required to make the trip from Adaoay back to Cabayan over the same trail. Between Adaoay and Daklan at least three very difficult points in the trail are encountered. Between Daklan and Amnuklaod the trail at one point winds around the side of a mountain and is extremely dangerous. The steepest climb of the entire trip is encountered between Ambuklaod and La Trinidad. The portion of the trail referred to is reached a few minutes after leaving Ambuklaod and continues for a distance of perhaps 4 miles. This is a steady climb, so steep that it taxes the best powers of man and horse. know of no stretch of trail in the entire mountains which so completely exhausts the traveler.

"This ascent made, the trail to La Trinidad is good. From La Trinidad the trails branch out in different directions. One goes south to Baguio, and from Baguio southeast to Itogon. Another goes north from La Trinidad to Tublay and Capangan. This trail in former times extended northeast through Balachac and Quibungan and This trait in former times extended northeast through Balactac and Quitoligan and so on to the north until it reached Loo, making a second road through Benguet. This line is not passable at present. From La Trinidad the trail most popular passes to the west through Sablan and on to Naguilian. Another trail leads from La Trinidad southwest through Galiano, reaching the coast at Aringay. The Naguilian trail is fairly good; that to Galiano is badly washed out and very steep.

"Education.—The intellect of the Igorrote child is fairly good. He does not acquire as readily as the Ilocano, nor does he show as great aptitude in arranging and making use of acquired knowledge, still he can learn. The real difficulty to be overcome in this connection is his perfect indifference to everything in this good, but a come in this connection is his perfect indifference to everything in this world but a He will, with proper inducement, go to school and study. cafiau (feast). similar conditions he will also take a bath. He simply allows himself to be led up to There is no reason to believe that the school or bath of a particular day will Whenever the whim takes him he will forget both school and bath not be his last. and again become an ordinary plain Igorrote.

"The only solution of the problem of education in the mountains which I can offer is the industrial school. One of these is to be established at Baguio, Benguet; one at Cervantes, Lepanto, and one at Bontoc. In these schools the elements of an one at Cervantes, Lepanto, and one at Bontoc. In these schools the elements of an English education should be taught, but only to make possible the teaching of more important things. Our endeavor should be to impart simple practical knowledge. I believe the future of the Igorrote should be properly confined to his little farm. In him I see no possibilities beyond. Business and professional men of all kinds may reasonably be expected from the coast people. I believe that the best we can do for the Igorrote is to make him better satisfied with his present occupation.

"The general plan upon which these industrial schools are to be conducted is simple.

Cheap barracks, capable of containing perhaps 150 students, will be constructed. These barracks will constitute the workshop, home, and storeroom of the student. Near the barracks an experimental farm will be laid out, upon which the practical features of an agricultural education will be taught. The student will be made familiar with the use of proper tools and implements; new seeds will be tested; improved methods for growing seeds now in use will be taught; irrigation, stock raising, sanitation, construction of houses will all be treated in a simple, practical way. An effort should also be made to teach something of personal comfort to these peo-ple. At present they suffer from the cold. At least shirts and heavy blankets should be furnished.

"The schools which my predecessor established in Benguet have not, as a rule, been successful. This has been due entirely to conditions outside of the teachers. For them I have none but words of praise. I do not know, in the entire division, teachers who have worked more faithfully and with less complaint than they. I have recommended that teachers at Cabayan, Adaoay, Daklan, Bokod, and Baguio be transferred to the coast provinces. This will leave schools at Bua, La Trinidad, Tublay, and Galiano.

"Only two schools have been established in Lepanto. These are at Cervantes and have both proven entirely satisfactory."

The following extract shows some of the conditions and success of the work in the Camarines, Albay, and Sorsogon provinces, including an estimate of the work by the governor of Albay province:

"I arrived in my division on the 15th day of September, 1901, and was followed in a few days by the corps of teachers assigned to me. At the outset they encountered difficulties in the lack of transportation facilities, and it was with much difficulty that many of them reached their posts. The teachers as a whole deserve much credit for the way in which they faced unknown difficulties and conditions which were not always pleasant. The lack of knowledge of the conditions confronting them, the inability to speak the Spanish language, or the different dialects, the lack of proper food and shelter, all helped to make the future uncertain to them. Fifty-three teachers were put into the field and 5 more arrived during the latter part of October, and in December 2 more were added to the force. These 60 teachers, with the division superintendent and deputy division superintendents and secretary, make a total enrollment of 65 for the division.

"The teachers in many places found the houses used for schools to be almost uninhabitable, many of them being bamboo shacks on the ground, without even floors. These schools were entirely without supplies or any sort of school equipment. The first work confronting the teachers was to secure a suitable building in which to have school. This in itself was no small problem, as the people had little or no interest in the establishment of public schools. The presidente and councils were indifferent, and in many cases failed to keep their promises regarding the securing of proper buildings or repairs on old ones. This greatly hampered the work in its beginning and makes the later success of the work more pronounced. The lack of school supplies to the teacher who had had no experience in teaching was an additional drawback. However, they soon got to work and used whatever came to hand, with probably better success than they would have had had they been well supplied with books.

"I desire to put on record my appreciation of the helpfulness and kindness of the army officials who have furnished transportation to myself and many of the teachers. They have carried supplies out to the interior towns for us wherever they have had posts and to some of the teachers in out-of-the-way places they have furnished commissary supplies. Other teachers have lived and messed in the officers' quarters.

"The present concentration of the troops and the abandonment of all the interior posts will make our work much more difficult next year. Up to the present time there have been army posts scattered all the way from Nueva Caceres to Legaspi and they have furnished horses and carried our supplies by mail. All of these troops have been removed and I do not know how this work will be done in the future. There is now no mail route and all correspondence between the provinces must go by way of Manila. There is absolutely no way of getting supplies to the interior towns. There are very few carabaos living, and those who are fortunate enough to have some carabaos charge about $5 a day (gold) for the use of them, and I have no funds for such purpose, so it will be difficult to forward such supplies.

"Owing to the lack of transportation the difficulty of getting from one town to another is increased. All kinds of transportation is called into use, and on my recent trip much of the ground was covered on foot under the blazing sun. I have no objection to 'roughing it' in this manner, but the difficulty in getting supplies to their destination will be a serious drawback to the work.

"From my knowledge of the conditions prevailing in this division, and from the many things that have been said by civil officials and others, complimentary to the work, I have no hesitation in saying that the work in general for the first year has been very successful. I was very pleasantly surprised at the progress made in some schools between my visit of last November and that of March. I found children in most schools who could carry on a conversation in good English on almost any topic which touches the lives of children, and the results show that excellent work has been done. I have personally visited a great many of the Filipino people in their own homes, and everywhere I get the kindest words for and evidence of much interest in the progress of the schools. While the presidentes and municipal councils are handicapped by lack of funds, yet on the whole I think we have their interest and good wishes. I know that some of them are making strenuous efforts to better the conditions, and I am convinced that if they had the money at their disposal new school buildings would spring up throughout the division. Possibly the greatest progress in this direction will be made in the province of Albay, where money is more plentiful and where there are many stone walls standing of what were formerly good school buildings. These will need only new roofs and floors to put them in good condition. The governor of Albay has proffered me his cooperation in trying to induce the municipal authorities to provide suitable buildings. The town of Legaspi has already built a new schoolhouse and other towns will follow its example. For the present the schools are fairly well housed, and in some places they have excellent buildings.

"The conditions in Sorsogon Province are not so favorable. There the country is unsettled, and the indications are that it will remain so for some time. In general throughout the province the schools are in rented buildings, and these are very inferior to those of Albay Province. There are no roads throughout the country, and money is quite scarce. Hence repairs will be slower than in other provinces. The anting-anting brigands are still active, and at the present time the country is much stirred, owing to recent attacks on different towns. This makes the outlook for next year's work rather dark, as I am assured that if the present activity continues it will be unsafe for teachers to remain in some towns. During my visit to the province a town in which I was spending the night was attacked by fanatic bolomen while I was there, but they were driven off, leaving some dead and wounded and five of their number as prisoners. Since my return I am informed that a party of Filipinos in the constabulary was set upon and literally cut to pieces by the bolomen. Notwithstanding these conditions, there is no complaint from the teachers of that province.

"The newly elected governor of Sorsogon, Señor Monreal, is apparently much interested in schools, and I have reason to believe that he will live up to his state-The former governor was unpopular throughout the province, but the new governor seems to have the confidence and respect of all parties. He has pledged his sympathy and helpfulness, and already has done much to help us.

"The province of Ambos Camarines is probably in a worse condition than either Albay or Sorsogon, for while those provinces are wealthy in hemp, Camarines must depend almost entirely on the cultivation of rice. The recent death of nearly all the carabaos and cattle has left the province in a bad condition financially. Great poverty exists among the people in some sections, and this has somewhat interfered with the attendance of the children at school, as they have been compelled to assist in the struggle for bread. Apart from this the results have been very satisfactory. All of the civil officials, and practically all of the military officials, from General Grant down, have personally expressed to me their high appreciation of our work. "The character of the buildings used for schools is probably below the average of other provinces, and in some cases we can hardly hope for much improvement for sometime to come, as many of the municipalities can not raise enough money to keep up their running expenses.

"We have been looking forward with great expectations to the incoming of the land tax to provide funds to carry on some improvements in the way of buildings and furniture, but the provincial treasurer seems to think that the amount of money thus raised will be very much less than we had hoped it would be, owing to the ow valuations that are being put on the lands.

"The town of Tigaon, one of the first to make its tax return, has placed the assessment valuation at approximately $200,000 Mexican. Our proportion of that sum will be $500 Mexican. It will be seen at once that this sum is totally insufficient to pay Filipino teachers and make any school improvements.

"The people of this and the other provinces, as a general rule, are very anxious for schools, and many cases where parents have made sacrifices to send their children to school have come to my own notice, and I am confident that they appreciate their privileges.

"For the benefit of those who wished to study English and could not attend the day schools, night schools were established throughout the division and at first were well attended, but the attendance gradually fell off until most of them had to be abandoned for lack of interest, but I think this is not due to any fault of the American teacher.

"In general, the work of the American teacher has been very satisfactory. schools that I have personally inspected I have found only two or three teachers who were not doing satisfactory work. In some cases this was due to indifference, but in most cases it was due to lack of knowledge how to do better. In these cases I personally took up the work with them, and I have reason to believe it will work an improvement.

Many of the teachers of this division have had no experience in teaching. They were just graduated from their colleges when they were appointed to this work, and their next year's work will be much better.

"Considerable ill-feeling has existed between some teachers in this vicinity, owing to the ill-behavior of some of them. In some towns where two women teachers have been assigned they have disagreed and the relations have been strained, to put it mildly.

"The moral tone is on a high level, except in a few cases. I have heard rumors of some immorality, but have no reliable evidence, except in one case and this case was soon adjusted.

"I have personally found teachers smoking in the school room, and I am informed that one at least of the American teachers is gambling continuously with the padre of his pueblo, but I could not find reliable proofs, although I am reasonably satisfied that it is a fact.

"Some of the Filipino teachers have made excellent progress, but a few of them are so old that they are beyond the age when it is easy for them to take up a new language. Some of the best of these teachers have been recruited from the advanced pupils and they are very diligent in their work. * * *

"In Albay and Sorsogon provinces it is very difficult to secure good material for The salaries that the municipalities can afford to pay are, in many cases, much less than they could make in the hemp market, and consequently they are loth to accept appointments as maestros.

"In general, they are studious and courteous. They are attentive to their duties and show an interest in learning English, and usually reflect the American teachers in methods of teaching. They have arrived at the place where they are a valuable aid to the American teacher in the English work.

"Very little opposition has been shown by those who are supposed to be opposed to the introduction of American schools. Only two cases of open opposition have come to my notice. In one case an ecclesiastical official spread untruthful statements abroad, and in the other case a person pinned upon his door some seditious statements about the American Government in general and the schools in particular. He was placed under arrest, and is now at liberty under heavy bail to appear before the next session of the court of first instance.

"The people at large are wholly in sympathy with our work and speak in the highest terms of the work that has been done.

"Upon our arrival here we heard almost no English, but everywhere now one is met with greetings in English, and the parents are delighted with the work of their In the most remote towns, in passing through the country, one is surprised to hear conversation among the children in English, or the strains of "America," or "the Star Spangled Banner."

[Extract from Governor Betts's report.]

At the time the civil government took charge of affairs in this province there were two schools organized in each province, one at Ligao under the supervision of an American, and the other at Tabaco under a native instructor. Since the organization of civil government there have been established from one to three schools in each organized municipality throughout the province. Twenty out of the 27 organized pueblos have their schools now under the supervision of American instructors.

The greatest enthusiasm prevails among the people in all the pueblos where American instructors have been detailed, and the problem that at present confronts the municipal governments is that of providing adequate accommodation for the schools, the attendance invariably being in excess of the capacity of the buildings in which the schools are held. In nearly every pueblo in the province there remain the ruins of what was once an excellent school building, but which apparently has been abandoned for some years. These buildings were invariably of stone, the walls of which are still in an excellent state of preservation and could be reconstructed into excellent school buildings.

Some idea of the enthusiasm created in some of the pueblos by opening American schools can be had from the fact that in several pueblos temporary buildings have been constructed by contribution labor in order that there might be ample room to accommodate the pupils. The wonderful progress made by these little people during the short time they have been in school seems incredible, and I do not believe there is a brighter and more enthusiastic lot of little students in the world than can be found in the public schools of this province. The greatest credit is due the American teachers for the excellent manner in which they have conducted their work and for their own excellent deportment.

The conditions in Occidental Negros are thus summed up by the deputy division superintendent, after a tour of the province:

"After a general summing up of conditions, I feel free to say that the educational work in the province is no longer in a formative condition. The schools are not only running smoothly, but energetically as well, and much as been accomplished in the way of organization.

"The work of inspecting these schools I have found interesting. To carry out the work one must undergo much physical fatique and exposure. Few miles of good road exist, mountain trails and rice paddies forming the greater part of the roadway, except near the capital city of Bacolod. In my journeying some one hundred and ten hours have been spent in the saddle, at times drenched completely by tropical rains, at others under the constant blaze of a torrid sun. Little accidents, such as a saddle horse falling overboard from a native 'banca,' taking clothes, saddle, reports, and everything else, are not to be heeded. The swimming of rivers is an especial feature in this duty, and a man in carrying out this work needs to be a natatorial artist or else give up the field entirely. The trip to the towns of Escalante and San Carlos was made by water, and three days of rough weather were passed in making the voyage.

"Some of the towns where American teachers are stationed are very isolated and college graduates and older teachers are truly doing good pioneering. As a result of my inspection, I must say that school conditions in the province of Occidental Negros are indeed encouraging."

THE PROPLE.

There are in the Philippine Islands three distinct races—the Negrito, with 21 tribes; the Indonesian, with 16 tribes, and the Malayan, with 47 tribes, making a total of 84 different tribes. Of these, the Negritos, which at one time populated the whole archipelago, are slowly disappearing, and probably less than 25,000 remain. They are physically weak and intellectually stand very low in the human scale.

The Indonesians, with a tribal population of some 251,200, live almost exclusively on the great island of Mindanao. They are not only physically superior to the Negritos, but to the peoples of the Malayan race as well, and are, as a rule, quite intelligent.

The Malayan race, with its admixture, however, is the dominant one, and is found in all parts of the archipelago in greater or less numbers. The Visayans, with a population of 2,600,000, occupy the islands south of Luzon; the Tagalogs, with 1,663,000, the central part of Luzon; the Bicols, with half a million, southern Luzon; llocanos and Cagayans, northern Luzon; the Pampangans and Pangasinans, northern central Luzon; the Moros, the Jolo (Sulu) Archipelago and Mindanao.

Thus it will be seen that the problem of educating the peoples of three different races, made up of many tribes, which, even in the same race, differ very greatly, not only in the degree of civilization, but in language, manners, customs, and laws, is no small task. The needs and conditions of the different provinces, and in some cases the different parts of a province, have to be studied carefully in order that the greatest amount of good may be given to those whom we have been set the task of

TRACHING FORCE.

The accompanying table shows the number of schools in each division and province throughout the archipelago, together with the total number of Americans and Filipinos engaged in teaching on the 1st of July, 1902. The number of native teachers includes those formally appointed and under American oversight. That these figures are lower than the real number is evident; the latest report from the island of Marinduque showing 52 teachers (native) actually at work, where the present list shows but 4. Owing to the prevalence of cholera and the delay in reopening schools in many provinces, division superintendents have not reported native teachers unless sure of their being actually at work during the present school year. The total number of Filipino teachers will probably be found to be about 3,400. The detailed list by towns will be found in Exhibit B.

PROGRESS OF THE WORK.

During the past year the issuing of books in Spanish for the use of the public schools has been discontinued, and everywhere within the radius of the influence of the American teachers instruction has proceeded in English, and text-books in arithmetic, geography, and other studies are furnished in English. For some of the barrio schools, removed from the influence and oversight of American teachers, limited use has been made of Visayan-English, Ilocano-English, and Tagalo-English primers, to make the transition more easy. The instruction in Spanish has been to a large extent superseded by instruction in English, and except in the high-school courses will not be taught in the public schools.

A great advance has been made in the comprehension of the nature of the people and the children, and in methods of handling them to obtain the best results. One division superintendent has had much success in his handling of school problems, and one of his methods is thus reported by him:

"I have adopted the plan of calling all presidentes in the province to the provincial capital for a discussion of school matters before the provincial board. In Union Province such meeting was attended by remarkable success. Presidentes were brought before a board composed of the provincial officials and the division superintendent. At this meeting the treasurer, the governor, and the division superintendent were present. The entire meeting was devoted to a discussion of schools and school matters. The division superintendent presented to the meeting all matters which he considered as of importance concerning schools. The treasurer stated his position upon these matters in very plain language. I have already described to you the manner in which the governor acted."

In the larger part of the field the weekly school holiday has been changed from the middle of the week, as was customary in Spanish times, and now comes on Saturday, as customary in the United States. The week is thus less broken up and better results are obtained.

In some places the old custom of separate schools for boys and girls has been overcome and boys and girls attend the same school. As this custom grows and becomes more general, it will be possible to effect a saving in teachers, as separate teachers are now required in some cases where the size of the classes is such that they could be consolidated under one teacher if the prejudice did not exist.

In Benguet Province the predominance of the Igorrotes and their incapacity or disinclination toward education has caused a falling off in school attendance, and confirms the opinion hitherto expressed that the education of these tribes must proceed for the present more along the lines of simple industrial and agricultural training. With this end in view, a start has been made on a building for such a school in Baguio, province of Benguet, and three teachers have been assigned to give instruction. The school has not yet reported the formal opening. The condition as to regular elementary work in this province is well summed up in the following extract from the division superintendent's report:

"The following is a statement of average attendance in the schools at Bua, Adaoy, Daklan, Bokod, La Trinidad, Baguio, Cabayan, and Tublay: Bua, twenty and a fraction; Adoay, 16; Daklan, 15; Bokod, 16; La Trinidad, 42; Baguio, 19; Cabayan, 31; Tublay, 11. This showing is entirely unsatisfactory. The teachers have worked 31; Tublay, 11. This showing is and worked with a proper spirit.

The Igorrotes are apparently fairly well disposed toward schools. The difficulty is that the school children are being used for "polistas" and as workers at road camps. Whether the use of these children for such heavy work is right or wrong is no affair of mine, but as long as the practice of so using them continues it will be impossible to maintain respectable schools at these places. As you know, every Igorrote is subject to the slightest wish of the local presidentes; if he says work, they work. The extent to which the presidentes are obedient to the governor I do not know, but the teachers have reported to me that it is, while not at the command of the governor, at least in conformity with his wishes that this work is done. It is simply a waste of valuable material to attempt to carry on these schools under such conditions. We need teachers along the coast. The new teachers which I have received this year will not fill vacancies, considering provincial schools.

EXTENSION OF THE FIELD.

September, 1901, closed with teachers just stationed in all the principal provinces September, 1901, closed with teachers just stationed in all the principal provinces of the archipelago. The work of the present year has included not only the development of English instruction in these schools, but a gradual extension into the more remote provinces. The Cuyo Islands, and later Paragua, were visited and a few teachers stationed in the important towns. The east coast of Mindanao was also given a few teachers, and a soldier-teacher was stationed at Baler, on the east coast of Luzon. At the present time the island of Mindoro is provisionally annexed to the province of Marinduque, and a couple of teachers have gone to the island to organize schools. For these newer fields, as well as for the older, the demand far exceeds the supply a strong letter has been received from the governor and tressurer ask. the supply. A strong letter has been received from the governor and treasurer asking for at least 10 American teachers for Mindoro, but with the present number of teachers it is impossible to spare more than 2.

Every province in the archipelago and nearly every island of any considerable size has one or more American teachers. In many cases they are entirely inadequate to the immense work to be done, but they are centers from which the work will extend farther into the interior. With the more uncivilized tribes the work must go on slowly and along lines quite different from those best adapted to the better peoples.

TEACHERS NEEDED.

During the month of May instructions were received not to make further appointments of American teachers, and consequently the teaching force has been steadily diminishing. When the maximum number of teachers were in the field (926) many pueblos still were petitioning for teachers. The establishment of high schools, the teachers for which have been withdrawn from elementary work, together with the decreasing number, has caused a serious condition in the provinces. Division superintendents report that petitions and requests are coming in almost daily to their offices urging that American teachers may be sent to designated pueblos and promising good school buildings, large attendance, native teachers, etc., to show their earnest-Telegrams like this are frequently received: "Since March this division has lost 10 teachers through death, illness, and authorized resignation. Have spread teachers to utmost. Need two men to sustain work, one to relieve, two women for secondary school, another for town worked up with difficulty where schools are going to pieces for lack of American teachers" Nearly every division superintendent has filed urgent requests for from 10 to 20 teachers, and to fill these very imperative needs alone 200 teachers could well be used. To supply all municipalities which have a good-sized school population would require at least another 200. It is hoped that the financial stringency may be overcome to such an extent as to permit at least the securing of enough teachers to keep the number up to the 1,000 elementary teachers authorized by law, because of the serious effect which the apparent abandonment of schools at the present time will have upon the native population, who will be quick to suspect a design to abandon the school work in which they are so thoroughly interested.

"HDQRS. SIXTH SEPARATE BATTALION, "Tacloban, June 28, 1902.

"Governor Wright, Manila:

"Have just returned from trip around Samar. I found conditions much better than I expected. I think everything is all right. A few school-teachers would be of great advantage to island. Fifty teachers could take the place of a regiment of troops.

"Grant, Brigadier-General."

"We are at the present time simply buried in work on account of the inauguration of the new municipal governments, and for this reason can not devote the time that we wish to school questions, but we are doing all in our power and if you will give us a good, wide-awake, hustling superintendent, and one that can work, with men that know how to work, we are positive that the organization of schools on this island (Mindoro) will not be difficult. We beg to recommend to you towns for teachers as follows: (1) Calapan, 2 men and 1 lady teacher; (2) Naujan, 2 teachers (a man and his wife, if possible); (3) Puerto Galera, 1 teacher; (4) Pinamalayan, 1 teacher; (5) Magaran, 1 teacher; (6) Pola, 1 teacher.

"Of these towns Calapan, Naujan, and Puerto Galera, respectively, should have American teachers by all means.

"Your most obedient servants,

"R. J. OFFLEY, Captain, Thirtieth U.S. Infantry, Governor of Mindoro. "S. H. LAMB, "Provincial Treasurer, Marinduque."

CHOLERA EPIDEMIC.

The most serious interference with the work of this bureau during the past year has been the epidemic of Asiatic cholera, which started in this city in March, spreading thence into Bataan and Cavite provinces, up the valleys into the center of Luzon, and gradually from island to island, until now it is most prevalent in the northern part of Luzon and in the Visayan islands.

Not alone have many native teachers (as well as four American teachers) been included among the 40,000 deaths from this disease, and undoubtedly many school children, but a general delay and paralysis has existed in the sections afflicted.

The outbreak in Manila occurred just after the closing of the schools for the long vacation, and delayed the opening of the Manila teachers' institute. In the provinces many vacation normal schools were entirely forbidden by local health authorities; others were cut short or the attendance reduced far below the anticipated figures. In many provinces it was impossible to open the schools at the appointed time after vacation, and teachers were forced to await the time when the disease had expended its energies or had been stamped out. Other schools have been forced to close since reopening after the vacation, and at the present time a large number of schools are thus closed, including some of the provincial high schools.

In the matter of transportation of teachers and supplies much additional expense has been caused, both to this bureau and to the teachers incidentally. Owing to the five days' quarantine imposed on all vessels leaving Manila, either for island ports or for foreign ports, an extra charge for subsistence during that, or for any further extra detention, was made, whether the person was traveling on government business or private affairs. As this came during vacation, many teachers were prevented from leaving the islands to make visits to China and Japan, as they had planned, and those who were fortunate enough to get away were in many cases seriously delayed in getting back to their stations, not only on account of the quarantine delays, but also because of the total overturning of all steamboat schedules.

In the transportation of supplies also an extra charge of 50 per cent of the freight rates was made on all shipments, to compensate the owners for the additional delay. As a matter of economy, as few shipments as possible were made while these conditions existed, but it was impracticable to discontinue shipments altogether. The resulting delay in case of interisland mail, as well as in mail to the United States, was severely felt by all.

The American teachers, almost without exception, met the emergency in a most commendable spirit, and in the city of Manila, as well as later in the provinces, acted as sanitary inspectors and did noble work toward limiting the spread of the disease. Their work is more fully spoken of in the section on "American teachers."

REDUCTION OF MILITARY STATIONS.

During the past year the military forces in these islands have been reduced from about 43,000 to less than 20,000. The withdrawing of garrisons from small towns, sometimes from nearly all the towns of a province, has had a direct bearing upon the educational work, and in some cases the changes have necessitated the transferring of teachers, especially in cases where women teachers have been stationed in places where there were other American women, but who have been left alone by the departure of the troops and the officers' families.

The disturbances in Samar, with the consequent withdrawal of troops from Leyte to engage in the work of punishment in Samar, made a break in the work in Leyte. The American teachers, suddenly left alone in the various towns, without even telegraphic or mail communication for a time, for the most part were willing to continue their work, but the general superintendent instructed the division superintendent in charge to take no risks, and in case of withdrawal of garrisons to concentrate the teachers at garrisoned places until it was sure that no uprisings would take place in Leyte. This was done, and after the pacification of Samar the teachers were again

Disturbed conditions in Bohol for a time caused a pause in the school work, but conditions are now much improved. The disturbances in Mindanao are in a part of the country were American teachers have not yet been sent, they being stationed only along the coast. In Batangas Province the activity of the robber bands caused the resumption of military operations, and General Bell, in charge, ordered the concentration of the inhabitants in the best towns of the province, and the destruction of the crops on the outlying and unguarded regions. This served a double purpose—protecting the peaceful natives from molestation and the paying of tribute, and making sure of the character of any found outside the prescribed limits. New districts were built up in these towns, inhabitants of each village being arranged by sections, and food was collected by the military and issued freely. Probably never in their lives had many of these people been so well fed and sheltered. In each section a schoolhouse was built, where the children continued the studies begun in their original villages, under the instruction of native teachers, supervised by American teachers. The town of Tanauan showed an enrollment of 2,161 pupils, with an average attendance of 1,985. In the eight towns where American teachers were stationed 6,000 or 7,000 native children received daily instruction. Such a condition of schools and attendance certainly does not indicate an extermination of the rising generation.

In the same province the vacation normal work was divided, giving normal instruction to native teachers and adult natives in six towns, the attendance reaching 452, under the charge of 16 American teachers. The restrictions have now been removed. The past year's work has been done without official assistance from the military forces, but where American teachers have been stationed in the same town with military officers the latter have, as a rule, been very helpful to the school work as well as to the teachers individually. The army surgeons, also, have been very helpful to the teachers, with advice and medical treatment in time of need.

One result of the withdrawal of military forces is the abandonment of telegraph and telephone stations and a reduction in mail facilities. The telegraph service is to be placed under the charge of the Philippines constabulary, and it is hoped that the condition of the mail service will be constantly improved.

VACATIONS.

The long vacation of twelve weeks was given at different times in different provinces to suit local needs. In one or two sections the vacation was divided into two shorter sections, given at periods to accommodate the local demand for child labor during rice planting and harvest. The majority of vacations began the latter part of March, and schools reopened in the latter part of June. The dates of closing school varied from March 1 to May 16, and the reopening from April 30 to August 11. During at least four weeks of the long vacation in each province designated American teachers were required to teach in the normal institutes, and those not called upon for this work during the present year are required to teach in such institutes during the next long vacation, so as to equalize the length of vacation for each teacher, giving to each a vacation of eight weeks during one year and of twelve weeks during the other.

NIGHT SCHOOLS.

This subject is more fully discussed in another place in this report, but mention may be made here that the original plan of the general superintendent was to have the compensation for night schools paid on the same basis as pay for day schools, where night schools were continuously maintained; that is, in twelve monthly payments of $15 each. The auditor, in view of the fact that pay for night school work was not embodied in a specific act, but included in the general appropriation for pay of American teachers, decided that that rate at which night school salaries had been approved by the civil governor ($15 per month) could only be held to apply to months during which night school was actually taught, thus cutting off pay for night schools during vacation. The regulation of the general superintendent under which these schools were taught provided for an average attendance of not less than twelve pupils above an age of 14 years, the school to be held at least three nights a week and for an hour and a half each night. As a matter of fact many teachers taught five or six nights per week on account of the interest of the pupils, and many had large classes.

By the provisions of act 430, night schools are appropriated for at the rate of $1.50 per night, with the proviso that no night school shall be maintained either in the city of Manila or elsewhere at public expense unless it shall have an average attendance of at least 25 pupils above the age of 14 years. Some points as to night schools taught prior to the passage of this act are still unsettled, awaiting decision by the auditor on the same. The general superintendent has issued instructions that night schools shall not exceed three nights per week.

FILIPINOS TO THE UNITED STATES.

During the past year a number of Filipino young men have gone to the United States, either under the care and protection of returning army officers or at their own expense, to obtain higher education. One of the teachers of this bureau, during the long vacation, took two young men to his home and placed them in school in Pennsylvania, where they are to remain for three years, the teacher guaranteeing their expenses and their safe return to these islands. The teacher who showed his confidence in this manner has returned to these islands with his bride and has again taken up the work of instruction.

It has always been the opinion of the general superintendent that a selected few of the best young men in these islands should be sent to the United States, not alone for the academic education which they can receive, but for the broader and more impressive education of daily life in the United States, in contact with its greatness and activity. Educational institutions in the United States will eagerly cooperate in such a work, and parents in many cases could contribute toward the payment of expenses. An appropriation for the partial payment of the expenses of such young men would be money well invested in its results when the young men return to these

THE COMING YEAR.

During the early part of the coming year the question of teachers to continue the work already begun will become serious, and the insular government should make known at an early date its purposes in relation to American teachers after the expiration of the two years' service required by the provisions of act 224. The specified two years of service of a large majority of the teachers will expire between May and August, 1903. Many questions are already being raised as to matters connected with the close of service. It will be necessary to make some provision for the transportation of a large number of teachers back to the United States during the year, unless inducements can be made for them to remain in the service. It is very desirable that the policy of the insular government should be formulated and communicated to the teachers, not alone for their information and guidance, but to ascertain in advance the number of teachers which it will be necessary to appoint to fill the places made Where vacancies are to occur, appointvacant by those who return to the States. ments must necessarily be made several months ahead of the time the teachers are to arrive in the islands. For those to arrive during July and August appointments should leave here not later than February. In determining the policy of the government due consideration should be given to the fact that school-teachers can secure good positions only at the beginning of the school year.

To sustain school work in its full efficiency it will be necessary for the new teachers to be on the field before the departure of the experienced ones. This will involve not only the cost of transporting the new teachers, but also the paying of salary to the new teachers during a part, at least, of the time occupied in getting them to the islands and to their stations.

The teachers now in the islands have become acquainted with the natives, have acquired, in many cases, a fair knowledge of the native dialect, have become good friends with the municipal and provincial authorities, and understand the customs, prejudicies, and peculiarities of the children and parents. In addition, they are acclimated in large degree and accustomed to their surroundings.

For these reasons it is respectfully urged that no successful teacher now in these islands should be allowed to return to the United States at the end of two years' service if the additional payment of $200 to $250 per year can keep him in the school work in this archipelago. It is respectfully submitted that not only will the retention of these experienced teachers tend greatly toward the increased efficiency of the school system, but it will prove a decided economy in dollars and cents. New teachers mean expenditure for transportation and salary and an uncertainty as to their ultimate success, besides a large percentage of loss during the process of acclimatization. To secure the continued service of the largest number of successful teachers, the policy of the government must necessarily be communicated before their plans are matured for the return home.

MANILA NORMAL SCHOOL.

This school occupies the central position in the educational movement in these islands, and its work is of vital importance in carrying out the policy of supplying thoroughly trained Filipino teachers to take charge of the schools throughout the archipelago.

After some preliminary work the Manila Normal School was organized by Dr. E. B. Bryan, its principal, on September 1, 1901. It was at that time provided with rooms in the municipal school building in the Walled City, the same building being also occupied by the Manila Grammar School, which held its sessions in the foremoon, thus reducing the normal school to afternoon sessions only. During the remainder of the school year sessions were held from 2 to 5.25 p. m. Five courses were given full time and two courses part time: (1) English expression in its broadest sense, reading, writing, and talking; (2) geography; (3) American history; (4) arithmetic; (b) science.

Music was taught two days and art three days each week, the subjects alternating on the programme.

The total enrollment up to January 1, 1902, was 310 pupils, of which number 18 only were females. The average enrollment was 220, with average attendance of 202. The ages ranged from a minimum of 16 years to a maximum of 28. The instruction was given by 11 American teachers—4 men and 7 women. Twenty-four provinces were represented by the pupils.

The necessity for a suitable building received careful consideration, and during the long vacation the large buildings on the exposition grounds in Ermita, a mile south of the Walled City, were repaired and fitted up for the use of the normal school. On the 16th of June, while the cholera was still prevalent in the entire country surrounding Manila, the present school year was begun. The prevalence of this dread disease, which has hampered all school work, was especially felt by the normal school, preventing the attendance of pupils both in Manila and from the remoter provinces.

The present buildings have accommodations for about 500 pupils, and sessions are held forenoon and afternoon. Good physicial and botanical laboratories are ready for use and the apparatus for the same is arriving.

In spite of the handicap mentioned, the total enrollment since June 16 has been 330 pupils, and on the last day of August 270 were actually enrolled, with an average attendance of 265 for the month. Of the 270 pupils, 70 are young women. Letters from a large number of presidentes indicate that the attendance will reach 500 at the opening of the middle term, October 1, on account of improved conditions as to cholera and the consequent removal of local quarantine restrictions and restrictions upon travel.

American history, Filipino history, algebra, physics, botany, and music and art.

The instruction in music and art is being given by the normal school in place of a separate school of fine arts which it is hoped will be established in Manila at a later date. One teacher gives full time to music and another full time to drawing. students are required to take one year of music and they are also permitted to take two years in addition to the one required, and many are availing themselves of this opportunity. At present the work is limited to vocal music and voice culture

In drawing, the students are also required to take one year. The work of this year is planned with a twofold purpose in mind—to give the student skill in illustrating his daily work when he takes up his work as a teacher and to give him a basis for the more advanced work. Students are encouraged to take more than the required work if they show especial skill or fondness for it. At present 7 students are pursuing special lines with surprisingly good results. These students have passed from charcoal work to color. A class of 20 is ready for the work in charcoal. The students are taking great interest in this work and are showing considerable capacity for Classes in wood carving will be started as soon as the science hall is ready for use.

The course of study for the Manila normal school is designed to be a four-year course, and during the last two years it is the plan to bring to Manila the pupils who have successfully accomplished the two-year normal course in the various provincial high schools, these courses being especially designed and laid out by the principal of the Manila normal school for that purpose.

THE NORMAL SCHOOL COURSE OF STUDY.

First year.—1, oral expression (reading and talking with special emphasis on diffi-cult sounds and combinations); 2, arithmetic; 3, elementary geography; 4, history of the United States; 5, drawing; 6, music.

Second year.—1, reading (the purpose being to develop rapidly in interpretation, fluency in expression, and a taste for good literature); 2, arithmetic; 3, physical geography; 4, Filipino history; 5, nature study; 6, hygiene, physiology.

Third year.—1, algebra; 2, political and commercial geography; 3, general history;

4, botany; 5, physics. Fourth year.—1, geometry; 2, (a) United States history, (b) civics; 3, zoology; 4, chemistry; 5, professional work (observation and practice in model school).

For the benefit of Filipino teachers in the city of Manila normal training classes These classes which all native teachers are required to attend have been organized. meet every afternoon from 3 to 5 in the municipal school building, Intramuros.

The daily man-This school is under the direction of the normal school principal. agement of the school is in charge of Mr. E. W. Oliver, principal of the large Victoria grammar school (American and Filipino), which meets forenoons from 8 to 12 in the same building. The classes are taught by American teachers employed in the public schools of Manila. Daily instruction is given in arithmetic, English, civics, geography, and hygiene.

Thus the Manila normal school marks the culmination of the efforts for the training of Filipino teachers, which were necessarily begun in a crude way by the instruction of each for an hour every school day by the local American teacher; then followed by systematic instruction during a month or six weeks in provincial institutes during the long vacation; further advanced and placed on a more substantial foundation by the work of the provincial schools in their normal courses, and completed and made thorough by the central school at Manila.

Short as has been the time improvement is already felt in the elementary schools where teachers with but a little training in the Manila normal school have been

Too much, however, must not be expected, for the full benefit of such a course can not be obtained for several years, and among the first graduates there may develope a lack of efficiency due to insufficient preparation in such rudiments as are the common possession of all American school children, but are just being introduced in these islands.

NAUTICAL SCHOOL.

A nautical school was opened in Manila December 15, 1899, with an attendance of This school is designed to educate young men for the merchant marine Owing to the mountainous character and small size of these islands, transportation by water must always continue to be the principal and almost exclusive This school is intended to fit Filipinos to take control of their own shipping instead of permitting it to be controlled by people of other nationalities.

At the beginning of the present school year the attendance, especially from the provinces, was subject to the same curtailment on account of cholera as has been noted in other secondary schools. In spite of this, however, on August 31 there were enrolled 73 young men, and the percentage of attendance for the month was 87.7. The pupils represent about 20 different provinces.

The school is under the supervision of Lieut Commander John J. Knapp, U. S.

Navy, and has a teaching force of 4 American teachers and 1 Filipino instructor. The school was last year divided into four classes instead of three, and the scope of the instruction has been much extended. The attendance of the three upper classes is very good, and the attendance of the fourth class improves after the first three or four months. The school is now in good running order. Two full months of work have been completed, including the regular monthly examinations. The upper classes show good progress since the opening of the year, and the new fourth class has some promising material. New classes in physics, nautical astronomy, general history, and United States history have been formed this year.

The instruction during the first year includes arithmetic, English, geography, and drawing. That for the second year, English, algebra, geography, and drawing. That for the second year, English, algebra, geometry, geography, and drawing. That for the third year, English history, geometry, plane trigonometry, physics, mechanics, geography, and drawing. During the fourth and final year, the pupils are instructed in spherical trigonometry, nautical astronomy, navigation, seamanship, hydrographical drawing, general and United States history, and English. All classes are instructed in practical seamanship three times a week.

For the course in practical seamanship a mast has been erected in the school grounds and fitted with foresail and topsail. The pupils are frequently drilled at this to make them familiar with the nomenclature and the handling of ropes and It is impossible, however, to get sea experience from this, and it is greatly to be desired that the school be provided with a school ship at as early a date as is on commercial ships for actual experience in their future profession.

The first object is the Americanization of the students in language, habits of performing work, and general moral principles. The next thought, manner of performing work, and general moral principles. The next object is the technical education in seamanship, navigation, and kindred subjects. In view of the fact that the students had little, if any, satisfactory primary training before their admission to this school, it is deemed that very encouraging progress has been made.

The respect for authority and the physical development of the pupils are not unprovided for. Each school morning at 8 o'clock they are required to form in front of the school building and remain uncovered while the United States colors are hoisted. After this they are given twenty minutes "setting-up exercise." This drill, together with the exercise obtained by handling the sails and spars, has greatly improved the appearance and bearing of the students. As farther means of discipline, the students are formed between recitation periods by the officer of the day and are then marched to their several recitation rooms by their class leaders.

The school hours are from 8 until 1. This time is divided into six periods of forty minutes each, with five-minute intervals between the periods. The two larger classes are divided into two sections each, so that each instructor has during each period an average of 12 students. At the beginning of the school year the number of instructors was 5—2 American and 3 Filipino. There are now 5 instructors, 4 of whom are American and 1 Filipino, and in addition thereto the superintendent has

The methods of instruction, system of marks and records, and the discipline of the school are based on those of the United States Naval Academy at Annapolis. A card system for the keeping of marks and records has been introduced during the present year. Monthly and semiannual examinations have been held. Monthly reports of the efficiency and conduct of each pupil have been sent to the parent or guardian and have also been posted in the school building, that both students and instructors could see the results of the school work.

All the instruction in the school at present is given in English, with the exception of that in the class room of the remaining Filipino teacher. The change of the school language from Spanish to English has been an important step, and it is deemed that American methods, particularly in seamanship and navigation, are more direct, and in addition thereto the students are absorbing the wished-for American method of thought and action.

It is recommended that three or four recent graduates of the United States Naval Academy be secured as instructors for this school, that larger and more suitable quarters somewhere near the water be provided, and that a dormitory system be arranged for. The whole course should be extended and enriched and the discipline should be stricter.

It is with regret that the general superintendent learns that Lieut. Commander Knapp has been relieved from detail as superintendent of this school and ordered to the United States. Under his superintendency during the past year the school has made marked progress.

Manila Trade School.

The Manila trade school has at present 136 pupils, divided into classes as follows: Telegraphy, 74; drawing, 60; English, 57; carpentry, 29.

The pupils are scattered through Manila as follows:

Of this number, only 23 come from the north side of the river Pasig, showing very conclusively that the great body of Filipinos are not being reached in the efforts to give them a knowledge of modern industrial work.

The beginning of trade-school work in Manila has been delayed and hampered by many obstacles, some of them very unexpected. The Filipino people as a class, after years of Spanish rule, have the idea firmly embedded in their minds that manual labor is degrading and beneath their dignity. This is strikingly shown by the enrollment in the classes in telegraphy and drawing as compared with the very few in the carpentry class.

The location of the buildings assigned for use of the trade school is bad, in that it is far removed from the working class of Filipinos, who can not pay for transportation and who will not walk long distances. The school should be moved to a new location in a Filipino industrial center, either in Binondo or Tondo.

Cholera, as in the case of all other secondary schools, has played an important part in decreasing enrollment and attendance.

It has been impossible to purchase in this city a sufficient number of tools for the use of the various classes and for distribution to industrial classes in provincial high Orders for tools to be purchased in the States have been subject to very great and annoying delays.

The status of the various classes is given in the following quotation from the report of the principal, Mr. Ronald P. Gleason:

"Carpentry.—Up to the latter part of July we had four sets of carpenter tools and a few extras. They were a makeshift and hardly suited to the needs of the Filipinos. Since the arrival of the tools from the United States much more has been accomplished. The number of pupils taking this work to-day is 29.

"Drawing.—No drawing tools or supplies came until about the middle of July, so that up to that time nothing was accomplished. There are 60 pupils in the drawing classes at this time.

"Telegraphy.—The outfit for this department, with the exception of the tables and chairs, was furnished by the army. In order to make this a practical course the printed blanks and books for the keeping of such records as the student will be obliged to keep in any telegraph office in the Philippines have been ordered. is great need for a few typewriters, for in the modern telegraph office a typewriter is almost as necessary as the telegraphic instrument, and the students should have practice in using them. Seventy-four students are taking this course.

"Plumbing.—The tools for this work have arrived, but the classes in telegraphy now occupy the room set apart for this work. It is intended to move the classes in telegraphy to the north room of the northwest building. This room is now stacked full of lumber. A building is now being put in condition for the lumber, and the room will soon be cleared so that the classes can be established in plumbing.

"English.—The teacher who is to take charge of the plumbing work is at present engaged the full time in teaching English and mathematics to all who desire it. Many do not wish to study these branches here, as they go to the evening school and prefer to devote their full time to practical work. Fifty-seven attend these classes.

"Blacksmithing.—Requisitions for tools and supplies for this work were forwarded to the insular purchasing agent early last March. After many delays they were returned with the request that they be cut down. At this time all the funds had been withdrawn, and there was no appropriation available. The teacher who will take charge of this department is here. Neither room, tools, nor supplies are ready, but his services will be required in assisting in the drawing room and elsewhere. "Electricity.—The requisition for this work suffered the same fate as did that of the above. A teacher has been appointed to take charge of this course, but it is doubtful if he comes from the States.

"Requisitions.—A few requisitions for tools for outside work have been filled, and there is now on hand quite a number of sets of drawing instruments and a few sets of carpenter tools. There have also been ordered a number of whittling trays, with a small outfit, which will no doubt arrive soon. All these will be available for use in the provinces.

"Evening school.—As soon as possible after receiving the necessary tools and supplies evening classes in drawing and carpentry were started, two teachers giving their services five evenings a week. There being no possibility of receiving, under the new night-school attendance requirement, any pay for services rendered, the classes were kept open only three nights a week. The classes in drawing averaged for a number of nights over 20, and with an enrollment of 33. Since the rains have begun the classes are not quite as large. The rain is not the only damper, however, for there are not lamps enough properly to light the room. Immediately after the passage of the appropriation bill for the present quarter a requisition was put in for 10 Parker lamps or their equivalent, so that there might be light enough in all the rooms. Up to the present time no lamps have been received.

"The classes in carpentry have never been over 10. There should be evening classes carried on in connection with the trade-school work for the accommodation of a class of people who can not attend school in the daytime, but it does not seem fair to have the teachers give their services when the school day is fully occupied with the regular work. Under the present law that seems to be the only way if they are to be kept open."

EMERGENCY NORMALS.

In the provinces of Pampanga and Bataan, the supply of competent native teachers being insufficient and the ordinary daily instruction of teachers not materially assisting to fit aspirantes for these vacancies, small normal schools were opened at San Fernando, in Pampanga province, and at Balanga, in Bataan province. At the former school the attendance became nearly 50 within a week of starting, and the school continued in successful operation under the instruction of two American teachers until the long vacation. The school in Balanga had an enrollment at the same time of 25, and the work in this school was continued under the charge of one American teacher until the vacation. Since the vacation, during which the cholera epidemic prevented the holding of the vacation teachers' institutes in these provinces, the normal schools thus begun have been continued as integral parts of the provincial high schools established in these towns at the reopening of school work. These schools, it may be noted, although organized to supply purely local needs, were the first regular normals to be organized outside of Manila.

VACATION NORMAL INSTITUTES.

To of in a sufficient number of fairly efficient native teachers to supply the demand, and to teach them English and give them training in American methods, has been one of the most pressing needs of the school work. In pursuance of this plan, all American teachers have devoted one hour per day to this work, giving instruction to all native teachers within a convenient distance. While this work has been effective in its way, the necessity of assembling native teachers in larger bodies for more advanced work has been given much attention by the general superintendent and the division superintendents. In a small way the work was commenced during April and May of 1901, by vacation normal schools in Manila, Iba, and Laoag.

During the past year the arrival of large numbers of trained American teachers enabled plans to be made for much more efficient work during the long vacation, which in most provinces came during the months of April, May, and June, although some of the provinces had vacations at earlier or later dates on account of local conditions and needs.

The long vacation consisted of twelve weeks, during at least four of which the vacation normals were in session. In some cases the institutes were held at the beginning of vacation and in some provinces in the last month. The general idea was to have one such instruction school in each province, in special cases to be divided or consolidated, as conditions required. One large institute was planned for the entire island of Panay, but the impossibility of getting reasonable transportation and accommodations for the native teachers while attending the session, and the insular government not being able to furnish funds for this purpose, smaller schools were held at Iloilo, Capiz, and San Jose.

The following summary will show the location, inclusive dates, enrollment and attendance, together with the number of American teachers giving instruction. It should be remembered that the work along this line, while successful both in numbers and results, was performed in the face of difficulties of transportation, communication, and health which can not be conceived by a person not familiar with these islands. Just at the close of schools the cholera had broken out in Manila, spreading rapidly to the provinces, and for a time threatening not only the vacation work, but the regular school work at the recommencement of schools as well. In an everwidening circle the scourge has spread, until at the present time the Visayan group (Panay, Cebu, Negros, and Bohol) and the Ilocos provinces, in the north of the island of Luzon, are the provinces most afflicted. It will be noted that the schools for San Fernando, Malolos, Baliuag, Balanga, and Dagupan—in the most thickly populated parts of the archipelago—were forbidden to open, and it is estimated that the attendance at these five schools would have been nearly 1,000. Other schools were severely cut in attendance, or the term was shortened, by the same cause. The mail and transportation service (slow and unsatisfactory at best) was doubly crippled by the quarantines which were enforced on all travel, both by land and sea. For this reason it is impossible to give at this date all of the figures needed for the following table.

a Cholera very bad. In Nueva Caceres the men teachers became medical inspectors and fought the cholera, while the women teachers continued the school.

b School cut short one week, school closed by board of health on account of cholers.

Two native teachers were included in the teaching force.

Georgia session, attendance reduced by prevalence of dengue fever.

f The collection of inhabitants into the towns and forbidding of travel from place to place necessitated holding of many small institutes. The quality of the "reconcentration" can be judged.

g Laguna still under martial law, a gunboat was used to collect the native teachers and take them to and from the normal, commercial boats being prohibited in Laguna.

Necessarily much difference existed in the programme for these schools on account of the varying number of instructors, and more especially because of the limited capacity of the native teachers and aspirantes attending. In the smallest schools the subjects taught were arithmetic, geography, history (general, United States, and Filipino), English conversation and grammar, school methods and management. In addition to these, the larger and more advanced classes also received instruction in physiology and hygiene, botany, nature study, applied psychology, drawing, music, civil government.

In these vacation institutes the common branches were taken up with a view to teaching the subject-matter, and illustrating, as far as possible, correct methods.

Filipino teachers or candidates were often called upon to take charge of classes and teach subjects designated by the American teachers, criticism being invited from the other students upon their work and method. In some schools certain principles of pedagogy were illustrated and students were encouraged to discuss them in the English language.

An effort was made to discourage belief in a number of popular fallacies; as, for instance, the value of translation methods and the use of Spanish and Tagalog in Music, drawing, and physical exercise were also taught where a teacher was available for the purpose.

The division superintendents and principals in charge of these schools report a very noteworthy interest on the part of the pupils, who entered into the work with enthusiasm and displayed a commendable spirit of eagerness and friendly rivalry. The school work during the few months elapsing since the beginning of the schools for the present term shows a very fair increase in efficiency and interest as a result of these institutes.

In some divisions classes for conversation, to which were admitted a limited number, were held every afternoon after the regular hours. This was optional and proved very successful. Each American teacher met from 8 to 12 Filipino teachers, the object being to cultivate the habit of free and easy conversation. Subjects of conversation were chosen largely by the students, but it was always to be something worth talking about and in which all had a lively interest.

Many students who attended these normal institutes did so at great personal sacrifice. It was soon apparent that many who had come would not be able to continue through the month for lack of means. Many of the native teachers had received no salary since January 1, and only a comparatively few were paid up to date. Aspirantes, as a rule, were in a still worse condition, having no money and no hopes of receiving any soon. In Cebu a teachers' organization was formed, a contribution was made by the American and native teachers alike, the needs of the less fortunate were relieved, and 84 pesos were left in the treasury for the next year. The amounts paid to aspirantes and teachers are to be returned whenever they are able, the fund thus becoming self-renewing.

In many of the schools young men and young women studied together. At first many questioned the advisability, as it was a radical departure from the cutom of keeping the sexes separate during school work. The young women hesitated to enter the classes with the men, but after the first few days all embarrassment passed away and they were generally agreed that there was great advantage in the arrangement.

Mr. G. N. Brink, the division superintendent in charge, makes the following report: I am glad to report a very interesting and, I hope, profitable meeting of my American teachers.

All of my teachers were present, with the exception of three, whom I had excused because of illness, Mrs. Martin, Mr. Shoens, and Mr. Bond.

The sessions lasted three days, with a full attendance throughout. The papers were carefully prepared and gave evidence of much earnest thought and real interest in the subjects treated. The discussions following the papers were earnest and sug-Many side lights from the personal experiences of the teachers brightened the speeches and quickened the interest of all.

I feel sure that each teacher returning to his special field will carry with him many useful hints as to how he can best meet the conditions that confront him. Some have succeeded where others have failed, and their experience and the way in which they took up the problem and conquered it must prove helpfully suggestive to those who have not succeeded so well.

I inclose a copy of the programme, which was carried out entire, with the one exception of the address by Dr. Bryan.

We all regretted very much that neither you nor Dr. Bryan was able to be with us on account of the cholera quarantine.

The attendance was very nearly as good as in Iloilo, but the attention of the teachers was somewhat distracted on account of the disappearance of four young men teachers who had recently arrived in Cebu and who had gone into the mountain for a day's excursion, and whose fate was not learned until long afterwards.

PROVINCIAL SCHOOLS.

One of the most important parts of the work during the past half year has been the organization of provincial schools. Not alone is a free public secondary school an entirely new departure in these islands, but the organization of these schools has gone far toward impressing the influential natives with the idea that the American public schools are of interest to themselves as well as to the humbler people. The higher classes of Filipinos have a great love for the showy and ornamental, and while they prefer to send their children to a private school under the church authorities, yet the fact that the Americans are beginning to provide for the higher education—an education more complete and thorough than it is possible to obtain within the islands otherwise—is having its effect, and when it is possible to announce a free American university at Manila it is believed that the primary schools will reap much benefit in increased attendance of the children of the better class of Filipinos.

The foundation for the provincial high schools has been laid by the division superintendents during the past year; grammar classes were organized in public schools in several large towns under municipal support, but accepting pupils temporarily from other towns, and when in March of the present year an act was passed giving provincial boards power to provide for the erection or renting of buildings for such schools, and to provide funds for the other expenses, the division superintendents were nearly ready to make their definite recommendations and select their teachers in order to get the schools started in time for the beginning of the present

The amount of work connected with the organization of these higher schools can not adequately be described. It has been absolutely new work. Everything had to be created and provided. The American teachers and the text-books were furnished by the insular government, and the buildings, native teachers, furniture, and all other equipment by the provinces. The division superintendents, almost without exception, spent a large part of their vacation in assisting in the organizing of these schools and getting action by provincial authorities. Up to September 1 the following provincial high schools have been organized:

The course of study for these provincial high schools, while necessarily not uniform, provides academic, normal, commercial, industrial, and agricultural courses, the purpose being to fit students for the higher educational work of a general nature; to prepare for the university work to be offered later in Manila; to prepare Filipino teachers to carry on successfully the work of education; to educate for clerical positions, and to fit for the trades and agriculture. The academic course will include all the branches usually taught in grammar and high schools in the United States, with the addition of Spanish, for which there is still a large demand. As a rule, the teacher of Spanish will be a native of these islands, and as fast as the best teachers can be properly educated and imbued with American methods of teaching they will be used in many of the teaching positions in these schools.

A letter received from one of the most active and best division superintendents at the time these high schools were being organized summarizes well the attitude of the people toward the educational movement:

"I am forced to believe that the high school will be the strongest weapon we The primary schools are all have and will cover the weakest spot in our defenses. right; I feel safe as to them. In the country we are drawing everything our way. In cities, where church influence and private schools are strong, a serious task confronts us. We have not yet reached the best class of students. They want education. They are not opposed to us or to our schools. They simply realize that we can not yet give them what they want. Some of them are in Manila in church schools. em are in Manila in our schools. A great many of them are here in private. They came out to our normal and were among the best workers. The lew of them are in Manila in our schools. powers of the church here are strong, but latent at present. They are not working against us, but are watching us. I firmly believe that if we do not reach the class described church schools will be established. This would be a serious blow to our work, as this is a strong church town. I consider myself in a position to be posted upon this point.

"The local institute represents the power of the private school. It has a fluctuating attendance, a curriculum embracing everything from elementary work to the history of philosophy. It is a self-supporting affair and is not on a very firm finan-This class of students do not need Spanish, but they demand it. I have been uncertain upon this point until recently. I now believe we should accept the situation. If we do not furnish a course in Spanish, some one else will.

"The principal of this institute is a man who would be in every way desirable. He is a finely educated man. He speaks and teaches Spanish and native dialect He is also a first-class Latin teacher. The ease with which he puts his dialect or Spanish into Latin is a revelation to us Americans. He has a strong following and is the brains and backbone of the institute.

"As for American teachers for the high school, I feel that the best we have is none too good. Here, even more than at any other place in the field, we need an organizer. We must get out among the people and present our case.

The organizing of the school at Iloilo, where conditions were very favorable, shows the eagerness of the people for this class of schools, and incidentally speaks of the paralysis temporarily imposed by the cholera:

"I have the honor to submit the following report of the tributary normal school, organized at Iloilo on June 16 of this year.

"The provincial board, being in full sympathy with the idea of establishing a normal school at Iloilo, rented an excellent building at a cost of $125 gold per month and equipped the same with 200 school desks, teachers' desks, and is now having made 40 benches with a seating capacity of 300 pupils. The board has at all times shown a willingness to comply with any reasonable request for assistance.

"Circular letters were sent to the presidentes in Panay requesting them to announce in their respective pueblos the opening of a normal school at Iloilo on June 16 and that pupils would be matriculated on and after June 2. The school was opened with an attendance of 150 pupils. Matriculations were kept open until the enrollment had reached 288, representing 40 towns from Panay, 6 from Negros Occidental, and 1 from Romblon. Owing to the bad weather, very largely, the average attendance was kept down to about 250 for the month of August.

"The greatest enthusiasm prevailed throughout the school among teachers and pupils. A literary society was formed, made up principally of the best pupils in the school, which has assisted very greatly in maintaining an interest and spreading the reputation of the school. Following out a suggestion made to the presidentes, many pupils formed clubs for the purpose of reducing living expenses, and just before the outbreak of cholera arrangements were under way to accommodate 100 members with a Filipino and an American teacher in charge of the club. With the outbreak of the cholera about August 28 the pupils began to leave, obeying the urgent requests sent in by parents for them to return. On September 2, in compliance with request made by board of health, the school was closed until cholera situation was so well in hand that the danger was practically over."

As these provincial high schools draw their students from all over the province, and in some cases from neighboring provinces as well, provision has been made by the provincial or municipal authorities in many cases for dormitories for the pupils, or for the provision of suitable board and lodging at a reasonable price on the club plan. These arrangements are made by the provincial or municipal authorities, but the teachers of the school have general oversight of the quarters.

INDUSTRIAL AND AGRICULTURAL INSTRUCTION.

In some parts of the islands, particularly in the provinces of Benguet, Lepanto-Bontoc, Nueva Vizcaya, and in Mindanao, the nature of the tribes makes especially important the instruction along industrial and agricultural lines, rather than along the lines of ordinary primary instruction. Consequently the provincial schools to be established in these places will conform largely to these necessities. In many of the high schools these branches will be given as regular courses, but the work will naturally proceed along more advanced lines in the civilized and more highly educated provinces. The following extract from a letter in reference to the industrial work at Iloilo will give a view of the latter conditions:

"In asking what courses should be included at the beginning, the consensus of opinion was that carpentry, blacksmithing, mechanical and architectural drawing, wood working, and machinery should be put in at once. Special emphasis was laid upon the last. A number of business men said it was by far the most important, as at the present time it is necessary for the haciendero to send to Manila whenever a piece of his machinery breaks for a man to go out to his hacienda to see what is the matter, and thus is often caused a delay of days and sometimes weeks.

"The editors in Iloilo make a strong plea for the immediate establishment of printing. They say that they have to send to Manila for Tagalog printers; that these Tagalogs refuse to teach the Visayans their trade, and consequently much ill feeling is aroused. They wish this taught their own countrymen as soon as possible. Its worth as an educational work will be great; however, it is not of prominent interest as are the courses in carpentry, blacksmithing, wood work, etc."

A view of conditions in the Igorrote provinces illustrates the opposite extreme of industrial work. In forwarding plans and specifications for a building to be erected to accommodate a combined agricultural and industrial school for the province of Bontoc, the division superintendent gives this interesting information:

"The province is entirely mountainous and reached from the coast by a single trail, passable for horses and in very good condition. This trail leaves the military road at Candon, Ilocos Sur, and passes through Salcedo, Concepcion, Angaque, Cervantes, and then over a difficult and very mountainous route through several Igorrote villages to Bontoc. The time required to reach Bontoc from Candon is about two days, easy riding, to Cervantes (the capital of the province of Lepanto-Bontoc) and two days from there to Bontoc.

"The entire province is inhabited by Igorrotes. So much has already been written about the Igorrotes that I shall not encumber this report with attempts to describe their habits or customs. It lies within the scope of the report, however, to say that they are not in any social condition to be benefited by any attempts to educate them along the lines laid down for the more civilized tribes of Filipinos. They are centuries behind the other races in race development.

"I think it would be wise, in entering upon a plan to educate the Igorrote, to take account of the backward condition of the race and adapt the methods to the needs. Their homes are wretched and filthy. Their habits of dress and eating are shiftless and unsatisfactory from a civilized point of view. Their filthy personal habits can not but breed disease. Their methods of providing the means of livelihood are primitive. They are, however, industrious in a measure and their conditions may be improved by very simple industrial and sanitary instruction.

"For this reason I believe the school suggested herein is the most feasible plan for undertaking their improvement. The plan recommended to build or establish in Bontoc, the capital of the province, an industrial school which will accomodate about 150 to 200 boys and perhaps half as many girls; to provide for the pupils to live at the school under the control of an American teacher who shall have the responsibility of their supervision, both as to their studies and their living, cooking, eating, clothing, etc.; to teach them by actual direction the better ways of living, possible under their circumstances, seems the most hopeful way of bettering them by means of education.

"Their soil is productive and the climate is good as any on the archipelago. Their chief products at present are rice and a kind of sweet potato. They display rather remarkable understanding and diligence in the cultivation of their rice. The tillable land is all in very steep and narrow mountain valleys. The Igorrotes have terraced the sides of these valleys, building up the sides of the terraces with stone walls and directing the small mountain streams into them in such a way that all the rice land is admirably irrigated. The sweet potatoes are cultivated on the sides of the mountains and are produced in abundance. The soil and climate are such as would make a great variety of products possible. There is already grown in various places a small quantity of cacao and coffee. There is no reason why live stock should not thrive, as there is an abundance of grazing and water.

"The following is an extract from the letter of Mr. Smith accompanying the estimates for the school:

"There is much in the furnishing and equipping the school here that can be made in Bontoc by the boys and girls, and of materials that can be secured by the natives; the boys and girls can have the same things in their homes when they leave school if they so desire. In this line are the dishes and beds. We will have only to ask the Department to furnish us with knives, forks, spoons, blankets, and domestic (cloth). It is estimated that we will need 100 each of knives, forks, and spoons; 1,000 yards of domestic, 100 blankets, 2,500 yards of cloth for clothing, which could be made up by the school. I think nine-tenths of all the work can and should be done by the pupils of the school, and that everything should be made of material that can be obtained by the native and is within his reach in his present condition. It is my idea to have the school make as many as possible of the things needed and used, and to have the life of the pupil approach as near that of the civilized man as is practical for the Igorrote under the present conditions of the entire people.

"I think that the department ought to be asked to furnish us with at least 50 sheep, 50 goats, 10 cows, 10 carabaos, 10 mares, and 10 pigs.

"'I do not think it advisable to try to get all the pupils here at the opening of the school, but only a sufficient number to carry on the work of construction and organizing. One hundred can be cared for temporarily, so the workshop, kitchen, pigpens, fences, and other improvements can be made before the large building is commenced. If the appropriation is not large enough to complete it this year, it can be done next year, and the boys will know more about using tools.

"It appears to me that Mr. Smith has put the plan very plainly. I would recommend, however, that the appropriation asked for be considerably above the figure given in the accompanying bill. This includes only materials. There will be expenses for tools, equipments, and unforeseen expenses, as well as some necessary outlay for labor which can not all be furnished by unskilled Igorrote boys. In fact, I question whether a great deal of the construction work can be done by them satisfactorily without considerable training."

The variety of natives in Mindanao of the lower types of civilization gives rise to peculiar conditions and leads to a consideration by the division superintendent of the

"I believe the introduction of industrial education among the regular Christian or Filipino population to be feasible, but attended with many difficulties, chief of which is the Filipino mental attitude toward work. The line of least resistance with the older pupils will run along the industries and occupations held in most esteem by their parents. These vary in different localities, but never include the work done chiefly by the pagans of the region involved—much less that done by the Mohammedans. In Cuyo Mr. Stone has found a satisfactory beginning in pottery, and I expect Mr. Tarbox to find this same line satisfactory in Cagayan. In other localities other industries will form the center. The cultivation of the soil should begin with the things the growing of which is exteemed by the people, even if this confines us to floriculture, as it will in certain localities. This can be followed with the introduction of new things, and in the course of time we may hope to reach the proper cultivation of standard crops, in one locality camotes (which can be indefinitely improved), in another cassava (which is far from its best development here), and so on, in each case adapting the work to the local needs. The work for the big girls is already laid out in most places, and consists in sewing, needlework, fancywork, and in some cases weaving. This furnishes a basis for a beginning. Girls also take an interest in gardening, especially flower gardening. The little children do not feel so much the home prejudices and they can be handled more easily. Pandanus leaf work will be found very interesting and valuable to them, if wisely The simple weaving of mats will soon tire them; but the mat work can be made into an endless variety of beautiful and useful things of which these people know little. Grasses and various fibers will be useful in similar lines and developments.

"The 'New Christians' have no prejudices against work, and they are anxious for help. All we shall have to trouble about with them is the decision as to what would be most profitable to them and how to give it them. They are very largely agricultural people, and their form of industrial education should be governed accordingly.

"The various Moro tribes vary greatly in their manners of life, and consequently in their needs. At Zamboanga their work must be largely mechanical. In Jolo and the regions roundabout the mechanical and the agricultural elements should be combined. I am longing to get into the region of Lake Lanso, as I feel confident we can help the people there. Their needs seem from this distance to be largely agricultural, as are their tastes. But for the present we can do so little for the Moros that they hardly need be taken into account in forming general schemes for immediate action.

"The pagans are nearly all agricultural peoples, although in other respects they differ greatly. We have done absolutely nothing for them as yet, and shall be able to do so little for the present that they, like the Moros, need not enter into our general calculations.

"The first and most important item in the equipment needed is the mental equipment of the teacher. This applies especially to the American teacher. That teacher who fails to recognize in this the most serious and important work he has to do will hardly do anything worth the doing. Next to the attitude which will lead a teacher to give this work his most serious attention and constant thought is knowledge of the details of such work and skill with the hands. In most cases we must trust the Filipino teacher to furnish these, while the American teacher furnishes general guidance and enthusiasm. We shall have to bear in mind that the Filipino teacher shares the general Filipino prejudices on the subject of work, and needs encourage ment to feel the importance of what he is set to do.

"The equipment in the way of tools and apparatus required can not be determined till we know exactly what is to be done in the several localities. For pandanus and allied work the teacher ought at least to have a pocketknife worth a quarter—two or three such knives will be found convenient and useful. A few 'Diamond dyes' will be required, but it will be possible to pay for these out of the product of sales of manufactured articles in nearly all cases. A sewing outfit, with such material as it will be necessary to buy, will average probably a cost, by the year, of 50 cents (United States) per girl; but the details of this requirement can be made out by others better than by me. A dozen mattocks or pickaxes, a dozen hoes, two rakes, and two spades will be found a fair outfit with which to begin gardening. Of course seeds, in addition to those to be found in the immediate neighborhood, will be needed to be seed to be seed to be seed to be seed to be seed to be seed to be seed to be seed to be seed to be seed to be seed to be seed to be seed to be seed to be seed to be seed to be seed to be seed to be seed to be seed to be seed to be seed to be seed to be seed to be seed to be seed to be seed to be seed to be seed to be seed to be seed to be seed to be seed to be seed to be seed to be seed to be seed to be seed to be seed to be seed to be seed to be seed to be seed to be seed to be seed to be seed to be seed to be seed to be seed to be seed to be seed to be seed to be seed to be seed to be seed to be seed to be seed to be seed to be seed to be seed to be seed to be seed to be seed to be seed to be seed to be seed to be seed to be seed to be seed to be seed to be seed to be seed to be seed to be seed to be seed to be seed to be seed to be seed to be seed to be seed to be seed to be seed to be seed to be seed to be seed to be seed to be seed to be seed to be seed to be seed to be seed to be seed to be seed to be seed to be seed to be seed to be seed to be seed to be seed to be seed to be seed to be seed to be seed to be seed to be seed to be seed to be seed to be seed to be seed to be seed to be seed to be seed to be seed to be seed to be seed to be seed to be seed to be seed to be seed to be seed to be seed to be seed to be seed to be seed to be seed to be seed to be seed to be seed to be seed to be seed to be seed to be seed to be seed to be seed to be seed to be seed to be seed to be seed to be seed to be seed to be A pocketknife is a good tool with which to begin wood carving. Pottery work can be done without a wheel, but this latter will be found very desirable before the work has progressed far. Bamboo splints can be made into additional tools with the help of a knife only. Should clay work develop along artistic lines, as I have no doubt it will in some cases, essentially no additional tools will be required except those which can be made by the artists themselves. As to the necessary kiln for burning clay work, I shall have to refer you to Mr. C. H. Stone, who has had experience in that line in this division. Finally, let me express my strong conviction that it is very desirable, from the educational point of view, to do this work with the simplest practicable apparatus and tools, and to give preference to that which can be made on the ground with ordinary everyday tools."

NIGHT SCHOOLS.

Within the past year great progress has been made in the educating of adult Filipinos in English and the common branches by means of the night schools which have been held throughout the archipelago. The first night schools were opened in the city of Manila in September, 1900, and they were so successful that with the establishment of regular day schools in the provinces in the first half of 1901 steps were taken to provide for night schools as well. The salary at this work was fixed at $15 a month for conducting evening schools an hour and a half three times a week and is paid by the insular government. Outside of the city of Manila the night school-teachers were almost invariably the regular day teachers, but in the city of Manila the services of a considerable number of well-educated civil employees in the various government offices were obtained, together with some regular day school-teachers as instructors and principals.

The growth of these schools has been rapid, and at the end of the last school year in nearly every town where there was an American there was at least one night school. During the year ending with June, 1902, 484 teachers had taught night schools. Of the teachers who have separated from the service 71 had taught night schools, leaving approximately 413 individual night schools conducted for a longer or shorter portion of the school year. Of this number probably 300 had been in operation during the school year. The enrollment, being reported only to the division superintendents, is not accurately known at this office, but is between 15,000 and 20,000,

The city of Manila bears all the expenses of its night schools, including salaries of the American teachers. The following list gives the night schools of Manila during the last half of the school year just passed:

Some of these schools, notably the Victoria night school, teach higher arithmetic, geography, history, bookkeeping, stenography, typewriting, and telegraphy. In these advanced classes the Filipinos are being prepared for the civil-service examinations while at the same time carrying on their daily work as before. Already a considerable number have taken civil positions, their qualifications including bookkeeping, typewriting, and even stenography, and many others are working industriously toward the same goal.

In the provinces the instruction in English is the principal subject, and in connection with the learning of the language the common branches are taken up, both as a direct help in the teaching and as additional training. In this work the pupils are constantly drilled in conversation, and in reading, writing, and spelling the language.

The people attending these night schools represent every occupation, from the poorest field laborers to the presidentes, and even the provincial governors in two or three cases, all with a practical object in view in studying the English language. The interest shown in these schools by the older persons, less to be expected than in the case of children, is deep and continued.

On July 14 an act passed by the commission contained a clause providing that "No night school shall be maintained either in the city of Manila or elsewhere at the public expense in which the average attendance is not at least 25 pupils over the age of 14 years." By the operation of this law many night schools, both in Manila and in the provinces, have been discontinued, and it is impossible at this date to give the number of schools now meeting the full requirements. Many of the more important schools, composed of the presidente, councilors, and principal men of the pueblo, were accomplishing a great amount of good, not only in the actual instruction, but in securing intimate acquaintance between the teachers and the influential people of their stations. These schools, for the most part, fall below the required average attendance of 25, and hence must be discontinued, unless, as is the case in several places, the American teacher still conducts the class because of his interest in the work and the results which can be accomplished, although debarred from receiving any compensation for this extra work.

The general result, however, has been to force a large attendance at the expense of the quality of the work. It is possible to fill up the schools by active solicitation, but the result is a loss of the attendance of the better classes because of the lack of attention that can be given to individual needs, and in part to the class distinctions which remain as a legacy from the former régime. The classes become too large for one teacher, and quantity is gained at the expense of quality. An average attendance of 15 for each teacher is far preferable, from all points of view, than the present requirement. The advanced classes, which it is impossible to recruit up to the required attendance even in Manila, are necessarily being discontinued or conducted in connection with other classes, whereby their value is impaired and the students

THE SUPERVISORY FORCE.

To the division superintendents is due the credit of much of the enormous amount of field work done during the past year. Considerable freedom has been given to them, owing to the diverse conditions and needs of their respective fields, and the amount of work accomplished, under novel and discouraging conditions, among an alien and heterogeneous people whose customs, languages, and even habits of mind are diverse and all different from those that exist anywhere within the United States or the West Indies, is remarkable.

Except in cases where sickness has rendered a short rest absolutely imperative, the division superintendents have applied themselves to their work without intermission, with great energy, and with a success that is apparent on the most casual examination of the work accomplished since their arrival in the islands. The general superintendent can not too earnestly commend their steadfast devotion to their duties in the face of hardship, disease, and the debilitating effects of a tropical

While the number and extent of the school division has remained the same, except by extension of boundaries on account of new sections being occupied by the teaching force, the personnel of the supervisory force has changed somewhat. On account of declinations by persons appointed as division superintendents, three new appointments to that grade were made in September, 1901: G. A. O'Reilly, of San Francisco; H. C. Hall, of Menlo Park, Cal., and R. J. O'Hanlon, of Milwaukee, Wis. Of these three, Mr. Hall has been detained in the United States by illness, and Mr. O'Hanlon, after a few months' service as division superintendent of Bohol, returned to the United States on account of severe illness of his wife.

Of the division superintendents reported a year ago Dr. David P. Barrows, city superintendent of schools in Manila, resigned in October, 1901, to become chief of the bureau of non-Christian tribes, and Mr. Mason S. Stone was transferred from Negros to Manila to take the city superintendency. Mr. G. W. Beattie was assigned Negros to Manila to take the city superintendency. to supervise Negros; the assignments of Mr. G. N. Brink to Panay, Mr. David Gibbs to the Pampanga division, and Mr. Molton A. Colton to the Cavite division were made permanent. Mr. Jesse George resigned late in 1901 to take up his work in the law department of the insular government, and Mr. G. A. O'Reilly was assigned to the Ilocos Sur division. Mr. H. G. Squier resigned to accept position as assistant postmaster at Manila early in 1902, and Mr. W. H. Hilts was transferred from the Camarines division to take charge of the widely separated islands of the Romblon division. The vacancy in the Camarines division was filled by the appointment of Mr. W. B. Freer, previously a deputy division superintendent in Nueva Vizcaya. The appointment of Mr. T. W. Thomson, of Nueva Ecija division, was made permanent in May, 1902, and Mr. L. T. Gibbens, formerly acting division superintendent in Poles of the Company of the Company of the Company of the Company of the Company of the Company of the Company of the Company of the Company of the Company of the Company of the Company of the Company of the Company of the Company of the Company of the Company of the Company of the Company of the Company of the Company of the Company of the Company of the Company of the Company of the Company of the Company of the Company of the Company of the Company of the Company of the Company of the Company of the Company of the Company of the Company of the Company of the Company of the Company of the Company of the Company of the Company of the Company of the Company of the Company of the Company of the Company of the Company of the Company of the Company of the Company of the Company of the Company of the Company of the Company of the Company of the Company of the Company of the Company of the Company of the Company of the Company of the Company of the Company of the Company of the Company of the Company of the Company of the Company of the Company of the Company of the Company of the Company of the Company of the Company of the Company of the Company of the Company of the Company of the Company of the Company of the Company of the Company of the Company of the Company of the Company of the Company of the Company of the Company of the Company of the Company of the Company of the Company of the Company of the Company of the Company of the Company of the Company of the Company of the Company of the Company of the Company of the Company of the Company of the Company of the Company of the Company of the Company of the Company of the Company of the Company of the Company of the Company of the Company of the C in Bohol, was appointed division superintendent therefor in June, upon the resignation of Mr. O'Hanlon.

In only one instance has a person appointed as division superintendent proved unsatisfactory, One man, of high attainments and excellent recommendations, arrived in the islands, accompanied by a bad report as to his conduct on the transport, and his conduct after arriving in Manila was such as to make his assignment as division superintendent impossible. The local conditions in these islands are such as to tend to a general lowering of the moral tone—isolation, surroundings of a lower grade of morality, and especial temptation to indulge in alcoholic beverages—and, as in all cases of opening of new fields, the presence of a rougher, more lawless class of Americans and other white people. Not only has the American teacher to be a teacher in the ordinary sense, but he must, in a great measure, be the example of American civilization, and no pains have been spared to realize this ideal. To place Americans and natives alike under the charge of a superintendent who is unable to control himself when first reporting for duty would be manifestly absurd. After due hearing he was therefore discharged and returned to the United States.

The list of division superintendents September 1, 1902, is as follows:

Division superintendent appointed, H. C. Hall.

The deputy division superintendents authorized by act 232 were gradually appointed as the abilities of the various teachers became better known, until the list stands at present: S. P. R. Thomas, Manila; C. H. Covell, San Jose, Antique; E. A. Coddington, Capiz, Capiz; E. G. Turner, Iloilo, Iloilo; Samuel T. Lee, Bacolod, Occidental Negros; D. C. Briggs, Surigao, Surigao; Frederick W. Abbott, Davao, Davao; H. G. Lamson, Cuyo Island, Calamianes; W. A. Wedgeworth, Canaman, Camarines; Stephen W. Ford, Albay; Sebern S. McVay, Arayat, Pampanga; W. A. Preuitt, Bulacan, Bulacan; C. W. Guerin, Balanga, McVay, Arayat, Pampanga; W. A. Freutt, Bulacan, Bulacan; C. W. Guerin, Balanga, Bataan; Maxwell L. McCullough, Dagupan, Pangasinan; Frank R. Goodale, Bangued, Abra; A. L. Burnell, Lalloc, Cagayan; H. B. Fernald, Cauayan, Isabela; Hammond H. Buck, Cavite, Cavite; J. C. Muerman, Lucena, Tayabas; G. P. Morrill; Batangas, Batangas; B. G. Bleasdale, Pasig, Rizal; Edwin Engene Fisher, Santa Cruz, Laguna; George E. Walk, Romblon, Romblon; James D. Barry, Boac, Marinduque.

While the idea of the framer of the act authorizing these deputies was that they should be regularly engaged in instruction, in charge of one of the larger schools, it became necessary early in the year 1902 to instruct the division superintendents to utilize them for the present in the work of active organization and supervision. sistent and frequent complaints had reached the general superintendent that American teachers were not punctual in attendance; were not showing proper interest in their teaching; were giving too much time to society or to dabbling in business ventures; that some were not preparing their lessons properly; were careless in dress and not setting good examples of conduct for the Filipino teachers. It was recognized that these criticisms applied to a small minority, and in some cases were founded only on hearsay. Teachers were arriving in considerable numbers by every transport from the United States, and must be stationed where their services could best be utilized; they needed personal help and direction in getting settled and obtaining a grasp on local conditions; barrio schools must be organized and arrangements made for oversight of the same, and special reports of misconduct, inattention to duty, or other fault of omission or commission must be investigated immediately. Division superintendents were accordingly instructed to so arrange their own work and that of their deputies that every school could be inspected once a fortnight during the critical period.

Upon receiving instructions in May from the secretary of public instruction that these deputies should be actually engaged in instruction, as specified in the law, instructions were issued to assign them to schools and require them to teach except when necessary for them to be engaged in the work of inspection and organization.

The principal work of the division superintendent and his deputies in these islands is along an altogether different line than exists in the United States. The work is still in a formative period—a period of organization and rapid upbuilding. In addition to obtaining a thorough knowledge of the field by personal travel and investigation, in order properly to station and instruct American teachers, the division superintendent still has to organize municipal school boards, labor to create an interest in the public schools, especially among the influential classes, who have always been accustomed to support private schools for their children, to urge personally and, in some cases, to plan and superintend the building, renting or repairing of buildings for the schools, to select native teachers (frequently from very poor material and against the personal preferences of the native officials), to overcome irregularity of attendance, to push the work of education into the barries, to forward text-books, furniture, and supplies, all of which requires not only great energy, much tact and considerable hardship, but, on account of the lack of transportation and the lack of initiative on the part of the natives, a long time. All this is in addition to the ordinary duties which would naturally fall within the scope of a superintendent's duties. Supervision in these islands means organization, not merely inspection.

The question of the necessity of close supervision by means of deputies depends upon the character and ability of American and native teachers, on local sentiment, the progress of the work, and largely on geographical considerations. At present this matter is entirely in the hands of the division superintendents, under instructions to require deputies to be actually engaged in teaching except where imperative to make special journeys. The legislation proposed by the secretary of public instruction, providing for double the number of divisions at present authorized, will go far toward settling this important question.

The following extracts from letters written by the division superintendents will exemplify some of the difficulties to be met:

"There can be no doubt of the need of the constant supervision of the deputy division superintendents of Rizal and Laguna. They need their entire strength for that work, and it would hamper their efficiency greatly to divide their minds between supervision and teaching, except such teaching as they may give to classes on their supervisory visits. I can hardly overestimate the good done by the deputies in organizing and regulating the school affairs of this division, and I very earnestly recommend that they be continued altogether in the discharge of their duties as supervisors."

"In Pangasinan Province there are 37 pueblos; in Tarlac, 17, and in Zambales, 25. Pangasinan's length and breadth are, roughly speaking, 60 and 30 miles; Tarlac's, 40 and 30 miles; Zambales's, 110 and 22 miles.

"Of the 79 pueblos in these three provinces I have visited, personally, 69. The 10 which I have not visited are small and insignificant. Some of the pueblos I have visited several times.

"To make the tour of Pangasinan Province with anything like satisfactory inspection, thirty days of hard travel are required; for Tarlac Province, nine days, and for Zambales, twenty-five days, making a total of seventy-four days.

"The office work of a division superintendent is heavy. Since January 1, 1902, I have sent out sixteen circular letters to every pueblo. Many of these circulars are sent in duplicate, one in Spanish to the presidentes and city councils and one in English to the American teacher in charge. In addition to this I have endeavored to answer every letter received at this office from teachers, American and native, or from the presidentes, which in any way called for a reply. The relations of this office with the provincial treasurers make it necessary to furnish them with duplicates of perhaps half my correspondence with native officials.

The quarterly property returns sent to the auditor require much time in preparation, and at one period we were unavoidably nearly three months behind in this

"From the above statements it seems to me that it is evident that the deputy division superintendents should be allowed approximately three-fourths of their time to visit and inspect their pueblos. Under such an arrangement I shall be able, with their assistance, to give each pueblo rather close attention."

"I desire to respectfully recommend that deputy division superintendents be required to devote all their time to the visitation of schools and to instructing local officials in their duties.

"In Nueva Ecija, one of the provinces of this division, there are now 45 native teachers appointed and 16 Americans. There should be about 20 more native teachers in various barrios. Supervision, to be of value, requires time. On account of distances and difficulties of transportation it is a physical impossibility to visit more than an average of 2 of these 61 teachers per day, when the sole object is school supervision. Now, during the formative period it is absolutely necessary to spend some time with school boards and municipal officers, urging them to do their duty by the schools and explaining what that duty is. If the superintendent accomplishes what he desires, it is often necessary to stay in a pueblo some days and work up a sentiment in favor of progress. Now, while we are having schoolhouses built, and desks made, and school boards educated, it is necessary to spend more time in the pueblos than will be required later, when the main work will be school supervision. There are also many barrios that have not been visited and their wants or needs discovered. Under present conditions, if the supervisor looks after all matters requiring attention, he can not average more than one school per day.

"If Mr. B— and I devote all our time to visitation we could visit all the schools of this province once a month. (Each school should be visited at least twice per month.) But there are three other provinces in this division that require some attention and all the office work which must be attended to. I am not satisfied with my administration of this office, because there are so many things that should be done that I can not find the time to do."

"In my division, particularly the coast provinces, Ilocos Sur and La Union, the entire time of the deputies is required for inspection of schools. I have in Ilocos Sur 20 towns, spread over a distance of 75 miles. The problem of transportation is an extremely difficult one. This work alone is almost enough to take up the time of one man. The schools in these towns are large. The enrollment runs as follows:

460, 243, 256, 97, 101, 224, 100, 129, 233, 148, 101, 129, 280, 304, 154, 90, 356, 135, 166, The percentage of attendance in these schools will average, I believe, 75. In addition to this we have an immense barrio work, the weight of which will fall largely upon the deputy. In a single town we have 30 barrio schools in operation, in charge of teachers regularly appointed by me. The attendance in some of these barrio schools runs as high as 150. It is my wish to be able to supply all of these barrio schools with American text-books for the coming year. I view this barrio work and its possibilities as the big end of the school system in the Ilocano provinces. All through the provinces towns have from ten to forty substantial barrios, in the greater part of which schools are needed. We have done considerable work with these barrio schools, but have only commenced to realize its magnitude. If I were better supplied with American teachers I would feel disposed to ask for two provincial deputies instead of one. The question of teaching, in addition to the work of supervision and inspection, is entirely out of reason. In the province of Union practically the same condition exists. All of the time of the deputy is required upon the road. There, too, the possibilities of barrio work loom up. deputy division superintendent who attends to business is the hardest-worked man in the division. I spend every moment of time that I can spare in travel, but find that it is absolutely impossible for me to keep in proper touch with the work with less than the full assistance of the deputies. In the mountain provinces the schools are not so large, nor do they require so much inspection. The work, however, is much more difficult. Travel is a serious matter. The supply question is perhaps the most serious one with which the mountain teachers are concerned. great majority of cases the teachers are unable to secure provisions. In Benguet, for instance, I fear that actual starvation would result if some active deputy were not able to supply commissaries from the coast.

"In general, I would say that I consider it an absolute impossibility for my deputies to engage to any extent in teaching without serious injury to the schools."

"I wish to state that in order to meet the desire of the department in inspecting each school at least once a month it will be necessary for the deputies in this division to spend their entire time in this work. Iloilo Province is about 140 miles long and 40 miles wide in its widest part. In this territory are scattered 51 pueblos with more than 2,000 barrios. The population of the province is estimated at 400,000, a large part of which is living in the barrios. As there are no good nor even fair roads in this island with the exception of a few miles that have been built by the military and civil officials, transportation is always difficult to secure and exceedingly slow when secured.

"We are further hindered by the decision of the Commission which refuses to permit superintendents to furnish their own transportation and to charge a reasonable amount for its use. If permitted, this would enable us to provide ourselves with good horses, saddles, etc., and thus equip ourselves to overcome some of the difficulties presented by local conditions. Under the present ruling, we are obliged to ask means of transportation from the towns. A large majority of them have no vehicles of any kind; many do not even have saddles. In others it is impossible to get a horse with any life or strength in him, and we are thus obliged to lose time both in waiting for transportation and in using it, because the transportation when secured is so poor. All of these things make the work of inspection of schools slow.

"I very much question if a deputy will be able to inspect all the schools in Hoilo Province once each month. In Capiz Province conditions are very similar to those in Hoilo Province. Though the field is not quite so large, it will take all of the deputy superintendent's time to cover it in one month. This province has 34 pueblos scattered over a territory 100 miles long by 40 miles wide. The roads in this province are worse than those in the province of Hoilo. Scarcely any bridges are to be found, and between many of the towns the roads are little more than footpaths.

"In Antique Province the work of the deputy can be done more easily. I believe he can cover the ground and visit each of the 24 towns with ease in a month, but he will have little for a great time.

will have little if any spare time.

"In addition to this work of visiting the schools it is quite essential that the deputy visit at some time all of the principal barrios in his province, in order to secure a clear comprehension of his field and its needs. It is not unusual to find three or more large barrios in close proximity to each other which will furnish a larger aggregate school population than the pueblo to which they belong. In such cases schools could be established in the central barrio with excellent results.

"It is quite impossible for the division superintendent to visit barrios generally. I estimate, allowing for the time consumed in traveling and one day for the actual work in each town, that it will take me six months to visit each of the towns, 106, in this division. This, added to the office work, which is constantly increasing, makes it all but impossible for me to visit some of the more distant schools more than once a year. This fact makes the inspection work of the deputies all the more necessary.

"I hope the act providing that the deputies shall be actually engaged in teaching may be so amended as to make it possible for them to devote all of their time to the distinctive work of the deputy superintendent wherever this may be found necessary."

A division superintendent who has had many years' experience in the Indian school work in the United States, besides experience in two widely differing sections of Luzon, discusses the supervision of the native teachers in an interesting manner. The point here considered is one which within the next few months will become vital and increasingly important when the force of Filipino teachers is increased and the school attendance begins to compare favorably with the ratio in settled countries. As the policy of placing Filipino teachers more and more in charge of schools continues to develop, the American teachers will naturally be withdrawn from elementary work, concentrated in normal and other secondary schools, and trained, experienced American teachers will naturally assume in large measure the relations suggested in the following letter:

"The great weakness of the system of instruction as practiced in the public schools of this division is lack of supervision of the work of the native teachers. Each Filipino teacher has his or her own classes, sometimes in the same room with the American teacher, but more frequently in a separate room. The American has his own classes also, and his entire time is given to personal teaching, without intermission. True, the American may sometimes take the class of the Filipino, but in that case the latter takes in exchange the class of the former. Both are busy the entire time. American teacher has no time nor opportunity to observe and criticise the work and methods of the native, and the native entirely lacks opportunity of learning by observation of the methods of the American.

"Under these conditions it is impossible for the Filipino teacher to improve and progress as he should. He can never become a strong teacher by this system. the teachers' class he will improve in English, and he may also learn, theoretically, of new and correct methods of teaching and management; but he needs help in putting this knowledge into practical use in applying the methods. Because of the lack of it both pupils and teacher suffer loss, as has been particularly impressed upon me recently in numbers of different cases.

"My solution of the difficulty is to relieve the American teacher of regular teaching, so that he will not be tied down to a class of children every moment of his time, and thus enable him to make his work supervisory. To do this it will be necessary in many cases to employ additional Filipino teachers. The American teacher then must visit constantly the different departments of the school, each of which is under a native teacher, carefully observe the work and methods of the latter, and make notes, either mentally or in writing, of the errors in speech, method, and management. In most cases he will not criticise the teacher before the pupils, but will do so in the teachers' class, or in some cases privately, after dismissal. At times, however, it will be necessary for the American to make a correction, tactfully and considerately, in the presence of the class. At times the method will be so faulty that the supervising teacher will politely request the class, and will proceed to teach the matter in hand by the correct method, the native meanwhile studiously observing the methods of the American. There may be certain subjects which the American teacher should teach personally, and if so, he can do so.

"The main point is to arrange it so the American teacher can teach as much or as little as the circumstances may seem to require from day to day, and devote the remainder of his time to careful study and supervision of the work going on under the native teachers.

"By this method the native teacher will rapidly become a strong teacher, and in connection with the instruction received by him in the daily teachers' class and his annual schooling in the normal school the great end in view, of creating a body of trained Filipino teachers will be much sooner accomplished.

"With this plan an economy would be inaugurated, which may be shown by the situation here in Nueva Caceres. There are at present four separate American schools (not counting the normal school), each one employing one American and one native teacher. At least three of these schools could be combined in a central building; three more native teachers should be employed, and two American teachers could be dispensed with and assigned to some point in Albay where teachers are much needed. The remaining teacher (American) would then be in supervisory charge of six departments, in a central building.

"It is granted that under an inefficient or weak American teacher the supervisory plan would not be successful, but the work of such is not to be desired anywhere.

"I have personally tested this plan in Nueva Vizcaya, and it certainly proved practicable there."

CLERICAL ASSISTANCE.

A separate and distinct part of the work of the division superintendent is the correspondence, reports, records, etc. No adequate provision has been made for this work, and the emergency was met by the detailing of one American teacher for each division superintendent, such teachers being selected because of their knowledge of Spanish, typewriting, and business methods, and in some cases satisfactory stenographers were found among the teachers.

By a provision of act 430, enacted July 14, the detail of teachers for any clerical duty was prohibited, and in accordance with this requirement these clerks were immediately assigned to teaching duties. Until remedial legislation can be obtained the division superintendent is largely confined to the performance of his necessary clerical work, to the exclusion, in most cases, of his legitimate work. Text-books and supplies are invoiced from the central office at Manila to each division superintendent for all places within his division. These are often sent in bulk to him for distribution as needs arise, and in other cases are shipped direct to the towns where needed. In either case the responsibility for the property devolves upon the division superintendent, and he must render accurate accounts, supported by proper receipts, quarterly to the auditor for the islands. With the strict rules observed by the latter this involves much clerical labor and painstaking following up of property, especially when transfers and separations of teachers occur. Any property not properly accounted for, or lost in any way after its receipt within the division, is charged against the superintendent and he is held financially responsible.

Monthly reports are forwarded to division superintendents from both American and Filipino teachers, on day schools, night schools, teachers' classes, and bimonthly reports from all school boards. In addition to these, the division superintendent himself must prepare his inspection reports of all schools visited, and also efficiency reports on work of American teachers. To these are now being added the reports of the secondary schools within the division.

A large correspondence is naturally carried on with the general superintendent's office on all phases of the work, and division superintendents are frequently called upon for collection of information and making of special reports necessary in the consideration of plans and for incorporation in regular and special reports made by this office.

Correspondence, advice, and direction of American and native teachers, an immense mass of correspondence in Spanish with presidentes and municipal and provincial boards and school boards, together with the preparation of circulars to teachers and officials still further tax the resources of the division superintendent's office.

This correspondence, records, and property accounts in most divisions will occupy the entire time of a capable clerk, and the past year has shown that with a clerk working practically day and night it has been impossible to do all that has been desired, and for this reason the monthly consolidation of the reports which are rendered to the division superintendents has not been insisted upon, as it would of necessity cut into the work of organization and inspection or necessitate the detail of other teachers as clerks.

Because of this total absence of clerical assistance since the middle of July, it has been impossible to obtain, on short notice, the statistics which are desirable in this special report.

Recommendations as to clerks, in connection with the proposed changes in the supervisory force, is included under the heading "Legislation."

AMERICAN TEACHERS.

No better presentation of the varied aspects of the teacher's life and work in this archipelago can be presented than the following paper on "The American teacher in the community," read before the American Teachers' Institute at Cebu, June 16, 1902, by John A Staunton, jr., the deputy division superintendent for the province. It was particularly valuable on account of a large number of teachers being present who had recently arrived in the city of Cebu on the way to their stations. The conditions described may be considered as typical of the larger part of the archipelago, and the attitude of the writer is equally characteristic of the spirit in which the problems have been approached by the large majority of the teachers and supervisors.

"The power which anyone possesses to write or to talk helpfully on such a subject as that which has been assigned to me is derived almost wholly from experience with actual conditions as they exist in the field of work; and experience may be of two kinds. The one, general experience, is such as is obtained in the largest degree by a general superintendent who from his central office keeps in touch with all departments of the work under him, through detailed reports from, and correspondence and conversations with, those whose field is more limited. The other is a more special experience with conditions as they exist at the circumference, an experience which is necessarily obtained in the department of public instruction only by teachers who are actively engaged in the work at their stations. The general superintendent sees the whole field, with details blended by the distance; the teacher sees the details in his own field distinctly, but the conditions of his work preclude the long vision necessary for generalization.

"The discussion of the topic, 'The American teacher in the community,' to be of value, should draw upon both general and special experience, neither of which I can claim to have had to the same degree as many whom I have the honor to address. Some of you have served in these islands in other departments of the government, some have occupied more than one station, and have had opportunities of wide observation, others again have practically solved the problems at stations where conditions were antagonistic and hard to meet successfully. No doubt I have traveled in the island of Cebu more widely than any of you, but my stay has always been short in any one pueblo. In can hope by this paper, then, only to open a discussion which will be more fruitful than the paper itself. In one sense we are all new to this field, and the field itself is a new one, and perhaps some can perform a useful service to the work during this American teachers' institute by frankly allowing others to profit by the experience of their misunderstandings and mistakes, if any

"One is fortunately not obliged to consult literature fc: a definition of 'the American teacher.' Each teacher has only to make a mental picture of himself to learn the nature of the strange creature (strange at least in the Filipino estimate) who is to work in the community to which he has been assigned, under the name of 'Maestro Americano.' Or, if he is too modest, or perhaps too sensitive, to hold the mirror up to himself, why may he not analyze his neighbor's motives (a much more agreeable occupation) in coming to this field, and the functions he surely ought to perform here. Each teacher is undoubtedly primarily a 'teacher of English,' but when he has taught English he has not fulfilled his duty nor the purpose for which he was sent out. In order to have received his appointment he must have been an American citizen. In these islands, even more than at home, we all have the obligations of American citizenship upon us. Every interest of the United States which is properly the concern of an American citizen becomes a matter which we must not only attend to punctiliously, but must rouse zeal for in others who are now under the same flag. And we are not only teachers and citizens but men (and women of course) who have the interests of humanity at heart. No less than man's highest development in every relation of life, moral as well as intellectual and political, is the goal we have set for ourselves; and we have not caught the spirit with which our country occupies these islands if we have come here without the determination to make these ideals contagious. If we believe that honesty, purity, and truth are and forever will be beyond the reach of the native Philippine character we had better go home at once and agitate for an abandonment of the islands; for, without these qualities, citizenship will be only a snare, and education a delusion. The American teacher in every pueblo in the islands should not only be looked to as an instructor, but be looked up to by those whom he teaches as a fellow-citizen, a humanitarian, and a friend.

"The American teacher, then, comes to these islands not as a contract laborer but as a representative of the Government in one of its branches; he stands for all that is included in the word citizenship, and he is concerned with all that is human.

"And he comes to educate. If there ever was a place where the schoolmaster's art has been thrown sharply into contrast with education in its true meaning it is here in the Philippine Islands under the Spanish Government. For the Spanish occupants of the islands, whether civil or ecclesiastical, never sought to draw out what there is in the native, but to put that into him which, like an embalming fluid in a corpse, would preserve him from corruption, indeed, but would never make him a master either of knowledge or of himself. The obvious advantage of this system from the Spanish point of view was that it postponed indefinitely the day when the Filipino would become master of his masters. Upon his arrival in Cebu a point of departure in methods of teaching may be profitably noted by the American teacher by attending a session in some barrio school where the Spanish system has not yet been discarded. The parrot-like recitation in concert from a text-book which admits of but little variation from this method will make the newly arrived teacher appreciate to the full the advantages he has to offer. Born of the contrast he will have a new enthusiasm for the object-lesson method; he will newly appreciate both its utility and its necessity. He will better understand that the servile work of a master in the old sense is not to be compared in dignity with the work of an educator; and that he is an educator. And so, believing in himself and his work, the American teacher will enter the community which for two years at least is to be not simply his residence, but more than likely the scene of a struggle against ignorance, conservatism, and indolence which will demand all of his knowledge, tact, and ability.

"One Filipino community is very much like another, and yet, in respects, there is a very great difference. Nothing is more noticeable to one who travels about this island of Cebu, for example, than the conformity to a common type in the arrangement of most pueblos. A large church of stone, with tiled roof, faces a plaza in the center of the town. To one side, and frequently connected with the church by cloisters, is the convent, or residence of the clergy. On the other side of the church, perhaps, or at no great distance from it, stands the tribunal, the town hall of the municipality; and on the other side of the plaza the schools—one for boys and another for girls. In each town the elected officeholders—the president, vice-president, treasurer, secretary, and councilmen—officially regulate the municipal affairs, and, in perhaps the majority of cases, are themselves unofficially regulated, or at least largely influenced, by the parish priest who dominates the community very much as the church dominates its buildings. On every Sunday and festival the people, almost to a man, flock to church where the priest sings the mass. The parish priest alone among the residents of the pueblo enters every house and comes in direct contact with every individual; he marries, he confesses, he gives holy communion to each soul in the village; and in each household if there is not a birth with almost immediate baptism in the course of a year, there is at least a death with the necessity for immediate burial and the rites of the church. The padre necessarily dominates the town, and he will as long as the people are Catholics.

the town, and he will as long as the people are Catholics.

"It need scarcely be said that it is no part of the American teacher's duty to attempt to disturb this relationship between priest and people, but it is his duty to recognize it as a condition under which he works, and he must remember that always whether he will or no, the schoolhouse in which he teaches stands under the shadow of the big parish church where all classes worship. Be he Catholic or Protestant, simply because he is an American he will need all his judgment and tact in dealing with conditions.

"I have mentioned some of the ways in which all Filipino communities are alike. In some other respects there is a most surprising difference. It is noticeable that the similarities one meets seem to be the result of outside influence, while the variations seem to have been developed by the people's own natural characteristics. Thus, the uniform system of municipal government comes from the power that exercises political control of the whole archipelago; the uniformity of religion from the church which has sent her representatives trained all alike, and the similarity of architecture in church and other buildings is due to Spanish friars (though they are mostly now gone); but the method of grinding corn by rolling or pounding, the method of sheathing houses, the method of fishing and the implements used, all of which it is probable have been locally developed, will be noticed to vary several times by one who makes a circuit of the island of Cebu. There seems to be no necessary reason why certain fruits and products should in an island which is very similar throughout in soil and climate be confined almost exclusively to separate sections, except that, like the inhabitants, they do not without compulsion travel very far. Filipinos are a home-loving people; they are, contrary to what one would expect in an archipelago, largely a stay-at-home people; the forces which have hitherto been exerted to unify the people in certain ways have apparently been fully balanced by forces tending to differentiate them in others. The constant effort of the friars was to bring the people 'under the bells,' but the remontados tendency of the people They are deeply attached to localities and localisms. was often too strong. widely dialects vary throughout the archipelago is known to us all. Perhaps some one will be surprised, however, to learn that in making the circuit of this island of Cebu one will be accosted with several different forms of native salutation, varying with the locality. One might think, perhaps, that the native clergy, who are always the best educated, would have the disposition to get away from their cures on extended vacations; but as the result of questionings put to them on a recent trip, it was learned that many, if not most of the parish priests, prefer to remain continuously at work in their pueblos for years after assuming charge. A trip even to Cebu seems to have little attraction for them, and attendance at fiestas celebrated in neighboring pueblos is all the travel that most of them desire. Where so little opportunity of comparison exists the extent to which local pride or shame can be made use of in encouraging effort is somewhat problematical, but I recall one instance where the flattering encouragement of a visitor worked wonders in developing enthusiasm for the schools.

"The two persons in the pueblo with whom the teacher must be on good terms, if his work is to be a success, are the presidente and the padre. The presidente comes first, necessarily, in our enumeration; but it is a rare occasion when the padre comes last if there is any conflict of interests. If the American teacher is a statesman, he will before long have both of these men working for his interests in the development of the schools. If he is short-sighted enough, he may yield to his prejudices, and either leave the two greatest influences in the community unutilized or openly antagonistic. In the latter event, so far as that particular situation is concerned, the teacher is a failure, for the presidente and the padre represent the combined interests of the community. The presidente has been elected nominally by popular suffrage; that is, he is the choice of the people. If his election has been secured by any species of corruption, it amounts to the same, so far as the teacher is concerned, for an influence in the community which has been strong enough to put the man into office will be strong enough to hinder or help the American teacher and his school if the man so wills.

"It is impossible to suggest beforehand the best way of getting the presidente to take an active interest in the school, if he does not have it already. Perhaps the best way is an indirect one. Study your man, and if possible gain his confidence and good wishes. His active interests in the schools is more than likely to be due to a personal liking for the teacher. But I am as conscious that my advice is about as valuable as that which runs, 'The best way to kill a flea is to pinch it between the thumb nail and forefinger.' If you can catch the flea you do not need the advice; if you can not catch it the advice will do no good. But one word is important, it seems to me, in dealing with all of these natives. If there is danger of friction which will work an injury to the schools, do not let the personal element enter into the dispute. We may safely show that we belong to a superior race, at least to this extent, that we refuse to entertain a quarrel with an inferior. Besides, to urge a lower motive, the teacher has no offensive weapon with which to carry a fight with the average presidente through to a successful conclusion, so he had better not begin it. He can afford, if necessary, to lay insults on the table, and to act not as he feels, but as he would advise another to act under the circumstances. I acknowledge that this is difficult advice, but the luxury of a quarrel with the first man in the community can not be afforded when the efficiency of the schools is at stake.

"As is to be expected under present conditions, the attitude of the presidentes toward American schools and teachers will vary widely. In some pueblos the presidente will be a real Americanisto, in others his insurrecto tendencies will be hidden only sufficiently for him to continue in office. Where the former is the case the American teacher will be asked, no doubt, to take a more or less active part in municipal affairs. He will be asked about conditions, laws, manners—in short, everything American. In such a pueblo he has a great opportunity. He may be placed on the board of health or be instrumental in forming a board and getting the town cleaned up and kept cleaned; in getting contagious diseases segregated and so stamped out; in influencing the people to use proper water for drinking purposes and washing. He may be called upon to act as interpreter, as a teacher was recently in a case that affected the financial interests of the pueblo to the extent of thousands of dollars. In fact, there are many ways in which an American teacher may be so useful to a presidente who is friendly to American rule that he will be sure to be asked to take a prominent part in municipal affairs. But with an unfriendly presidente there is not much that the teacher can do until the attitude has changed. He has, however, a great opportunity in his night class to develop a pro-American spirit, and I would urge that wherever possible night classes be conducted (even by those teachers to whom the extra pay is no object) for the sake of the contact it affords with the earnest adult of life of the community. A teacher who is not wanted by the chief man in the pueblo can, in most cases if he uses all his opportunities, make himself needed by the pueblo itself before the lapse of many months of his residence.

"While the presidente is the first man in the community in name, he is by no means the first man in influence, even in the majority of cases. The padre comes first. This is a fact, not a theory. The condition must be faced by every teacher who enters a pueblo; and whether he is a Catholic or a Protestant he should know something of the peculiar relationship in which the Filipino padre stands to his flock. With religion, as such, the American teacher has no official relation while he is occupying his station. He may not use the public schools either to promulgate or to attack any religious system or tenets. But the religion of the islands he can not afford to be ignorant of. He will see the whole community flocking to the church, and with a persistence he would like to see displayed in school matters. He will see processions move past his schoolhouse and residence with a solemnity and dignity which may perhaps seem out of keeping with certain features which he n ay deem grotesque. There is evidently a force at work here stronger than he can ever expect to exert. It behooves him to understand what it is, and if possible to make use of it, and this can be done solely through obtaining the good will of the padre.

"Consider for an instant what the padre is to the community. His name defines his position—he is a father to every man, woman, and child in the place. If the incumbent has only recently assumed his charge, at least the office has been permanent, and each successive priest enters into the whole spiritual legacy of his predecessor. a father, because every child born in that pueblo, without exception, has been brought to the church and there born again into the spiritual family—the church—by the act of this priest or his predecessor, who baptized it. This makes the padre the spiritual father not only to the child in the schoolhouse, but of the presidente and of all the municipal officials. Once in a while the padre has a wayward child, but rarely one The padre of the pueblo may be a young man and the who denies this relationship. presidente an old one. The old man will be found kissing the hand of his young father Doubtless many of you have observed this as often as I have. Not only does each person in the pueblo recognize the parish priest as his father, but he goes to that father in confession more or less frequently throughout his entire life. He believes that he can receive the official declaration that his sins are remitted only through that channel. It is not my purpose to go into a disquisition on Catholic theology, but to show the strongest influences at work in the Philippine Islands—the influences of the church. After confession those who have been given permission to do so approach the altar to receive that food—the body and blood of Christ—which each, to a man, believes necessary to insure his everlasting life. There is not one in the whole pueblo who either dares or wills to die without it. If one is sick or in danger of death, the priest takes this food from the church and carries it to the sick man's house, that it may support him on his journey into the other world. priest, then, is regarded, so to speak—not disparagingly—as having a monopoly of the necessary spiritual food, without which the population will starve. Do you see how this gives power? And because this belongs to the people's religion you are prevented from publicly combating it, whatever may be your own personal belief, and I hope you see the logic of my advice that non-Catholic teachers should refrain from covert attacks upon a system which is all but universal in their pueblo and powerful enough to make their schools either successful or failures.

"Before we meet the padre we ought to know further that every marriage in the pueblo is contracted before him in the church; that he buries the Christian who dies in the faith in the consecrated ground of the cemetery, under the shadow of the big crosses, and that the reason the people flock to church in such numbers on Sundays and holy days is because the priest there offers the great sacrifice of the mass, which calls Christ to earth again each time it is celebrated, and avails for the salvation of

"But here comes our padre. Let us stop our theological talk and meet him. He is big and fat, or he is little and insignificant, or again he may be, as is often the case, a very well-appearing man indeed. But he is the padre in any case. He is dirty and slovenly in personal attire, or he is clean shaven and neat. Never mind, these things do not touch his official position; he is still the priest. Rumor has it that his morals are not of the best; that there are children who are his by other than spiritual generation. It amounts to the same; he is nevertheless both the padre and the priest. If he is personally vicious and corrupt, so much the worse for him. The penalty of his sins he must bear alone, like any other mortal. His duties do not lessen, the validity of his official acts is untouched. The church says, 'Once a priest, always a priest, even in hell.' Here is the whole clew to a relationship which to many Americans and to all non-Catholics seems so incomprehensible.

"But Padre Juan or Padre Francisco is welcoming you warmly to his pueblo; he is calling to his muchachos to bring tobacco and something to drink; or, if it is near dinner time, he is ordering an extra place for you at table; and more than likely he has asked you to make the convent your place of residence until you can find a suitable house. Ought this hospitality to be spurned, ought this offer of friendliness to be lightly treated because you have always been opposed to the system this man represents, or because you have other personal beliefs, or even because you have heard tales about conduct on his part which would not be tolerated in New England? It is to be answered 'no' to every one of these questions. You are sent to that pueblo in a public, not in a private, capacity; as an American citizen, not as a missionary. Your own private life, and not the padre's, is your personal concern; and it is your duty to make your school a success by using every legitimate available means. With the padre as your friend, you are almost sure of success; with the padre working against you, you are nearly sure to make a failure; or, to state it too mildly, your success can never be complete.

"And be sure the padre, with all his outward politeness, is not yours until you have won him. He is watching you, be assured, in your work, to find just what is to be your influence upon his spiritual children. To the padre comes all information in the pueblo that he cares to receive. Your only safety is in what, anyhow, is of real obligation, by the terms of your appointment—a strict neutrality when in school and a close reticence when out. And, more positively, a cultivation (with judgment and tact) of cordial relations with the padre which will make him personally your friend. I can not go into details as to just how this can best be achieved, but I may throw out the hint that a candle placed in the window of your house when, on some fiesta, the whole pueblo is decorated and the procession is to pass by, will go a long way toward placing you in favor. And be assured that the padre will know it. It is a narrow man, indeed, who would fear he would compromise himself by the act.

"If I, who am not a Roman Catholic, may, without offense, say one word to the many teachers in this division who are Americans of that faith, I will add this: I have heard from one or two of you criticisms so strong of the ecclesiastical system here as to make me think that perhaps away from home the practice of your religion is irksome. If you maintain this attitude, there is sure to be antagonism between yourself and the padre. But think what a special opportunity you American Catholics have of reassuring these people and of reconciling them to American sovereignty. You are of the same faith. The Spanish type of Catholicism has prevailed necessarily in the past. Your underlying faith is essentially the same. The abuses which some of you object to are peculiarly Spanish. They are even now passing away. If by the quiet practice of your religion, and, if the opportunity offers, your conversations with the padre, you can illustrate the genius of American Catholicism and get the padres to catch the spirit of it, you will have done a great work indeed; a work no less for your country than for your church.

"There are many things I might speak of which hear on the work of the American."

"There are many things I might speak of which bear on the work of the American teacher in the community. Most of these will be touched upon, I hope, in the papers which are to follow and in the discussions.

"American home life may be made a valuable object lesson where a man and his wife go to a pueblo together. It must be granted that these people, in spite of their native courtesy and politeness, have much to learn in respect to manners at table. But they are quick to learn in matters of this kind, as one may know from the rapidity with which they imitate an American manner of dress. Indeed, sometimes in this particular they put the Americans to shame. One may think these matters trivial, but I am convinced that, other things being equal, a teacher who is careful about his dress will have a greater influence in a community than one who is slovenly.

"Instruction of children in the wickedness of cruelty to animals I need only to mention to commend to your attention. May the day soon come when Filipino cattle will not be starved for three days previous to slaughter and when chickens will not be plucked before they are killed.

"I believe that one of the most necessary lessons to be learned by the Filipino is that of the dignity of labor. An American teacher who knows something of carpentering or of gardening might do something toward the desired result. The inertia of centuries has to be overcome, but every little impulse in the right direction will count.

"I would say encourage travel, by every means possible. If localism on the part of the natives was favorable to Spanish rule, the contrary is true under American administration. I would encourage natives to travel even in their own island, if they can not go farther. I have been surprised to find, through conversation with residents of the island of Cebu, that even here I have already traveled more widely than most of them. Men can not develop if they stay always in one single environment.

"One word in conclusion shall be a plea that the American teacher in the community will, in contrast to some other Americans whom the Filipino is obliged to meet, stand for personal fair dealing. It is a pity that every American who comes hereshould not be inspired with the high ideals which represent the spirit of America. There are constant opportunities of taking unfair advantage of the native. Even now worthless trinkets are being unloaded on the natives of this island in exchange for hard-earned money. The other day a little piece of jewelry (if it can be called that) worth 25 cents was sold to a native for $20 (Mexican). Another native showed me a watch for which he had paid $10 (Mexican). It was an Ingersoll dollar watch! Transactions such as these make one ashamed of one's countrymen. I am glad to say that the receivers of the money in neither of these instances were teachers, but the fact that they were Americans shows how a great labor is before us, for the Filipinos have not yet been taught by the object lesson-method that we love our neighbors as ourselves.

"Of the American teacher in these islands may it always be said that he is an American citizen, with an intention of working for his country in the problems before it, not a mere adventurer; that he is an educator, throwing his life into the task of drawing out and uplifting his fellows, not a mere laborer drawing his salary; and that he is a man, alive to every human interest, whether or not touched by the terms of his contract with the department of public instruction."

APPOINTMENTS.

During the summer of 1901 it became apparent, from the number of declinations of appointments received at this office and from the unfilled quotas of various educational institutions to which appointing power had been given, that the number of 1,000 teachers would not be attained without additional appointments, and accordingly the applications on file were carefully examined again and additional appointments made, as is shown in the list marked "Exhibit C." Many excellent teachers, wives of teachers arriving under appointment, were also appointed after their arrival in Manila, as well as a few men and women after passing the examination prescribed for candidates applying in these islands.

Up to these appointments no attention had been paid to any qualifications except those of an educational nature, and appointments and authorities to make appointments had been distributed impartially, as will appear from the lists submitted with the last annual report: In September and October, 1901, however, lists of candidates were submitted by high representatives of the Roman Catholic Church in the United States, and pressure was brought to bear to make appointments from these lists, on account of the peculiar religious status of these islands. Accordingly 3 division superintendents and 22 teachers were appointed from these special lists, this number including all whose educational preparation and teaching experience equaled those required of others who were appointed directly by the general superintendent. These appointees have arrived at various times and have been stationed without favor or prejudice. With this exception the administration of this bureau has been without any consideration of the religious beliefs of its employees.

Since the 1st day of January, 1901, 1,074 persons have been connected with this bureau as teachers or superintendents. These were American teachers, and the figures do not include the 2,700 native teachers, who are paid by the municipalities, and records of whose changes are kept in the office of the division superintendents. The arrival of appointees from the United States constantly increased the teaching force from 765, as reported in September, 1901, until May, 1902, when the maximum number of 926 American teachers were on the rolls, including division superintendents and their deputies. This number has since steadily fallen off from death, sickness, and resignation, until on the 1st of September, 1902, there were 845 American teachers in the field, as is shown by the alphabetical list of teachers, Exhibit A.

Since January, 1901, 229 teachers have separated from the bureau for various reasons, as given in the following table:

| Causes.                                                                                                                                                                                                  | Women.              | Men.    | Total.                                    |

The local appointees were for a large part discharged volunteer and regular soldiers, wives and relatives of officers, and civilians, who were appointed here in the islands without contract, and largely for the purpose of temporarily providing a teaching force prior to the arrival of the trained teachers from the United States.

Under "Resigned for the good of the service" are included those whose conduct or professional training was not satisfactory.

The 24 men who were transferred to other civil positions were thereby continued in the service of the insular government in other bureaus, and 3 men were commissioned as officers in the Regular Army.

The item of "Married" includes, in addition to the teachers who married before resignation, those who resigned, giving as their reason their intention to become married.

Since the arrival of the Thomas in August, 1901, teachers have come in small numbers on regular transports. Another special transport, the McClellan, sailing from New York, was assigned to the transportation of all teachers and other civilians east of the Rocky Mountains. The McClellan sailed February 22, 1902, with 94 teachers, and arrived in Manila April 20.

Beginning with the year 1902 the policy of entertaining new arrivals at the exposition grounds until their assignment had been made was dropped. Instead, one of the members of the supervisory corps was detailed to secure suitable hotel accommodations, board the incoming transports, meet the teachers, and give them all helpful information. The arrival of the teachers on the McClellan offered the first good opportunity for testing this new plan, and it was found to work successfully.

The same general plan of assignment was followed in the case of later arrivals as in that of the teachers who arrived on the Thomas; accommodations for the teachers as well as the needs of the towns were the deciding factors, in connection with which personal preferences were given due weight. The division superintendents were well acquainted at this time with the conditions and needs of every town in their divisions; and this, added to the fact that the area of active hostility has greatly diminished and the operations of insurrectos and ladrones have been confined to the known localities, chiefly in the more removed mountain sections, simplified the later problem of assigning the teachers.

The matter of personal safety had almost ceased to be a question, for the teachers are not allowed to remain in towns which are considered dangerous; and, in fact, their work is a guaranty of protection, so highly do the people, friendly or hostile to American occupation, appreciate this work of education.

The civil commissary, from which teachers purchase supplies at reduced rates, has now been in operation for nearly a year. While there is some complaint, particularly from those who live in the remote towns, it is small; and the advantages accruing to them from this privilege are material. Branch supply stores have been established in the capital of nearly every province, and the methods in handling supplies are being improved and the transportation facilities bettered, so that the supply store promises to be of even greater benefit to the teachers in the future.

One of the difficulties resulting from the poor mail facilities throughout the islands is the serious delay which many of the teachers experience in receiving their salary Oftentimes they are compelled to wait two and three weeks, and even longer, after the salary is due before they receive it. The hopeful side of the whole matter is, however, that improvements are being made in the mail service, and the delays in delivery consequently are diminishing.

Coupled with this difficulty was the depreciation of the Mexican currency in which the teachers were paid. The appropriation for the salaries of teachers is made by the Commission in this local currency; hence the disbursing clerk is compelled to make all checks payable in such money. All might have been well had the currency maintained its former ratio of $2 Mexican to $1 gold, but, on the contrary, it depreciated regularly. The postal authorities refused to accept it in payment of money orders on the States, and then the teachers were in a serious difficulty. Many of them had families at home dependent upon them, and others had incurred debts which they had to meet.

The matter was given most serious attention, and requests sent to the Civil Commission asking that some definite step be taken. In answer the following reply was received from Commissioner Ide, secretary of finance and justice, and sent out immediately in the form of a circular to the teachers:

"The difficulties referred to are fully appreciated by the Commission and by this office, but they are temporarily incident to the situation. The changed ratio for the next quarter will probably, before the quarter is through, operate to the advantage of civil employees, so that they will obtain more than their salary as fixed in gold. It will be necessary for all to be a little forbearing. It might be remarked that the Commissioners themselves are subject to precisely the same inconvenience as the writer of the within letter, and suffer the same pro rata loss. It is impracticable to make payment for the month of December in other than the currency that was appropriated for that purpose and that is available. The only method for immediately relieving the difficulty would be to require all customs receipts and internal-revenue taxes to be paid in money of the United States, so that there might be money of that character available for all insular purposes; but in view of the early action of Congress on the currency, when it is expected the subject will be placed on a permanent basis, it is not considered advisable to make so radical a change as the one suggested, and one that would so seriously disturb the business of the islands."

To endeavor to equalize the ratio, the Commission fixed the legal ratio of Mexican currency to gold at $2.10 to $1 for the first quarter of 1902. The postal authorities, moreover, accepted the local currency at this ratio to the amount of $50, gold, per month from all civil employees. The commercial ratio, however, continued to increase rapidly, and for the second quarter of the year the ratio was established at $2.27 to $1; but almost immediately the parity was lost, and at times the commercial ratio was $2.50 to $1. The post-offices were forced to refuse Mexican currency at any ratio, in order to protect themselves, and the situation for a time was very embarrassing. Gradually the ratio fell off, and with the beginning of the third quarter the ratio was established at $2.35 to $1, and, although this rate was only fixed positively for ten days and is subject to change at any time to preserve the ratio, yet it has remained steadily at that figure for nearly three months, until to-day the government ratio is a few points better than the commercial ratio, and the teachers and other civil employees are in a position to regain some of their losses during the first half year. The post-offices now accept Mexican currency in practically unlimited quantities from civil employees at the established ratio. The failure of Congress to pass legislation regarding the currency of these islands has been largely responsible for the peculiarly trying and unfortunate position in which all government officials and employees have been placed, and the Philippine Commission has exercised its full power to do justice to all.

With the policy of fixing the ratio for ten days and then continuing the ratio indefinitely a new complication has arisen of minor importance, but which is still causing some uneasiness among the teachers. While the ratio was unfavorable many teachers refused to sign vouchers made out in terms of American currency but which were to be paid by checks for local currency at the established ratio. To meet this objection vouchers were changed to read "local currency." With the ratio fixed quarterly these could be made out and sent out in time to be received by the majority of the teachers by or before the last day of the month, upon which day they could be signed and returned to the central office for payment. With the ratio fixed indefinitely, there is always the possibility of a change during the last few days of the month, and the amounts can not be inserted in the vouchers until the last day of the month, and consequently a delay of several days to two weeks or more results. If the original practice of making out the vouchers in terms of United States currency had not been objected to by the teachers the present delay would have been entirely avoided, as salaries of all employees are fixed in terms of United States currency, but paid in local currency at the ratio fixed by the Commission.

Increases in salaries, in addition to the payment for night-school work, were made in many cases up to the 1st of May. In the appointments made by educational authorities in the States there naturally existed a considerable disproportion between the various salaries and the qualifications of persons selected. To adjust these discrepancies and to equalize salaries on the basis of efficiency of work done in this field various increases were made after careful inspection of their work and recommendation by division superintendents. The abrupt stop which was put to these general increases has naturally brought considerable disappointment to the teachers who had been doing excellent work, but whose names and qualifications had not been reported by their division superintendents, while others, more favorably located, had received substantial increases. It is hoped that the necessity for economy and retrenchment may be sufficiently past so that increases in cases of conspicuous merit may be made.

The positions as secondary teachers in a measure provide for increase by promotion, when it is possible to fix the salaries of these positions in accordance with their relative importance, and to obtain appropriation for a sufficient number to supply the desired number of teachers without the necessity of detailing elementary teachers for such work.

The transportation difficulties at the present time cause serious delay in receiving school supplies—a condition which obviously militates against the best results in the work. Teachers oftentimes are compelled to wait patiently for weeks for books and material and make the best of inadequate tools and equipment on hand. It is not a question of having no books or other supplies, but of getting the additional ones needed.

The plan was adopted, whenever possible, of making the local presidentes responsible for the transportation of school supplies from the nearest post to their towns, and, in other cases, that of placing the respective deputy division superintendents and teachers in charge of supplies shipped after these had arrived at the port nearest their destination. They were authorized to hire bull carts for transporting the goods to the towns for which they were intended. Thus both the presidentes and the teachers and, in some cases still, by the military authorities, the transportation of the supplies receives attention.

Conditions are much better than a year ago and the time taken by goods en route is shortening daily. With the arrival of the fleet of steamers now in course of construction in China, moreover, for the transportation of civil property, decidedly better service is expected.

The work done by the American teacher is in part supervision, but in large part regular teaching. He looks after the school work in his own town and oftentimes in the neighboring barrios, instructs the native teachers daily in English and in other studies, spends a part of his own time in teaching the children, and has charge of all property and supplies. The native teacher devotes all his time to school management and teaching the children.

For the purpose of gaining impartial opinions of the effect created by the American teachers in their respective towns a letter was sent to the chiefs of the constabulary, provincial governors, and others whose knowledge was considered valuable, asking their opinion as to the effect created by the American teachers, and any criticism, favorable or otherwise, together with suggestions concerning the work.

The replies were without exception almost flattering. In every case the teacher was reported as doing excellent work, not merely in the special field of teaching, but in the broader way of introducing American ideas; in raising the standard of home life; in preparing the natives really for self-government; in dispelling feeling against Americans and hence aiding in this work of pacification by showing the people the best we have to offer.

It is needless to quote the numerous letters which have been received in answer to this inquiry. The following letter from Mariano Trias, governor of Cavite Province, is especially interesting as giving the view from the native standpoint:

"Before saying a word on the subject, I thought it better to await information from the municipalities of the province, since they have local school boards and are therefore able to furnish me true data.

"Of the work, behavior, and interest shown by the teachers in teaching, I have the pleasure to state to you that there is no complaint against them; on the contrary, I am informed that judging by the improvements made in the English language by the children of both sexes, an agreeable success on this subject in the public schools is soon expected.

"As regards the instruction of other subjects, they also praise the practical methods carried out, and for the purpose of giving more encouragement it would be better for the teachers to give instruction direct from the native dialect, using for a basis of instruction the English language.

"For those barrios far from town it would be advisable to fix certain dates for visiting them to teach the children, because some are very poor and small and unable to support a school.

support a school.

"I have no idea of the number of American teachers of both sexes in this province, as the reports do not show the dispositions of the teachers among their stations, but I understand the towns are in lack of them.

"Concerning the helpless native teachers, I think their salaries could be fixed according to the importance of the town and its inhabitants, for some teachers are paid worse than a native policeman, and with such stimulation I wonder that efficiency and skill can be demanded from them.

"In those towns where school buildings can not be obtained, and where land taxes amount to nothing, a voluntary contribution is being made with the object of building them as soon as possible, and I hope that all the towns and barrios shall possess good buildings for said purpose within a year.

"The news of the opening of the high school was received with great pleasure in this province, and the people only wish that the agricultural, art, and trade schools may be soon opened also. It would be advisable to establish the latter in any of the neighboring towns of Cavite, San Roque, or La Caridad, and the former in Santa Cruz or San Francisco de Malabon.

"Some towns want a compulsory law for school attendance, with fines and punishment for parents who do not send their children to school, but I do not agree with such measure. It would be better to give prizes and other stimulations to encourage and increase the number of attendants to school."

The problem before the American teacher is one requiring the greatest amount of thought. The teacher is needed but a short time each day, but the diplomat must be on duty continuously. As a rule, the American teachers have been most cordially welcomed and have at once apparently become a necessity to those to whom they have been sent. Many are far removed in the interior, living on the native food, miles away from the nearest American, with only a glimpse now and then of the outside world—through the medium of a poorly equipped mail service—but with all these drawbacks there is a bright side, as is shown by the following remark made by an American woman from a New England State: "I really tremble to think of what I should have missed if I had not come to the Philippines."

The responsibilities of the teachers are great, when the situation is looked upon from a broad standpoint, but it is a grand opportunity to bring out all the manhood and womanhood that there is in them. That the majority are rising to meet this opportunity augurs well for the success of the educational movement, and is a high tribute to the character and ability of the American teacher, proving conclusively that they will do their share toward the pacification and upbuilding of this archipelago. The following extracts from the report of one of the division superintendents are of interest:

"The American teacher in the Philippines and the problems which he must strive to solve are not fully appreciated by those who have not been eyewitnesses to his work and surroundings.

"His chief duties are to teach five hours a day; to instruct the teachers of the central school one hour daily; to organize, after his day school is running smoothly, an evening class for adults and to meet them three times per week for one hour and a half each time; to investigate the barrio schools and supervise the work of barrio teachers; to be tactful and patient in dealing with everybody he meets, especially the presidente.

"The surroundings to which he must adapt himself are hard and, above all, strange. There are only two ways in which he can provide food and quarters for himself. If he is the only teacher in the pueblo and the pueblo is garrisoned he has in many cases been invited to mess with the commanding officer. I have never heard of a teacher refusing this invitation. When there is only one the situation is serious. He can not afford to keep up an establishment by himself.

"When two teachers are assigned to one pueblo they can arrange for their own mess, hiring a cook and a muchacho.

"For one week, at least, after his arrival at the place to which he is assigned the teacher is discouraged. From this time on he improves; that is, in four cases out of five. By this I mean that he takes hold of the situation and makes the most of it. He becomes interested in his work and makes friends among the leading people, interviewing members of the city council, explaining matters to the presidente,

"From the presidente to the smallest urchin admiration for the American women in the provinces is unfailing and never ending. The school children adore her. Their attentions become a burden, and it requires the nicest ingenuity to avoid giving offense and yet to have sufficient time for rest and recreation. The school house for girls is filled by 7.30 in the morning. In the afternoon they accompany the 'maestra' home. When the 'maestra' walks out the pupils waylay her and before she reaches her home again there are many 'compañeras.' If the 'maestra' wishes anything there is a scramble to see who can have the honor. One presidente asked for three ladies and gave as a reason that the children could not distinguish between an American soldier and an American male teacher. There is a grain of truth in this, but there is a better and truer explanation, though the presidente has not, perhaps, thought of it. A woman in the presence of children can become more sympathetic and kindly than can a man. Especially is this true in the present stage of the development of the schools, when the situation in respect to many things is as hard and strange to the children as to the teacher. The best class-room instruction I have seen in this division has been given by the American women."

The American teacher is the chief factor at present. The success of this great educational experiment depends upon his ability to establish sympathetic relations with Filipino pupils, parents, and teachers; to work day and night conscientiously and tactfully, and then patiently to await results. He needs to possess, besides scholarship and professional training, ready tact, plain common sense, a warm heart, and colossal patience. It should be noted that nowhere in the United States are the qualifications for elementary teachers any higher than those exacted as a general rule by the bureau of public instruction here in the appointment of the 1,000 teachers. They are either normal or college graduates, and the majority of them have had at least two years' successful experience; their health good, personal habits and moral character vouched for by proper authorities.

Success or failure in a country like this depends on the personal idiosyncrasies of the individual. Ambitious, restless young men, with perhaps a too great anxiety to get on in the world, placed in surroundings very different from their native land, especially if surrounded by discomforts, will naturally become discontented, and, seeing the difficulties of the situation only from the one side, will be free in criticism.

The general superintentendent wishes to express his great appreciation of the excellent character of the work done by the large majority of American teachers in the field during the past year, to testify to his appreciation of the great discomforts and long delays which have been patiently borne by them, and the help given by the teachers toward solving the problems which are inseparable from pioneer educational work in a country far removed from home and friends, in a different climate, and among a babel of dialects. That so little complaint has been made is a striking illustration of the enthusiasm and continuous perseverance with which the teachers have entered upon and carried through their arduous work.

That the teachers have endeared themselves to the children and parents throughout the archipelago is evidenced by the flood of petitions which come to this office in protest against the removal of teachers, even when their places are to be filled by other American teachers. Some of these petitions, in their quaint wording and ornate signatures, are quite curious. It is especially eloquent of conditions to find both the presidente and the local padre heading petitions for the retention of American teachers of very different religious faiths, as has happened in several cases.

Another tribute to the work of the American teachers is the eagerness with which they have been sought by other branches of the civil service. Three teachers, formerly soldiers here, have received commissions in the Regular Army, and among the 24 who have taken civil positions are included provincial treasurers, provincial supervisors, civil-service examiner, agricultural expert, and other positions of similar importance. It is a significant fact that these other positions have carried with them a substantial increase in salary over what was paid for a similar grade of work in this bureau.

HEROISM OF TEACHERS.

The work of the American teachers during the cholcra epidemic, which, in many of the most populous provinces reached its culmination during the school vacation, can not be too highly commended. In many cases the teacher was the only American in the town. In some cases there was not even a native or Spanish doctor. Some teachers with a little knowledge of medicine, and all through their knowledge of hygiene and sanitation, accomplished wonderful workin preventing and suppressing the dread disease. Almost invariably the American teacher was a member of the board of health, and in Manila the teachers arriving on the McClellan, fresh from the States, unacclimated and unused to tropical conditions, being unable to take up school work, became health inspectors in the city of Manila and surrounding towns.

In the remoter towns, isolated from the prompt aid which alone can save life when the most dreaded of all scourges makes its attack, with no command to remain, with the allurements of foreign travel during the vacation put sternly into the background, with no relatives or intimate friends to protect or to encourage, and among alien races, these noble men and women fought by night and day, for week after week, for the lives of an alien people, with no thought or chance of reward, with a noble heroism that is far above the bravery of the soldier fighting a foe who can be seen and known. The United States may justly be proud of the bravery of its soldiers, but it must also remember that the peaceful army of teachers has shown a nobleness of spirit, a self-devotion to the services of humanity, a steadfastness and bravery of soul that is rarely excelled.

Nor did all escape unscathed. Four young men contracted the disease and died—

Nor did all escape unscathed. Four young men contracted the disease and died—Messrs. Jamison, Badger, Zumstein, and Lucker. One other young man—Mr. DeWitt—and two young ladies—Miss Kent and one of the Manila normal teachers—were attacked by the disease, but through prompt and careful nursing they were

SICKNESS.

As always will be the case among people coming from a temperate climate into the Tropics, there has been considerable sickness among the American teachers. On the other hand a large proportion of the teachers have been in excellent health during the entire time of their service here. In cases of severe sickness, especially in such cases as dysentery and tuberculosis, teachers have been permitted and advised to return promptly to the United States, as recovery from such diseases is very slow and incomplete in this climate. In cases of slight sickness the army surgeons throughout the islands have been very accommodating and have rendered prompt assistance, many times at serious inconvenience to themselves. The civil hospital in Manila is open to all employees of the civil government, and in cases of more severe illness or where operations have been necessary the teachers have come to this hospital, being given sick leave while there. The charges are $1 per day for subsistence and

The table of separations will show the number who have returned to the United States on account of sickness, this number including 15 or 20 cases where the person returning was not personally sick, but return was necessitated by illness of wife, husband, or family. It will be noted that although the proportion of men teachers to women teachers is more than two to one, yet the climate has proved very severe for women teachers, their ratio of sickness being fully double that of an equal number of men.

The withdrawal of military garrisons from the smaller towns in the provinces has made a serious change in conditions, not alone as to American companionship for teachers, but also by the departure of the army surgeons, leaving the American teachers without competent medical aid, and in some cases without even a native doctor, within many miles. Several transfers of teachers have become necessary on account of their complete isolation from medical attendance, especially during the recent epidemic of cholera.

It is important that some steps should be taken to provide medical assistance to the teachers and other civil employees in these remote towns.

DEATHS.

The past twelve months include all the deaths of teachers since the organization The death of Mr. W. S. Davis was mentioned in the last report. names of the deceased teachers, with cause and date of death, follow:

Mr. Davis died in the military hospital at Dagupan, after an operation for appendicitis. He left a wife and four children, who have since returned to their home in the United States, having been generously assisted by the Americans in the Philippines.

Mr. Collins was thrown from a native boat in crossing the strait from Bais, Negros, to Samboan, in Cebu, to which station he had been transferred. The medical certificate gives syncope as the cause of death, and states that he was not drowned, although the body was in the water for half an hour before recovery. buried in Dumaguete, Negros.

Mr. Guernsey died of diphtheria at Balayan, province of Batangas. He left a wife (also a teacher) and three small children, who have since returned to their home in the United States.

Mr. Jamison died of cholera at Dinalupijan, province of Bataan. So far as known, he left no relatives, and his nearest friend has been notified.

Mr. Osborn had been a sergeant in Company H, Twenty-second U.S. Infantry, and had recently returned to Baler, province of Principe, where he had desired to be stationed as teacher, having formerly served as a soldier in that vicinity. He was awaiting the arrival of the next transport to take him to Manila for treatment when he died. His body was buried in Baler.

Mrs. Conant arrived in Manila early in the present year, where she married Mr. C. E. Conant, and accompanied him to his station at Bais, Negros, where she died.

Mr. Conant has returned to the United States, accompanying the remains.

Mr. Nash, formerly a sergeant in Captain O'Neill's company of Rough Riders, died at the civil hospital, Manila, of cerebral hemorrhage. His remains were taken charge of by the Elks and forwarded to his sister, in Globe, Ariz.

Mr. Zumstein died of cholera in Manila. His fiancée had arrived on the transport the day previous, they had been married at 8 o'clock in the morning, and he died of the disease at 1 o'clock the same day. His widow is temporarily teaching the school which he had taught.

Mr. Crawford died in San Mateo, province of Rizal, of blood poisoning, following an attack of pneumonia. His remains were taken in charge by the Masons and returned to his home in the States.

Mr. Badger died of cholera at Malasiqui, province of Pangasinan. His widow (also a teacher) and two children came to Manila, and have since resided here, the widow teaching in the public schools of the city.

Mr. Lucker died of cholera at Laoag, province of Ilocos Norte, and full particulars of his death have not yet been received.

The four murdered Cebu teachers are considered in a separate paragraph.

By the provisions of an act of the Philippine Commission the treasurer of the archipelago is made administrator of the estate of all deceased civil employees, unless the estate exceeds $500. In accordance with this law all accrued salary, or other money due from this bureau, is paid over to the treasurer, and all personal belongings are forwarded direct to that officer, who is fully empowered to take all necessary action.

In the case of all these teachers more detailed information is being collected as to the name of attending surgeons, place of burial, attending circumstances, etc., and in the case of all teachers now in the islands information has been called for to ascertain the name and address of the person in each case who should be notified in an emergency. Cases of death are promptly reported by telegraph to this office and forwarded by cable through the civil governor's office to the War Department at Washington.

THE FOUR MURDERED TEACHERS.

Messrs. Louis A. Thomas, John E. Wells, Ernst Heger, and Clyde O. France were among the teachers who sailed from New York on February 22, 1902, arriving in Manila two months later. After a stay in Manila of two or three weeks they went to the city of Cebu, on the island of the same name, where they arrived on May 30. They were there instructed to await the opening of the American teachers' institute for the island of Cebu, to be opened on June 16, after which they would be assigned to stations, to which they would proceed, to open school work at the close of the long vacation.

On the morning of June 10 these four teachers started from Cebu for a day in the foothills to the north of the city, their purpose, in so far as it is known, being to enjoy a day's outing and take pictures of the mountain scenery. Nothing further was seen of them until their bodies were brought back to Cebu on the 23d of July. The details of the long search and the final recovery of the bodies, the killing of the leader of the band who killed the teachers, and the capture of a number of the other members of the band are well told in the following official report of the constabulary inspector in charge of the search, and the official indorsements thereon. It will be noted that these teachers, prior to departing on this first expedition in an unknown country, were warned by Inspector Ross, then stationed in Cebu, of the great danger from bands of outlaws in these mountains. The report is as follows:

HEADQUARTERS PHILIPPINE CONSTABULARY, PROVINCE OF CEBU, P. I., Cebu, ('ebu, P. I., August 1, 1902.

To the Second Assistant Chief Philippine Constabulary.

Sir: I have the honor to submit the following in regard to the four American school-teachers, Ernst Heger, John A. Wells, Louis A. Thomas, and Clyde O. France, who were employees of the bureau of education at Cebu, Cebu, P. I.

These men left Cebu, Cebu, P. I., at 8 a. m., June 10, 1902, for Guadalupe, Cebu, P. I., for the purpose of taking photographs of the scenery of the mountains in that vicinity. They had not returned to their homes at 9 p. m., that date. Their absence was reported to these headquarters by their roommates, Mr. Harry H. Brown and Mr. H. B. Holmes, at 10 p. m. The next morning, as they had not returned, a force of 10 constabulary, under First Sergeant Zafra, and four school-teachers went to Guadalupe, but learned nothing as to what had become of them.

June 12, 1902, Mr. Bard, superintendent of schools, Cebu, P. I., officially reported that they were missing.

June 12, Senior Inspector Ross ordered the following forces out in the mountains to look for them or some trace as to what had become of them: Cebu, Inspector Roberts with 20 enlisted men; Cebu, Inspector Luga with 15 men; Danso, Inspector Poggi and 15 men; Barili, Inspector Hunt and 10 men.

June 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, 17, no news June 18, Inspectors Hunt and Poggi report by wire from Balamban that they were unable to find any trace of the teachers in that neighborhood; ordered to return to their stations by Inspector Ross.

June 19, Inspectors Roberts and Luga with detachments returned to Cebu with no

June 19, Inspector Roberts left Cebu with 10 men for Guadalupe to obtain information in regard to the missing teachers; relieved at 12 p. m. by Inspector Warren, who returned at noon, June 20, with no news.

June 20 (?), Inspector Luga left at 12 o'clock midnight with 4 constabulary men in civilian dress. These men were instructed by Inspector Warren to act the part of deserters of the constabulary and try to join the band, who were supposed to have captured the teachers.

June 21, 22, 23, 24, 25, 26, no news.

June 27, at 4.25 a. m., Inspector Luga returns to Cebu with his detachment and reports that on the evening of June 26, at 8 o'clock, he met Damaso Tabalada, the leader of the band of ladrones operating near Guadalupe. Tabalada, upon meeting Luga, exclaimed, "You are looking after me for the taking of the four American teachers," and then drew a revolver and fired a shot at Luga, which missed, and then another. Luga, in self-defense, drew his revolver, fired, and killed Tabalada. Luga then searched the body and found one gold watch, chain, and charm, one small pair of opera glasses, one Smith & Wesson .32-caliber revolver, one pocketbook containing personal papers of Tabalada.

Upon looking over these papers I found that without a doubt he had been the leader of the band which had captured the missing teachers. A bolo and a dagger were also taken.

Luga left Cebu June 27 with 16 men, Philippine constabulary, for further search. He returned June 28 with Tabalada's horse and informed me that he had buried Tabalada's body.

June 28, Inspectors Hunt and Luga left Cebu for Guadalupe at midnight. They arrested Clara Labra at 4 a. m. and returned to Cebu June 29. This man finally confessed that he was a soldier of the band. His story is as follows:

"On June 10, while I was at my home, I received a visit from Damaso and he told me that he had captured as prisoners four American school teachers and had them as prisoners in the mountains back of Guadalupe. He instructed me to give him warning if the constabulary or police came out that way to look for them. showed me a gold watch and chain, a revolver, and opera glasses, which he said he had taken from them. He also told me that Isodore Rama, Leccardio Regasco, and Libion Cabogan were with him at the time of the capture, and that they had taken the effects of the school teachers and divided them among themselves. The last time I saw Tabalada was on June 26, and then he told me that he still had the men as prisoners in the mountains." When shown the effects that were taken from the body of Tabalada, he identified them as those he had seen in the possession of Taba-He also admitted that he was the writer of the letter warning Tabalada that the constabulary was after him and his band and advising him to hide his arms. Labra was taken before the provincial fiscal June 30 and sent to the carcel to await trial.

June 30, Inspector Luga with 10 men, Philippine constabulary, left Cebu for Sudlan again in search of the missing teachers. July 1 Inspectors Hunt and Groves with 11 men, Philippine constabulary, went to the mountains back of Guadalupe. Hunt returned with Priva to Nicacio July 2, Inspector Groves and detachment staying in the mountains. Inspector Poggi and 12 men, Philippine constabulary, left Danao to search for the teachers July 2. At 9 a. m. a runner from Luga requested that 10 additional men be sent them, which was done at 9.30 a.m. with the runner. July 3, no news. July 4 Inspector Poggi returned to Danao and informed this office that he had received notice that Luga was fighting in the hills. Jule 5, no news. Inspector Groves and detachment returned to Cebu and reported as follows:

I left Cebu July 1, 1902, with 10 men, Philippine constabulary, and camped on the river at 3.30 p. m., about 1 mile above Guadalupe; left at 6 a. m. for Bacbac; found a native by the name of Tomas Tabonaires, who informed me that Isidore Rama had told him that he and Damaso Tabalada had captured four Americans and had taken them to Sudlan, passing through the barrio of Bacbac. I arrived at Bacbac at 4 p. m. July 2, and could find but one man who knew anything of the capture. He stated that Tabalada was the leader and author. We left Bacbac and camped at Antic at 7 p. m.; left there at 6 a. m. July 3, dividing the detachment, Sergeant Alcantara with five men scouting the territory northeast of Antic, I taking the general direction of Biasing and arriving there at noontime. Sergeant Alcantara rejoined the column at 2 p. m. We left Biasing at 4 p. m. and arrived at Betlen at 7 p. m., where we found a native who informed us that the Americans had passed through Betlen en route to Gunquitan, a barrio of Toledo. He said that he accompanied the party on the order of Tabalada and that the escort consisted of about 50 natives

"We left Betlen July 4 and camped for dinner at 2 p. m., marched at 4 p. m., and at 7. p. m. arrived at the foot of a large mountain. Here our guide informed us was the house of Tiente Minoy on its summit, and also that the American teachers were confined in a cave near the house. He said that he did not know whether or not they were still there, but he had heard that they were. Waiting at the foot of the hill we found a native coming up the river who informed us that the teniente was at home. The house was about 800 feet up the side of the mountain, which was very steep and was built in a natural fort so as to command a view for miles around. We found Tiente Minoy and two other men in the house, and also what appeared to be a natural crevice in the rocks. Upon investigation we found that it led to a large cell about 40 feet square with perpendicular walls. In the center of this was a house, and one of the men arrested here admitted that the Americans had been confined there. While further questioning him he darted through the crevice and made his escape. This caused considerable commotion; and our guide of the evening before, together with the man we found on the river bottom, jumped over a cliff about 35 feet high and disappeared in the brush. We could learn nothing more, and so, after a thorough search of the barrio, we returned toward Cebu. * * * While on a ridge between Toledo and Mingnaillawe we met a party of six men, all armed with bolos. One of them, Magno Segaria, not being able to give a satisfactory account of himself, I arrested. We arrived in Cebu July 6 with 3 prisoners and 11 bolos."

These 3 prisoners, Saturnino Gaviana (alias Tiente Minoy), Magno Cirgaria, and Jose Corralles, were taken before the governor by Inspector Hunt and asked to be kept in custody in the carcel, so that no one could see or speak to them, as we wished to question them later. This the civil governor, Juan Climaco, promised to do, and so remanded them to the carcel for investigation July 8, 1902. July 10, 1902, without potifying the constability officials of this province, he ordered their releases notifying the constabulary officials of this province, he ordered their release.

July 6, Inspector Luga returned to Cebu and reported that he left Cebu and proceeded in the direction of Sudlan; he reached Tagboa July 3 at 2 p. m. and encountered and engaged Quintin Tabal and his band, numbering about 12 men, armed with rifles. He withdrew his men with no loss and 3 of the ladrones killed, among whom was supposed to be a brother of Quintin, Antonio Tabal, alias Adoy. He captured 1 Remington rifle, 27 rounds of brass-jacketed ammunition for the same, 4 Krag bayonets, and 1 leather haversack.

July 7, 8, 9, and 10, no news. Ordered July 10 to suspend operations and let the civil governor's agents have the field, so as not to scare away the band.

July 11, 12, 13, 14, 15, 16, and 17, no news. July 18, Inspector Poggi returned to Danao.

July 19, notice was received through S. S. A. Caldron that there were two criminals in hiding in the mountains near Cebu.

July 20, Inspectors Hunt, Van Hoomeren, and Caldron, with 6 men, Philippine constabulary, left Cebu at 7 p. m., arriving at the barrio of Candugen at 1 a. m. July 21. They arrested Alejandro Assilla and his uncle, Epfanio Jamauan, both criminals. The former stated that his uncle was not present when the teachers were captured. He acknowledged that he was with Tabalada, and said that there were four bodies to be buried. On the way to the house of Luciano Lemana he stated that they had been buried underneath his old house in the mountains of Babog. The other would not give in and resisted arrest. One of the party said that the man was crazy, but he himself said he was sick. He was taken to his house and was in a very low condition after taking some liquid from his daughter, and was in a dying condition when left at his home. He probably had the cholera.

Acting on the information secured from Alejandro Assilla, we arrested Apolonio Cabellero, who finally admitted that he had helped to bury the bodies of four Americans. We also arrested Luciano Lemana, who seemed to know a great deal about the affair, and in whose house we found a pair of shoes and a pair of stockings which formerly belonged to one of the missing teachers. Proceeding on the information secured at this house, we came to Moaboal and arrested Roberto Capoli, who told of the capture, shooting, killing, and burial; he also said that he was willing to show the place where they were buried. We returned to Cebu at 10 a. m. July 21.

July 22 Inspector Poggi and S. S. A. Caldron, with 12 men, Philippine constabulary, and the 2 prisoners, Roberto Capoli and Apolinario Cabellero, proceeded to the barrio of Gingucupa and arrested Apolinario Gavito, who confessed that he and 10 other men had waylaid the teachers and shot and killed them, after which they were buried, and also that the 4 aforementioned prisoners were companions of Tabalada at the time of the murder and assisted at the same. The detachment then proceeded to the place where the bodies were interred. At Busing the bodies were recovered, and then the detachment made for Cebu. Suddenly 2 prisoners, Boberto Capoli and Apolinario Gavito, made a break for liberty. Gavito escaped and Capoli was retaken. They then proceeded to Guadaloupe and turned the bodies over to the senior inspector.

The bodies were put in coffins and brought to Cebu and deposited in the palace building. July 23 they were turned over to the supervisor of the province, Mr. J. G. Holcombe. All the bodies were identified as the 4 American teachers at the inquest, presided over by Assistant Surgeon Shaw, M. D., U. S. Army. They were interred at Guadaloupe road at 4 p. m. and the place marked.

After the killing of the leader, Damaso Tabalada, his men went to Quintin Tabal to join his band, but he took their rifles away and issued them to his own band. At the present time Quintin Tabal's band is made up of his own and what is left of Damaso Tabalada's.

There were 5 killed: Damaso Tabalada, Antonino Tabal, and 3 unknown.

Four are prisoners in the carcel, Cebu: Alejandro Assilia, Roberto Capoli, Luciano Lamana, and Apolinario Cabellero.

One escaped: Apolinario Gavito.

Number of miles traveled, 500; number of men engaged in the search, 75; number of expeditions, 13.

Very respectfully,

H. H. HUNT,
Second-Class Inspector, Philippine Constabulary,
Senior Inspector, Province of Cebu, P. I.

Headquarters Third District, Philippine Constabulary, Cebu, Cehu, P. I., August 8, 1903.

Respectfully forwarded to the chief, Philippine constabulary.

The report of the missing teachers was first received by me June 18, while in Leyte, and instructions were wired to call upon the governor for assistance from the municipal police under his direct supervision, and to employ all additional men necessary, both natives and Americans, to institute a vigorous search.

After the surrender of the insurgent forces in Levte, I went to Cebu with Inspector Groves and 30 men from Levte, arriving July 1. All the available forces continued working under the immediate supervision of Inspector Hunt. Mr. Calderon was called from Levte and Inspector Van Soomereen from Misamis to augment the force of officers. Every effort was made to induce the provincial governor to make vigorous and personal effort, but the dormant faculties could not be aroused.

On July 10, when the heavy storms and typhoon made expeditions almost im-

On July 10, when the heavy storms and typhoon made expeditions almost impracticable, the request of the governor to suspend operations for four days was acceded to.

He, through agents, was in touch with relatives of one bandit leader called Quintin, who it appears had taken possession of the 7 guns known to be in the hands of the band that committed the murder, and his relatives (Quintin's) said he would make prisoners of all the men implicated and surrender them, with his own band and guns, to the authorities, hoping thus to gain immunity from punishment for his own past sins.

This fell through, and efforts were redoubled on the part of the constabulary. It is reported that Inspector Ross warned these teachers of the danger of the trip, but as he is now absent, sick, and made no report, this can not be verified.

The point where the hydies were found is by various reports the point when

The point where the bodies were found is, by various reports, the point where they were first met by the bandits and attacked.

The appearance of the bodies when found indicated that 2 of the teachers were not killed or did not die from wounds until some time after the first attack.

The information from Labra that they were alive on the 26th of June and information secured by Inspector Groves that all 3 of them, were seen in a cave near Toledo, are believed to be pure fabrications on the part of those who were implicated, at least to the extent that they, as well as all living in that section, knew the fate of the teachers, and knew that their lives would be the price of leading any force to locate the bodies or ascertain where the murder was committed. The confessions of those closely identified with the murder also lead to the belief that if all were not killed at once they were shortly after disposed of and were not paraded through the

The efforts of Inspectors Hunt and Lugar and of Señor Calderon are worthy of commendation, for the perseverance shown in the face of so many disappointments.

The character of the country where the teachers journeyed is, in so far as inhabitants are concerned, likened unto the "bad lands" of our own country, where you may go for miles entirely out of sight of human beings, and where one may readily losé his bearings.

Sorrowful lesson though this may be, yet the fact must not be lost sight of that America took these islands with the avowed intention of lifting them up out of the very savagery of which this experience furnishes an example, and that in the beginning America declared conditions to be as they were, and now are, and the mere ending of organized insurrection and the establishment of civil government does not signify that the hopes of America are so early realized and that savagery no longer exists.

HEADQUARTERS PHILIPPINES CONSTABULARY, Manila, P. I., August 23, 1902.

Respectfully referred to the general superintendent of public instruction, Manila, inviting attention to the effort made by the constabulary toward securing the bodies of the unfortunate teachers and bringing to justice the perpetrators of that dastardly crime. Special attention is invited to first indorsement, and return of these papers requested. Inspector Ross informed me that he duly warned the teachers.

> HENRY T. ALLEN, Chief of Constabulary.

Hon. Fred W. Atkinson, General Superintendent of Public Instruction, Manila, P. I.

DEAR SIR: I have the honor to present the following report relative to the four American teachers, Louis A. Thomas, John E. Wells, Ernst Heger, and Clyde O. France, who were taken captive and murdered in the mountains to the north of Cebu on June 10, 1902.

Messrs. Louis A. Thomas, John E. Wells, Ernst Heger, and Clyde O. France arrived in Cebu on May 30, 1902. They were instructed to make themselves as comfortable as they could and await the American Teachers' Institute, which was to be opened on June 16, after which they would be assigned to their stations. They, with Mr. H. B. Holmes and Mr. Harry H. Brown, took a house in San Nicholas in which to live until they should go to their stations.

On the morning of June 10 these four teachers started from Cebu for a day in the foothills to the north of the city. Their purpose, in so far as it is known, was to enjoy a day's outing and take pictures of the mountain scenery. They expected to return to the city in the evening of the same day. They did not return. On the morning of June 11 Messrs. Holmes and Brown notified Mr. Ross, chief of the constabulary in Cebu, and 10 constabulary men, under First Sergeant Jafra, went out to Guadaloupe, but learned nothing of the whereabouts of the teachers. Upon their return Messrs. Holmes and Brown called at my home and advised me relative to the matter.

Inspector Ross was officially notified on June 12, and three detachments of constabulary were ordered out, as follows: Cebu, Inspector Roberts with 20 men, Inspector Luga with 15 men; Danao, Inspector Poggi with 15 men; Barili, Inspector Hunt with 10 men.

Daily conferences were held with Inspector Ross relative to what should be done, in all of which it was decided that all was being done that could be done and that it would be unwise to take any further steps until the men in the field were heard from. The orders to the men in the field were that in case they found the teachers they should not return immediately, but continue their march against the band of ladrones led by one Adoy. Five days passed and no news.

On June 17, 1902, the following telegram was sent to the department. The department was not advised earlier because it was thought that to do so would cause great anxiety and unrest without accomplishing any real good.

"ATKINSON, Manila:

"Four teachers in the mountains since a week to-day. Nothing heard from them. Three detachments of constabulary out, with orders not to return ti'l they are found. Letter following.

"BARD."

On June 18 Inspectors Hunt and Poggi reported by wire from Balamban that "they were unable to find any trace of the teachers in that neighborhood." Hunt's report.) Information relative to the teachers was expected rather from Inspector Roberts or Inspector Luga, who went out from Cebu, rather than from either Inspector Hunt or Inspector Poggi, and so we were not greatly disappointed at receiving the above telegram from Balamban.

On June 16 the American Teachers' Institute opened in Cebu. (Special report of which so far as concerns this matter attached.) The American teachers assembled manifested a great anxiety, and all Americans were beginning to lose confidence in the safety of the missing teachers. After conference with several of the leading men, both resident and visiting, among whom were Judges Hauserman and Carter, it was decided that the civil governor should be asked to request the provincial governor of Cebu, Juan Climaco, to exhaust every means in his power to find or account for the missing teachers. The following telegrams were sent:

"Please request Governor Wright to have Governor Climaco exhaust every means in his power to find or account for four teachers who disappeared from Cebu one week ago.

Immediately after sending these telegrams I called upon Governor Climaco and had a conference as to what could be done. Although Inspector Ross reported to me that the governor had been advised by him immediately upon receipt of my report, the governor seemed to have his first information from me on the morning of June 17.

On June 17 Inspector Ross was relieved on account of ill health and left for Manila, and Inspector Hunt was called from Barili to succeed him. Inspector Hunt took up the work with a determination to do all that could be done to discover the whereabouts and the fate of the missing teachers.

Until Inspector Hunt arrived from Barili Inspector Warren was in command in Cebu. From this time on the department was kept advised, as correspondence attached will show.

On June 20, by order of Inspector Warren, Inspector Luga, with 4 men, all in civilian dress, went to the mountains and tried to join the ladrones as deserters from the constabulary. Six days passed and no word. June 27, at 4.25 a. m., Inspector Luga returned to Cebu and reported that on the evening before at 8 o'clock he had met Damaso Tablada, leader of the band of ladrones operating near Guadaloupe, and in self-defense killed him. On his person were found, along with other things, a gold watch and chain belonging to Louis A. Thomas, a Smith & Wesson revolver belonging to Mr. John E. Wells. This was the first trace of the missing teachers that had been found to date.

On June 28, at midnight, Inspectors Hunt and Luga left for Guadaloupe and arrested one Claro Labra, who confessed that he was a member of the band. He said also that the American teachers had not been murdered up to June 26, but had been taken captive and were held prisoners in the mountains back of Guadaloupe;

but this has not been verified.

The search was continued under Inspectors Groves, Luga, and Poggi, under the direction of Inspector Hunt, to July 10. No further news was received. From July 10 to July 18 the civil governor's agents were at work. On July 20 Inspectors Hunt, Van Hoomoren, and Caldron again went into the field and made several arrests, among them was one Apolonio Caballero, who admitted that he helped bury the bodies of the four American teachers, and one Luciano Lamana, in whose house were found a pair of shoes and stockings belonging to the missing teachers. This man gave information which led to the arrest of one Roberto Capoli, who told of the capture, shooting, killing, and burial of the four teachers.

The inspectors returned to Cebu at 10 a. m., July 21. On July 22 Inspectors Poggi and Calderon, with 12 men and the two prisoners, Roberto Capoli and Apolonio Caballero, proceeded to Busing, the place where the bodies of the teachers were interred. The bodies were recovered and brought to Cebu on the evening of July 22 and turned over to the provincial supervisor, Mr. J. G. Holcombe.

On the morning of July 23 an autopsy was held under the direction of Capt. Henry A. Shaw, assistant surgeon, U. S. Army, at which were present Drs. Mascalina, Hertsey Republic and Hill. (Report attached). On the often one of the grant of the captains.

Hartsook, Reynolds, and Hill. (Report attached.) On the afternoon of the same day a funeral was held in the courtyard of the palace. Episcopal service was read by the Rev. John A. Staunton, jr., and the bodies were interred in a piece of the government's land near Guadaloupe road, north of Cebu. The coffins in which they were interred were secured from the quartermaster, U. S. Army, and were marked as follows:

That marked with one brass tack contains the remains of Ernst Heger.

That marked with two brass tacks contains the remains of Louis A. Thomas.

That marked with three brass tacks contains the remains of Clyde O. France.

That marked with four brass tacks contains the remains of John E. Wells. In each coffin was placed also a sealed bottle in which the name and address, written on linen, was placed.
Copies of the following reports are attached:

Previous correspondence.

Inspector Hunt's report to the second assistant chief in Manila may be seen by calling upon the chief of constabulary.

Very respectfully,

H. E. BARD,

Division Superintendent of Schools, Division of Cebu,

CEBU, CEBU, P. I., August 25, 1902.

The governor of the province of Cebu also submits a report to Mr. Bard, the division superintendent, but nothing of material importance is brought out in the During this time telegrams were being sent to and from Manila; the civil governor had telegraphed the provincial governor to use all efforts to find the missing teachers, and the chief of constabulary had given instructions which assisted greatly in the search.

The teachers who had gathered in the city of Cebu for the American Teachers' Institute were much excited about the disappearance, and a few even went so far as to set out on a search, in spite of the counsel of the division superintendent. As the constabulary had a disguised party of native police out in the hills endeavoring (and with success) to obtain information by strategy, the expedition of teachers endangered not only their own lives, but the lives of these disguised members of the constabulary as well. The acting general superintendent, on learning of this fact, telegraphed to the division superintendent, forbidding any more teachers endangering their lives. The story of the efforts of the teachers is told in the following notes, chiefly from the records of the American Teachers' Institute at Cebu.

"On the morning of June 16 was opened the American Teachers' Institute in the San Nicolas public school building. Twenty-five American teachers were present. Immediately after the opening of the meeting the question relative to the missing teachers was brought up. It was proposed by Mr. John G. Gwartney that some steps be taken on the part of the teachers to ascertain the whereabouts of our fellowteachers. All teachers showed a desire to go to the mountains in search. I disapproved such a step, as it seemed hazardous, unwise, and impractical. The teachers were advised of the steps already taken by the constabulary and were urged to be composed and wait a report from the three detachments of constabulary then in the field. However, the matter was thoroughly discussed, some favoring and some opposing definite action, but all thoroughly in earnest and anxious to do whatever they could to learn the whereabouts of the young men and give relief, if not already too late. Several motions were made, such as that the constabulary be asked to turn the matter over to the military; that the constabulary be requested to provide teachers with firearms and ammunition and such other supplies as would be necessary with transportation for same; that they go to the mountains in search. These motions were not entertained. It was proposed finally that a committee be appointed to investigate as to what was being done by the authorities and to decide upon the action to be taken by the teachers. This motion was entertained with the understanding that the committee would not be allowed to propose any action not approved by myself.

"The committee was appointed, consisting of myself, as chairman, Mr. John G. Gwartney, and Mr. J. V. Barrow. This committee immediately retired to call upon the chief of constabulary, Mr. Ross, and members of the provincial board.

"Members of the committee were convinced that all was being done that could be done and reported the same, advising that no further action be taken for the present. The committee reported that 3 detachments, with a total of 65 men, had been sent out with orders not to return until they had found some definite trace of the teachers. One of these detachments started from Barili, another from Tuburan, and another from Cebu, planning to meet somewhere to the east of Balamban.

"The teachers were satisfied with the report, and the regular programme was continued. At every session whatever information was obtainable was announced.

"Afternoon session, June 17, 1902.—An effort was made by Mr. Vallance and Mr. Lindeman to bring up again for discussion this matter, but were not entertained on the ground that it was not advisable until we had the latest report from the constabulary. At the close of the session report was made that nothing had been heard from the detachments; that the department had been requested to ask that the civil governor request Governor Climaco to do all he could to find or account for the missing teachers. The teachers were urged again to take no undue risks. Anyone going out of the regularly traveled highways would do so at his own risk and against positive instructions from the department

"At the close of the morning session of June 18 the teachers were again advised that the detachments were still in the field and not heard from. Everything seemed quiet, and it was thought that nothing more would be done.

"All detachments returned on the evening of June 18 and brought no news of the missing teachers, but the search was continued both by the constabulary and by the governor.

"On Saturday morning, June 21, the following teachers, equipped with such firearms as they could obtain or possessed, started to the mountains in search of the missing teachers: Mr. John G. Gwartney, Mr. John M. Miller, Mr. George B. Schiller, Mr. Charles A. Vallance, Mr. H. M. McCabe, Mr. Harry H. Brown, Mr. H. B. Holmes, and Mr. Thomas J. Nihill. They did this against the positive instructions of this department, and also against the advice of the constabulary inspectors and other influential men. They were out all day, returning about 5 o'clock in the evening, fortunately unharmed. It is difficult, if not impossible, to place the responsibility for the action.

"After this, teachers became quiet and willingly left the constabulary undisturbed in its goard, which it continued until July 22, when the bodies were found."

in its search, which it continued until July 22, when the bodies were found."

The circumstances of the death of these teachers have not been fully determined, and unless full confession is made by some of the prisoners now awaiting trial the exact time, manner, and place of the killing of the four teachers will never be known.

That everything possible was done by the constabulary, and that the only means that could lead to the recovery of the bodies and the bringing of the murderers to justice were promptly taken, can not be doubted. It is probable from the evidence that there was no possibility of finding the teachers alive after the first day.

FILIPINO TEACHERS.

In other parts of this report are given details of the work for the betterment of the Filipino teachers in an educational way by daily instruction, vacation institutes, and normal schools. These teachers are appointed by the division superintendents and are paid by the municipalities. The exact number of Filipino teachers in service on September 1 is not known exactly, as the division superintendent in most cases only report those regularly appointed by him, and many teachers are actively engaged in teaching in barrios and the more inaccessible towns where the division superintendents, with their press of other duties, have not penetrated and where communication has been slow and infrequent. On the 1st of July there were reported by division superintendents 1,838 separate schools and 2,625 native teachers. On account of the ravages of cholera only those teachers were reported who were known to be at work since the beginning of the school year, and the tabulated report (Exhibit B) will show many provinces where no schools are reported except those taught by American teachers. In the island of Marinduque alone, where only 4 native teachers were reported, later returns have shown that 52 are at work. a fair and conservative estimate for these unreported teachers, the total will be in the neighborhood of 3,400 native teachers at the present time.

A considerable advance has been secured in the salaries of Filipino teachers, but this advance has not kept pace with the rapid upward leap of salaries in all occupations since American occupation—especially during the past year. The average salary for male teachers is about 20 peecs a month; for female teachers, 15 peecs; or, in terms of United States money, little more than $8 and $6, respectively, per The extreme range of salaries is from 4 to 60 pesos, or even higher in one month. or two cases, but very few receive over 40. In the case of one teacher, receiving the absurd salary of 4 pesos per month, the municipality objected to raising his salary because they needed the money for roads!

The condition in many provinces is well illustrated by the following extract from a report from the island of Bohol:
"The salaries in this division are very inadequate and irregularly paid. The monthly salaries for men teachers range from 5 to 30 pesos, those of women teachers from 4 to 20 pesos. For a short time, during last year, the man teacher in Tagbilaran was paid 40 pesos per month, but he 'farmed' the position, hiring a substitute for

10 pesos. * * *

"The native teachers have petitioned for an increase of salary. I have explained

"The native teachers, and, since the pueblos are all very poor, they can not afford to pay good salaries. Just now the constabulary is trying to organize a force on this island, and the pay offered is as follows: Per month, first-class privates, 21 pesos; second-class privates, 18 pesos; corporals, 28 pesos; duty sergeants, 35 pesos; first sergeants, 45 pesos. In the grade of sergeant only is reading and writing a requisite. It is difficult for the native teachers to discern why the government that can pay its police the schedule quoted above can not pay them with equal liberality. The average salary per month for men teachers is about 15 pesos, and for women about 12 pesos."

Another difficulty which has caused much trouble is the requirement that salaries can be increased only in the annual appropriations, unless by special approval of the provincial treasurer. The following extract will illustrate this class of hindrances:

"The municipal council can appropriate, but such action is inoperative if, in the opinion of the provincial treasurer, the expenditure is not justified. This includes expenditures for construction and repair of schoolhouses, the providing of furniture, and the native teacher's salary allowance. My predecessor in this division had appointed native teachers and increased the salaries of others during the fiscal year. This, according to the later decision of the attorney-general, was impossible without the approval of the provincial treasurer. This approval he appears to have been unable to obtain in a great many cases. Upon January 1, 1902, these appointments and increases made by my predecessor should have become operative, and the proper procedure was for the presidente to include the new salaries and increases upon old salaries in the 'presupuesto,' or annual expense account, which is sent to the provincial treasurer for approval. This 'presupuesto' is supposed to contain a statement of all municipal expenses for the year. Many presidentes, in making up these 'presupuestos,' included only the salaries at the old figure, some of them even cut this down. The provincial treasurer had no means of knowing that the salary entries in the 'presupuestos' were not entirely in accord with the wishes and appointments of the division superintendent. I discovered that these 'presupuestos' were wrong in several cases, and acting upon this information I requested the provincial treasurer to hold the 'presupuestos' until I could ascertain as to the genuineness of these I am pleased to state that the treasurer did everything in his power to assist me in this matter. In many cases back salary of native teachers amounting to several hundred pesos had accrued. In such cases the provincial treasurer ordered the particular presidente to include this back salary as an expense item in a special 'presupuesto' and send same to him at once. In this way our difficulty along the line of native teachers' salaries has been about cleared up.

There are some teachers at present who are receiving sufficient compensation for the quality of work they are able to do. There are many who are doing excellent work and yet are receiving barely enough salary to meet their living expenses. Although division superintendents have made great efforts to get increases made, the average compensation of native school-teachers is much below the wages paid for good cocheros, cooks, policemen, and in many cases below that of laborers. The government is employing many natives in both the military and civil branches, and the civil service, with its policy of training intelligent Filipinos in clerical positions, opens a field peculiarly fascinating to this class, and at salaries far above the pay of teacher. Complaint is made that bright natives attend the normal classes for a time, obtain a little knowledge of English and facility in the common branches, and then pass the civil-service examination and take positions in offices under the American clerks, thus losing to the educational work the services of many bright teachers.

The suggestion has been made that the insular government should fix the salaries and pay the native teachers, but this can not be assumed by the General Government, and solution must be sought along the municipal or provincial lines. The law provides that a tax of one-fourth of 1 per cent of the valuation of real estate shall be collected and used for support of schools, payment of teachers, erection of buildings, etc., as is more fully stated in the section on "Finances." In the poorer provinces this tax in many cases has not been collected, or, if collected, has been of so small amount as to leave the problem still unsolved. As conditions improve the municipalities will be able to grant the increased salaries to their native teachers.

There is at present no means of knowing the ability of native teachers except by actual observation of their work. Hence some system of certificates is necessary. Such existed under the Spanish rule, but were of little value because they were not true indexes of the teachers' ability. The question was recently submitted to the various division superintendents, and the general opinion is that a system of examination should be introduced gradually, and on the results of which certificates of first and second grades should be issued.

The matter of pensioning Filipino teachers was also submitted to the division superintendents for their opinions. The majority were in favor of such pensioning on the grounds that teaching would thus be made a desirable life profession, and at the same time teachers could without hardship be removed from active work to make place for the younger, more active, and efficient ones. These matters of pensioning teachers and of issuing certificates remain to be worked out.

The establishment of normal courses in the provincial high schools tends to the solution of the problem of securing efficient native teachers, for the graduates of these institutions go out well equipped for their work with a substantial training in English and the common branches. This work of preparing the Filipinos to teach their own countrymen is one of the fundamental elements of the present school system, and is one of the most significant signs to the Filipinos of the true purpose of the American Government toward the Filipino people.

The following lists, taken at random, indicate the varying salaries of Filipino teachers, and are also interesting as giving an idea of Filipino proper names:

OFFICE ORGANIZATION.

The work of the office force of 22 American clerks is sharply divided into three distinct sections—general, disbursing, and property.

The disbursing section is under the charge of Mr. Charles H. Fullaway, who is bonded and is held accountable for every cent of money invoiced to this bureau. In this connection it may be noted that this bureau has the largest single disbursing office in the archipelago, and the monthly accounts consist of thousands of papers. All the American teachers throughout the archipelago are paid on vouchers from this office, both for night and day school work, and in addition the various claims for traveling expenses of division superintendents, teachers, and other employees, the transportation of supplies, text-books, and teachers throughout the field, and the bills for puchase of all supplies pass through this office. The auditor for the islands has expressed warm commendation of the work of the present disbursing officer.

The property section has charge of the various storehouses for books, desks, and supplies; receives, repacks, and ships to destination the hundreds of different articles needed by the rapidly growing school work. Mr. William Stewart has this work in charge. Connected with this section is a varying number of Filipino laborers, a portion being regularly employed and others hired as necessity demands. The storehouses for school property have been located at considerable distance from the main office and in different directions, necessitating a division of the property force between these storehouses and the storerooms in the wing of the ayuntamiento, in which building the main office is located. A statement of the supplies handled during the year appears under the head of "Text-books and supplies."

The general section has charge of all records, files, reports, and correspondence, the latter filed and indexed for cross reference by name and subject. Among the records and files may be mentioned:

Alphabetical lists of teachers and stations, kept corrected to date; mailing lists, post-office and division superintendents being notified of each change.

Station list of teachers, by towns, provinces, and divisions. Personal information cards for all teachers and employees.

Secondary teachers.

Separations from service. Reports of division superintendents, civil and military officers, classified by divisions.

Reports of secondary schools, including vacation normal schools. Efficiency reports on work of American teachers.

Appointment files, including all papers of teachers appointed. Application files; information condensed by card indexes.

Division superintendents' reports of absences. Appointees awaiting transportation from States.

Reports to civil-service board and to War Department.

Files of special reports called for at various times, including cash-record cards, giving complete information of all items pertaining to salary, increases, transfers, vouchers, checks, etc.

Complete records and accounts of the disbursing officer and the property clerk in their respective sections.

Especial care has been given to the prompt answering of all telegrams, correspondence, and to paying salaries of teachers at the earliest moment consistent with regulations.

Valuable special reports were collected and tabulated at the beginning of the present year, this work being in charge of Mr. Percy M. Moir, a statistical expert who had come to these islands as a teacher, and in addition was charged with the investigation of conditions here looking toward the possibility of taking a census in the

When division superintendents are provided with sufficient clerical assistance and conditions become more stable summaries of the monthly reports of teachers will be forwarded to this office for tabulation and record, but at present it is impossible to do this work, and on account of slowness of communication it will be impossible to get all reports for a given month completely tabulated until two or three months later.

The office force of this bureau on the 1st of September, 1902, was as follows:

TEXT-BOOKS AND SUPPLIES; COURSE OF STUDY.

The problem of selecting suitable text-books for Filipino children has been a difficult one. With the view of getting the teachers' ideas as to the relative merits of the English texts used, questions were sent out asking for detailed answers. The teachers, almost without exception, found the books undesirable, for the reason that they dealt with things unfamiliar to the Filipino child. The stories and pictures were those of a different environment, intended for children of another country. Such words as "strawberry," "snow," "Jack Frost," and "fairy" possess little significance for the children of the Philippines.

It was finally decided to make known to various American publishers that a set of primary readers prepared expressly for the Filipinos were needed as the only satisfactory permanent solution of the problem. The plan of the books includes considerable drill and practice in phonics, with verbs which can be acted out, or which lend themselves easily to gesture. The nouns are to be the names of familiar objects, and the sentences are to develop from the most simple to the complex forms with the view of teaching other words largely from the context. The work before the third reader is to be such as to enable the teacher, when this book is taken up, to explain in English all the new and more difficult words and expressions. Sufficient repetition in each book and throughout the set is to be made to fix the more common forms of expression. Bright, attractive illustrations of such a sort as really to help the child understand are to be a feature.

The books should be strictly reading books, based upon the pedagogics of reading, but with the view of correlating and mutually reenforcing the work and of awakening many-sided interest. The matter in the second and third readers is to be varied. Simple music, nature study, the elements of geography, grammar, and arithmetic, manual training, and a study of form are to be introduced.

The general plan included two courses—one basic, the other supplementary—for which the special books, midway between the American and the so-called "colonial" texts, will be used.

An elementary language book is to be taken up at the close of the third year, made with direct reference to these readers. A geographical reader treating of Philippine life and hygiene for children of the Tropics are to be included in the supplementary course, and a special reading chart in colors is to accompany the course.

For the aid of the inexperienced American teachers and the Filipino teachers a special manual is to be written, in which will be treated the use of the books, the blackboard, the chart, and the work at the desk.

Until such a set of books becomes available a suggestive course of study was printed and sent out to the teachers.

The problem of supplying the schools with the necessary material for work is a hard one, for two reasons: First, the time it occupied in securing supplies from the United States; and, second, the lack of transportation in these islands.

All supplies have to be ordered about six months in advance of the time for which they are required to insure their being on hand when needed. It is difficult in many cases to determine beforehand what quantities of different articles will be used, as some books are more in demand than others of the same grade. Also to avoid making too many small shipments, the different kinds of supplies should arrive at the same time.

The lack of transportation is the greatest factor, for there is no way of providing ainst it. Until December 1, 1901, the Quartermaster's Department took all shipments as soon as packed and forwarded them. Since then it has taken any shipment when it had a boat billed for the destination. The assistance of the Quartermaster's Department has been invaluable, as otherwise it would put this bureau to great expense and the teachers to greater trouble in securing supplies. Whenever no quartermaster boat touches at the port for which the shipment is destined, shipment is made by private lines. In case the consignee is not stationed at that port, the teacher who is there has charge of the forwarding.

For about one-half of the places in the entire archipelago Manila is the natural supply point. For instance, Surigao is reached much more readily from Manila than from Zamboanga, the headquarters for the division superintendent for the island of Mindanao. Towns in Sorsogon and Albay provinces are more easily reached from Manila than from Nueva Caceres, the headquarters for the division of Camarines, Albay, and Sorsogon, and even from some other towns in the same provinces. division of Cagayan and Isabela, however, is supplied from Aparri, situated at the mouth of the Rio Cagayan. This phase of the transportation question makes it necessary to ship directly to about one-half of the teachers individually and to the other half through their division superintendents. In all, 1,719 issues have been made during the past year, most of them in small lots to individual teachers and the rest to division superintendents in good-sized shipments.

During the time when the teachers were taking their stations last year, many requisitions were cut down because the quantity of supplies on hand was limited, and if the requisitions were filled in full the last teachers to take their stations would have received almost nothing. After everybody had laid in a first supply requisitions were filled in full if the articles were on hand.

About the middle of December, 1901, 4,000 American school desks were received from the United States and were equally divided among the different divisions. These desks came in knock-down shape and castings came separate from the backs or tops, thereby making the reshipping much harder than it otherwise would have been. The last order of American desks came packed five complete desks in a box, and although there are five times as many, the expense for packing will be less.

25,000 Ward's Primer. 25,000 Ward's First Reader. 1,000 Ward's Manual to Teachers. 500 Phonetic Cards, Primer. 500 Phonetic Cards, First Reader. 20,000 Songs of the Nation. 10,000 Child's First Studies in Music 10,000 Normal Music Course, First Reader. 40,000 Baldwin Primer. 25,000 Baldwin First Reader. 10,000 Baldwin Second Reader. 20,000 Baldwin Third Reader. 10,000 Shaw's Big People and Little People of Other Lands. 20,000 Eggleston's Stories of Great Ameri- 1,000 Filipino desks. cans for Little Americans.

COURSE OF STUDY.

In March of the present year a suggestive course of study was prepared, and as soon as it could be printed was distributed to the American teachers throughout the These pamphlets were in the hands of all American teachers prior to the opening of the present school year, and in so far as the diversity of attainments will permit the instruction throughout the archipelago is proceeding along the lines laid down.

This suggestive course of study was prepared after careful observation of the native pupils and their work, and, while subject to modifications, will give a uniform basis from which the local differences may be ascertained and more permanent courses arranged to conform to the diverse conditions in different parts of the islands. formity, while very desirable, is not entirely possible, but it is thought that the present course will meet the requirements of the principal classes of school children

During the latter part of 1901 a pamphlet entitled "How shall we teach English to the Filipino?" had been distributed to American teachers as a guide, this pamphlet having been written by a division superintendent who had been in close contact with the Filipino pupils since the fall of 1900.

SCHOOL BUILDINGS.

One of the great handicaps in the work at present is the lack of suitable school buildings in many of the towns. During the late insurrections and wars many substantial buildings were partly or wholly destroyed and in the majority of cases have not been rebuilt, but instead replaced by those of a temporary character.

In answer to a special circular letter sent out to the teachers, a detailed report on school buildings was made, from which it was possible to gain accurate information on the condition of each schoolhouse. The estimated number of school buildings is 1,500, many built of stone, but the larger number of wood and nipa. For a time some schools were conducted in convents, but this practice in general was discontinued on the recommendation of the civil governor in order to avoid any harsh feeling between the church and civil authorities.

Often the buildings are used for other purposes—as the presidencia or other office, as a dwelling, or even a store. The practice obtained under Spanish rule of using the schoolhouse as the home of the teacher and his family—a custom that has been set aside now with the idea of raising the dignity of the school building.

The schoolhouses are in various stages of equipment; some have received the modern American desks which recently arrived, others are fitted with rather crude but serviceable Filipino desks, and still others have nothing but a few bamboo benches for turniture. The floor space varies from 160 to 3,000 square feet, and the amount of blackboard surface from none to 600 square feet. The buildings contain from 1 to 8 rooms, and in general the conditions of light and sanitation are good, but the state of repair generally only fair, frequently poor, and in many cases bad.

Activity on the part of the towns in providing suitable schoolhouses is on the increase, and when these municipalities are on a firmer financial basis, more is to be expected. Furthermore, with the withdrawal of the soldiers from various towns which have come under civil régime, where their services are no longer needed, the number of satisfactory buildings for school purposes increases.

During the past year little has been accomplished in the way of building new schoolhouses, lack of funds being the chief cause of the delay. Since the establishment of the bureau of architecture, during the latter part of 1901, the construction of all public buildings comes under the control of that bureau. In reply to a communication asking for an appropriation to aid in the construction of school buildings, the honorable secretary of public instruction outlined the policy of his department on the subject in the following indorsement:

"Office of Secretary of Public Instruction, "Manila, January 8, 1902.

"Respectfully returned to the general superintendent of public instruction, with the statement that hereafter it is proposed that all appropriations for the construction and repair of public buildings shall be made to the bureau of architecture for such specific purposes as may be approved, and that it will be the policy of the bureau of architecture and construction of public buildings to encourage the municipalities to construct proper schoolhouses, and in cases where the municipalities are unable to meet the whole necessary expense to find out by correspondence or personal negotiation how much the municipality will be able to contribute on condition that a certain contribution is made by the insular government.

In this connection it should be borne in mind that municipalities are not authorized to incur indebtedness for the construction of public buildings as is the case in the United States, but must provide for all public expenses from the limited amount of revenue collected from year to year. Were it possible to allow municipalities to borrow money for this purpose there is no doubt that suitable buildings would be promptly erected in many towns.

SCHOOL FINANCES.

INSULAR.

The expenses incurred in the interests of education here are met by the insular government, the provinces, and the municipalities.

The salaries of the American supervisors and teachers, the reimbursements for traveling expenses, the office rent of division superintendents, and the cost of transporting these to the various towns—all these are paid for by the insular treasury.

The teachers and books for the provincial high schools are furnished by the insular government, the sites, buildings, and equipment by the provinces.

The salaries of native teachers, together with the cost of local school buildings and their equipment, are paid for by the municipalities.

Expenses of the bureau of public instruction for the Philippine Islands for the fiscal year 1902, being for the period from July 1, 1901, to June 30, 1902, were as follows:

|                               | U.S. currency. |
|-------------------------------|----------------|
| Salaries and wages            | $893, 428, 20 |

| Total                         | 1 941 026 54   |

These figures represent the expenditures from appropriations made for obligations of the fiscal year 1902, and are furnished by the auditor for the Philippine Archi-pelago, to whom all disbursing officers expending funds of this bureau account direct.

MUNICIPAL AND PROVINCIAL.

By the requirements of the municipal code it is made mandatory that "the proceeds of at least one-fourth of 1 per cent of the lands and improvements as assessed shall be devoted exclusively to the support of free public schools and the providing or erection of suitable school buildings." There is no provision which limits expenditure for school purposes to this amount. The low valuation of real estate and the difficulty of collecting the tax in the provinces have caused much trouble in school matters, as will be seen in extracts from letters from division superintendents. It should be remembered that a tax on real estate is a new method of raising revenue in the Philippines, and has been inaugurated since American control began.

The provincial revenues are likewise raised by a tax upon land to the amount of three-eighths of 1 per cent of the valuation thereof. This tax is expendable for the construction and repair of roads and for other provincial purposes. Thus far no trouble has been experienced in obtaining from provincial officers the renting of buildings for provincial high schools and the proper equipment of the same in cases where the provincial revenues warranted.

The policy of the insular government is to require the provincial governments to support the secondary schools as soon as their financial status will permit, paying not only for supplies, but also the salaries of American teachers. The same plan will subsequently be followed in the case of municipalities, the support of the primary schools in all particulars being transferred to municipal boards when the time is ripe. That some time will elapse before that moment arrives is evident from the report of the division superintendents, whose duties bring them into close contact with the provincial and municipal boards. A few excerpts are given as illustrations:

"There is not a pueblo in this division that can afford to pay 10 pesos per month to 2 teachers for each barrio. There are only 14 teachers in this province who are receiving more than 10 pesos per month, even in the pueblo schools. In this province the provincial treasurer's representative on the board of assessors for valuing and assessing real estate is a Filipino. I inquired into the why of this and found that there was a great fuss raised against having an American as the treasurer's representative on this board.

"Results: This pueblo (Tuguegarao) will have a little over 3,000 pesos of land tax. The salary list of teachers for the year will amount to more that the whole tax, and there is not a schoolhouse of any kind in the pueblo.

"The valuation placed upon the best tobacco lands by the board was 100 pesos per hectare. I offered the members of the board 400 pesos per hectare for their primera clase' land and they would not sell it to me. Such is life in the Philippines.

"Unless we can do something to compel boards of assessors to place land on the tax list at its real value, we can not by any means now in our power raise enough money to support the schools by the full one-half per cent tax."

"Many large barrios and several pueblos are without schools. Can not pay enough to secure teachers. Land tax is a farce."

"There is not a town in this division that will have enough land-tax money, even if the whole one-half percent is levied for school purposes, to pay the running expenses of its schools for the year. It is very doubtful if one-half of the towns will have enough from the land tax to pay the salary of one teacher at 10 persos for a year. The constabulary pays its men 20 pesos; the military, 15 pesos.

"I have visited every town in Occidental Negros in which an American teacher is located, and have made a special study of the existing conditions in regard to this matter. There are some presidentes whom I respect highly for their evident desire to do the best thing possible for their schools, but the best of them are wholly unfamiliar with such duties and responsibilities as are about to be thrust upon them when the taxes for this year are collected. In other towns the presidentes are absolutely worthless, and will look upon the school funds as legitimate spoil for themselves and their hangers-on. I have in mind particularly one presidente of a town in which a feudal system exists. The entire property of the town belongs to one wealthy Filipino, who is a nonresident most of the year. The inhabitants are serfs. The municipal officers are merely tools of the proprietor, and make no move except at his beck and nod. The cockpit is in the yard of the Casa Popular, and the presidente is more interested in betting on fights conducted there than in any official The strongest teacher in the island has been located in this town, and he wrote me last week that he believed his time was being wasted.

"The present law would not work satisfactorily in America with American school trustees. It seems like inviting scandal to put at the disposal of Filipino school officials more money than many of them have ever seen, giving them opportunity to spend improperly more than all their possessions are worth.

"The financial situation in this province is entirely unsatisfactory. The land tax has been assessed with some degree of regularity in the municipality of Surigao, and in no other municipality as far as I can learn. The municipal code requires that a in no other municipality as far as I can learn. The municipal code requires that a specially appointed deputy of the provincial treasurer shall be a member of each municipal board of assessors, and that such boards should have met to organize on the 1st day of last September. As there are 34 municipalities in this province, and as the treasurer has only 3 deputies allowed him, the legislative and executive branches of the government seem to have failed to connect. I do not wish this to seem in any way as a complaint against Captain Kelly, the treasurer, who seems to be a very hard worker and a good man; yet the fact remains that our school funds are not in. I have been trying to get things started here and shall continue if it seems worth my time, but of this I am in doubt at present. Few, if any, assessments outside of the municipality of Surigao have been made or even begun. Boards of assessors have not been organized, and I can only stir up the treasurer and the people on the subject.

"I will confine myself to the situation in Oriental Negros, as my data is reasonably complete for that province only. During my recent visit to that side of the island I examined the records in the office of the provincial treasurer, and also inspected the books and papers of many of the towns in that province.

"The assessment list is very small, as you will observe. The income for schools to be derived from the land tax will be exceedingly small. It will be less in almost every case than was paid by the towns to their native teachers before the coming of the American teachers and before the adoption of the school law by the Commission. On the other hand, the attendance in the schools is large and demands many native teachers to handle the work. The towns of Lacy and Canoan, having an average attendance of 555 and 537, respectively, have each been in the hands of one American teacher and two native teachers during the past year.

"I asked Governor Wright what should be done to secure funds for paying an adequate force of Filipino teachers in view of the evident inadequacy of the revenues provided by the land tax. He replied that the towns must pay out of their other municipal funds. Acting on this advice Major Peed, the provincial treasurer, said that if I would appoint enough native teachers to meet the necessities of each town and would keep the pay within such limits that the town would have enough left to pay other necessary municipal expenses, he would refuse to approve the 'estimates' of the towns until they contained an item for salaries of native teachers equal to the total teachers' salary roll for the town.

"We had the revenues of the different towns for the past nine months and the new assessments as guides, and the salaries of the teachers appointed by me, and approved by him, amounting in all to 109 teachers for the province, call for from one-fourth to one-third of the total estimated incomes of the several towns:

LOCAL SCHOOL BOARDS.

MUNICIPAL SCHOOL BOARDS.

Local school boards have been organized throughout the divisions. These are composed of five or seven members, including the president of the municipality.

The time is not yet ripe to look for results from these local school boards, since none of them has had more than a year's existence. A large number of them have only been organized recently, for the reason that the division superintendents wished their teachers first to become well acquainted with the people of their towns, and thus be able to make wise recommendations of candidates for the boards. Some division superintendents feel that the organization of local school boards is premature, and ought to be postponed until the people have a better conception of the American school. Others find the work of the board helpful and, although at present wholly advisory, steadily becoming an essential feature in local school adminis-

Division superintendents comment as follows on these school boards:

"One half of the board is appointed by myself, generally upon the recommenda-tion of the American teacher stationed in the town for which the board is appointed. The recommendations by the American teachers are made upon the basis of the man's ability, his interest in school matters, and his influence in the town. The board organizes by electing as president one of its own members, and as secretary generally some other member of the board, but sometimes one who is not a member.

"Their field of action, as outlined in section 12 of act No. 74, gives them but little real power in school affairs, and as the Filipino respects power alone, not much weight is given to the recommendations of the school board.

"The school board at the present time is of but little real benefit to us or to the schools; the principal benefit consists in keeping the members of the board, who are always influential men, acquainted with what we are doing and in this way bringing them into closer sympathy with us. In the actual bettering of present conditions, and making more effectual our schools, the school boards are of little or no benefit to us. This, of course, is not so true in Iloilo, where I come more directly in touch with the board.

"The school boards will become more effective as the people become better acquainted with American ideals, as they learn to think more as we think and to appreciate to a larger degree the real need and worth of a public school. When this time comes the recommendation of four or six influential citizens who have given special attention to the pueblo's schools will have real weight with the city council and will to a large degree influence the deliberations of that body when making provisions for the municipal schools. At the present time, when there is no public opinion on these matters and no general interest deep enough to lead to action, the recommendations of a school board can have but little force.

"I can not recommend that more power be given the local school boards, as I have no reason to believe that they would use it more wisely than the municipal councils. If the school board had power to fix definitely, without the municipal council having power to change it, the amount of money which should be spent for the schools of the pueblo, the amount so fixed would probably be in excess of what the town could justly devote to this purpose, for the interest of the school board would be bound up in school matters, and other municipal needs would not be duly considered. The boards should not have power in the appointing of or fixing the salaries of the native teachers. First, because they would make it a matter of patronage, simply. Second, because, being themselves unacquainted with our ideas and methods in school work, they would be unable to judge wisely a teacher's worth. Nor do I think it would be wise to have the school funds go through the boards' hands, as this would be multiplying official machinery without securing greater security. The boards' recommendations as to sites and buildings have, in the first place, but little weight and, in the second place, are of but little worth when made, because of their lack of knowledge of what constitutes a good sanitary school house and grounds. They are quite apt to recommend a lot that one of the members has for sale, regardless of its location.

"On the whole, the school board is a place for training some of the best natives to be active sympathizers with us and our helpers in the future in the enlargement of the work.

"At the present time they are not exactly in the way, but they are of very little use to us.

"The local advisory boards have been organized so recently and have had so little time for work that I can not offer anything as to their ultimate usefulness.

"In the provincial capitals I think one American appointed on such boards for the purpose of advising his fellow-members as to up-to-date schools will work out to good advantage.

"I would not recommend the giving of any additional power to these boards.

"We must get a greater number of people interested in the success of our work. Towns are under the finger of one man, the presidente. In most cases he is not favorably disposed toward us. At best he is dilatory. The people, rich and poor, seem willing to be dominated by him. One of the really bad conditions growing out of Spanish custom is the almost superstitious regard the people have for the presidente. Through the school board I see a means of breaking in on his absolutism. A number of respectable and active elements may in this way be induced to express opinions contrary to his. Then, too, the board will serve as a buffer between us and the municipality. At present it is hard to locate responsibility. The presidente says: "See the consejos." The consejos say: "See the presidente." Often during our visits it is impossible to get these parties together. As a result our work goes undone. The board will obviate this.

"Up to the present our greatest difficulty has been encountered in the way of securing school buildings and furniture. The boards can be of great assistance to us in this matter.

"The people attach great importance to the mere fact of possessing authority of some sort. It is almost the only means of securing their aid. True, these boards, as I understand them, will not possess much real authority from our point of view, but they look at it in an entirely different light.

"In general, I would say that I view these boards as a rather valuable auxiliary. I also consider the present as the proper time for their formation.

"The local school board of Tagbilaran, the only one yet organized in this province, consists of seven members, including the presidente of the pueblo. They visit the schools, inspect, make reports, and in every particular comply with the law. They encourage and compel attendance, thus relieving the town presidente of much work. They visit the barrio schools once in two months. They meet once each week in the office of the division superintendent. Thus far they have taken an interest and a pride in their duties to the advantage of the schools."

These boards are capable of assisting materially in the problem of education, and will work more effectively after a nicer adjustment of the powers and duties of local bodies, whereby the school boards may have the right to expend money for school purposes with the approval of the division superintendent.

PROVINCIAL BOARDS.

The establishment of provincial high schools, supported by provincial funds, has brought into prominence the composition of the provincial boards. While this board is in no sense a school board, yet its duties bring it closely into contact with the school work at many points. As at present constituted the provincial board is composed of the governor, treasurer, and supervisor. Of these, the provincial treasurer and the supervisor are generally Americans and the governor is generally a Filipino.

Whether it would be advisable to have the division superintendent or his deputy a member of this board has been considered by the division superintendents and a variety of opinions expressed. While the general superintendent does not consider that the advantages which can be obtained by such membership would be great enough to offset the disadvantages and extra work which would result, some of the superintendents write in favor of such provision, as is shown by the following

"I think that the school department should have a representative on the provincial board. The entire matter of buildings and furniture is in the hands of the provincial supervisor. Under the present law his cooperation is necessary in order to cut a single stick of timber in the province for any purpose. You can easily appreciate the position in which we find ourselves placed when the question of material for construction comes up. First, it is necessary to establish the fact of necessity in the minds of the municipal councils; they, of course, are disposed to find some way out They plead, first, the fact that an order from the provincial treasurer is necessary before the expenditure can be ordered. If this objection is successfully removed, they fall back upon the impossibility of securing materials without an order from the provincial supervisor. They will recognize the authority of the school department within the school department. They will recognize the authority of the provincial board in provincial matters. They do not seem to be able to grasp the idea of several departments of the government working as a unit. I believe that a representative of the school department upon the provincial board would assist in clearing up this difficulty. At present, when these matters come up, all I can do is to advise as to the possible attitude of the provincial board. This is not sufficient. The Filipino, by reason of his peculiar training, has fallen into the habit of respecting nothing but positive authority. Argument is, as a general thing, ineffective. When it is possible to outline his duty clearly and authoritatively, he complies very gracefully. He seems to expect it. If the division or deputy division superintendents could speak to the municipalities as a member of the provincial board, I feel that his statements would carry proper force. Another benefit that would result from the indicated change is the effect it would have upon the provincial board as now constituted. Ilocos Sur and La Union, and I assume that the same conditions exist generally, the provincial board is composed of two Americans and one native. The Americans are the active members of the board. It is reasonable to assume that the native will be controlled by one American. If he happens to be controlled by the wrong American, the school department receives slight consideration. Another reason for the proposed change is that at present the school department in the provinces is not properly recognized as a provincial affair. Boards are disposed to leave as much of the support of schools to the insular government as they possibly can. I believe that with a schoolman upon the provincial board it would be possible to bring us closer together. With reference to the provinces included in my division, I find no condition which would deprive the above arguments of force.

"The making of division superintendents or deputies members of the provincial boards'

"Would encourage a larger degree of sympathy and harmony between the members of the provincial board and the division superintendent:

"Would enable the division superintendent to present before the provincial board the needs of the educational department in a way that they would be able to appreciate them, as they can not be made to appreciate them under present conditions;

"Would give the division superintendent equal advantage in presenting the claims of the educational department and enable him to stand clothed with equal authority instead of being merely a petitioner.

"Provincial boards are made up of the governor, who is usually a Filipino, the treasurer, and the supervisor, who are Americans. These men, while honest and of large practical experience, are not as a rule college or university trained men. are not broad, liberal-minded men who can always see clearly relative needs.

"Division superintendents are, I suppose, without exception college or university trained men, and, although many of them are lacking in practical experience in governmental affairs, are men of wide general experience.

"Men of different experiences working together with equal authority should give better balance to affairs than either alone.

"It would give the position of the division superintendent of schools additional influence with the people, and especially with the presidents.

"It would make it possible for division superintendents to exercise a larger influence in provincial affairs.

"Those who have immediate charge of provincial affairs should have the keenest interest in education, and be given every opportunity to know the needs and to balance them with the needs of other departments. The educational department is a vital element in the government, and merits support in proportion to its worth to It is not a thing separate, to be supported by such means as are left over after other departments are thoroughly provided, but as the foundation of free government literally demands its strongest support.

"There is no work of the provincial board with which the division superintendent ought not to be acquainted. A thorough acquaintance with much of the work of the provincial board is absolutely necessary. Being a member of the board would facilitate much of the work of the division superintendents. Information which he now gets with difficulty would come to him naturally through his work with the

"There seems to be one disadvantage. It seems to involve additional work for division superintendents. In reality, however, this is probably not a disadvantage. The additional work involved would be more than compensated for by the ease with which division superintendents would be able to accomplish their other work.

"I advise making the division superintendent a member of the provincial board, with the privilege of being represented by one of his deputies. In my opinion great advantage would result from this, and I can see no real disadvantages.

"From my own experience in the work so far I am of the opinion that the advantages of such a move would far outweigh any disadvantages that might arise. As time goes on the schools must and will become more closely identified with the affairs of the province, its development, etc. Why, then, should not the educational work of a province have representation on this board? The provincial board of this province has at times called in both Mr. Beattie and myself for consultation regarding some feature of school work. It is not improbable to suppose that in some provinces one or more members of this board may not be in full sympathy with the work schools are doing, and in such a case a representative of the schools would be in a position to guard educational interests.

"I know of a province where one member, while not openly antagonistic, is at least very lukewarm in attitude to the work we are engaged in. One other argument in favor of this plan appeals to me. We all know that native officials and others have never regarded or have never given to schools the importance they deserve. The native teachers in the pueblos are the last ones to be paid. The schoolhouses are the last buildings in a community to be properly repaired and furnished. It seems to me if a representative of the schools in the province has a place and a voice in the deliberations of this board it can not but be beneficial and will exalt the schools in the eyes of the natives.

"Advantages.—1. The department would have a voice and vote in regulation of the provinces. 2. The superintendent would acquire more provincial prestige.

"Disadvantages.—The duties of division superintendents and their deputies, if thoroughly carried out, call for their undivided attention. If conscientious members of provincial boards, they must be en rapport with and attend to the details of all provincial matters. If they are really capable superintendents they might undertake this without detriment (and possibly with advantage) to their proper functions.

"Generally.—When provincial boards are efficient the addition of another member is unnecessary. When provincial boards are inefficient his membership would hamper his efficient exercise of his proper duties and do very little to promote provincial interests, unless he were an uncommonly strong and tactful man.'

"It is certain that this move would materially strengthen the prestige and influence of the schools without weakening or harming the provincial board. No one has a better opportunity to know the condition of affairs in the province than the division or deputy superintendent. No one gets closer to the people than the teachers and through them the superintendent; besides, his own experience keeps him in touch with all parts of the province. Then the provincial board having charge of the secondary education has a large influence on school matters, and this influence certainly would be more wisely directed if the department of education were given representation on the board.

"Advantages.—1. Division superintendents would have greater authority than at present in enforcing the school law. This is particularly the case with respect to the building and repair of schoolhouses and in having the native teachers paid promptly their salaries. 2. The division superintendents and deputies, because of their inspection of the schools in the various pueblos, are generally well acquainted with the presidentes and the attitude of the municipal officials. By virtue of this the provincial board could be reenforced by first-hand information in regulating the affairs of each town.

"Disadvantages.—1. Such an arrangement will make necessary more work for the division superintendents and deputies. At present the duties of these officers, if well performed, require continual vigilance and attention. 2. Confusion might arise because of associating insular and provincial officials. 3. Sacrifice of time. Occasionally the provincial boards sit several days at a time. If the division superintendents or deputies should attend these meetings there would be a loss that could be ill afforded.

"The plan I have pursued is as follows: During the month of January, with assistance of my deputies, I appointed every native teacher in the provinces of Tarlac and Pangasinan, and an exact record of this was furnished in copy to each of the provincial treasurers. Whenever a native teacher resigns or a new one is appointed, I at once notify the provincial treasurer. When the monthly expenses of each pueblo are handed in to the provincial treasurer for his approval he has the record which I have furnished him for comparison. Captain Hardeman and Mr. Jones have stood squarely by me in this arrangement. Furthermore, I have been able to spur the presidentes on in the matter of building and repairing schoolhouses. The law expressly states that the presidente and city council shall establish and maintain public primary schools, subject to the approval and supervision of the division superintendent. When a municipality has money available, and the presidente, through indolence or stubbornness, or both, fails to do his duty, I have not hesitated to advise him that unless he complies with the law I shall prefer charges against him to the provincial board. This has succeeded in many cases, and I feel no reluctance in resorting to such measures, because it is generally pure indolence and not animosity which prevents municipal officials from taking active and immediate steps in the performance of their duties.

"I am decidedly of the opinion that the educational department should be represented in the provincial governments. There can be no more important work in these islands for years to come than that connected with the education and mental advancement of their inhabitants; and by far the greater part of that work is to be done in the provinces. The furtherance of this work would be greatly simplified were the men who are directly interested in it, and who are daily brought into contact with the conditions that surround it and the needs that confront it, given a direct and authoritative voice in the direction of provincial affairs. At present we can only suggest and recommend certain measures and then leave them in the hands of others, whose main interests are necessarily different, to be adopted or rejected, as they may see fit. Placed in a position where some authority on other than school subjects would be his, a superintendent could then press the needs and claims of his work with assurance of a direct hearing and with a voice in the ultimate disposition made of his suggestions.

"Undoubtedly one of the greatest needs of the educational department in the provincial towns is for the construction and maintenance of good and suitable school-houses. At present a division or a deputy division superintendent can wield no greater influence than that of his own personality to see that the various presidentes do their duty in this respect by the department and by the children of their respective pueblos. It is a mistake to assume that because a town makes application for a teacher and displays a vast deal of enthusiasm over the cause of education they are going to make any solid and material improvement in the condition of things that prevailed previously. In order to get improvements there must be the continued supervision of some one with a voice in the disposition of the provincial or municipal affairs in which they (the presidentes) are interested. A good deal has been done in this province in the way of material improvements for the schools, and it is due in a large measure to the fact that the treasurer, and through him the governor, have been interested in the question.

"The disadvantages to such a plan are, I think, twofold. First, there is to be considered the youth and inexperience of a large number of the men filling positions as deputies; though if it has not hurt their work up to the present it may not, perhaps, be reckoned as a great danger. Second, it is probable that their whole time could not be given exclusively to the consideration of school problems, the many other questions coming before a provincial board militating against this. In my opinion, however, the obvious advantages to be gained would more than offset this admitted drawback to the scheme.

"The chief criticism of the school board as at present organized is its lack of power. The recommendatory power might be of considerable use under certain circumstances, but councils and presidentes cling to whatever power they have and are not going to share it with others unless obliged to do so. In a former paper the writer urged the necessity of giving some power either to the division superintendent or to the school board to order small repairs, etc., providing proper town authorities did not take action within sixty days after notice of need given. But as councils often elect their share of the school board from among themselves, with the ex officio member, the presidente, in such cases, the council controls the board. "But even otherwise, so strong is the custom handed down from the Spanish government, and so reluctant is any individual member of the council or of the school board to oppose the presidente openly that the latter reigns supreme, more or less as he did when he was gobernadorcillo. The presidente is certainly the bellwether of the flock. His strength depends largely, of course, on his strength of character. If he is a strong man he will lead the town. On the other hand, several examples have come to my notice where the presidente was a weak or passive man. Then leadership fell on one of the other municipal officers, e. g., the secretary or some member of the council who was independent enough to take the initiative. Again, outside officials, such as the governor, also according to Spanish custom in part, have too much influence with the presidentes and councilmen. board has undoubtedly been of some service, even with its recommendatory power in connection with the council. But its great service has been its forming a connecting link between the administration and the people. It has been a support to the teachers more than they realize, and has really done some little service toward stirring up interest in school affairs in the community, thereby increasing the attendance. The school board is usually composed of some of the best men in the community. The Filipinos have great respect for their wise men. Quite a number of ex-teachers have been elected presidente; many others are on the council. It is unfortunate that the division superintendent is unable to correspond with the boards to any great The connection would be increased if I had a Filipino-Spanish clerk who extent.

could undertake this. He need not know any English.

"The school board is a good step in the direction of creating civic interest in public affairs. Spontaneous individual initiative could scarcely be expected where all have depended on a so-called paternal government from time immemorial. The school board is a useful part of the larger scheme of the civil government for the educating of the native up to the point of being able to profit by local self-government,"

SUPERIOR ADVISORY BOARD.

The superior advisory board is composed of the general superintendent of public instruction and four members appointed by the Commission, and acts as an advisory body to aid the general superintendent. The present board consists of Fred W. Atkinson, general superintendent, ex officio president of the board; Tomas G. del Rosario, of Manila; Pedro Serrano Laktaw, of Manila; Demetrio Larena, of Dumaguete, Oriental Negros, and Mena Crisologo y Pecson.

The first meeting of the board was held on November 25, 26, 27, and 30, 1901, all the members being present except Sr. Larena, and was very helpful in obtaining the Filipino ideas on the general subject and the points of special interest. Many important recommendations were made, including the following:

That normal schools be established in Vigan, Iloilo, Nueva Caceres, Cebu, and Zamboanga, in addition to Manila.

That the location of the agricultural school for Negros be selected by Governor Larena, of Oriental Negros, and Division Superintendent Beattie, of Negros.

That additional agricultural schools be established in Pampanga Province, Luzon, and at San Ramon, in Mindanao.

That a circular be sent to all teachers instructing them to compel the boys attending school to dress in the American way (the general superintendent dissenting, as not authorized by law or American custom).

That the transportation of the 200 American teachers appointed in the United States be secured at once, and by private liners if necessary; also, that sufficient teachers be appointed to supply the demands of the various pueblos, even though in excess of 1,000.

That native teachers be paid temporarily by the insular government, then by the municipalities when their funds are in a better condition, thereby also equalizing the salaries of native teachers.

That attendance at school should be made compulsory for all children between 8 and 12 years, except children in barrios far removed from regular schools, and providing graduated fines for parents or guardians who do not send children to school, imprisonment to be imposed if unable to pay fine.

imprisonment to be imposed if unable to pay fine.

That a committee should be appointed by the Philippine Commission to secure a uniformity in the spelling of geographical names, with special reference to preserving the distinctive and characteristic native names.

That, if possible, there be established a complete free public-school system, free from primary schools to university, with industrial and commercial courses in secondary schools in the provinces and with normal schools as previously recommended.

That agricultural schools be established in each province where sufficient land can be secured by donation to furnish an adequate working farm. This because agriculture is the principal source of wealth of these islands.

That private schools shall be under the inspection and supervision of the general superintendent of public instruction and the division superintendents.

That a law be passed making compulsory the teaching of English in all private schools to an extent to be determined by the general superintendent of public instruction.

That provision be made for assisting municipalities to complete school buildings where the municipality is unable to furnish funds for the entire building

That provision be made for authorizing the members of the superior advisory board to inspect schools, for the necessary traveling expenses connected therewith, and dividing the archipelago into four districts, one for each member of the superior advisory board.

That the United States Philippine Commission be requested to appropriate $500,000 for the establishment of a university in the city of Manila, at first with departments of law and engineering, the latter to include civil, mechanical, electrical, mining, marine, and architectural, with other departments of medicine, etc., to be added as soon as practicable.

That a school of fine arts be established in Manila.

That the ownership of the University of Santo Tomas be determined at the earliest opportunity, and if decided to belong to the government that this property be added to the university hereinbefore mentioned.

That an amendment of the law be asked for providing that half of the lumber tax shall remain in the provincial treasuries, to be available for the construction of school buildings.

That in the supervision of private schools especial emphasis shall be placed on hygienic conditions, competency of teachers, instruction in English, etc.

At the final session Hon. Bernard Moses, secretary of public instruction, was present by invitation and addressed the board briefly on the various subjects mentioned.

On account of many delays and uncertainties, another meeting of the superior advisory board was not held until September 3, 1902. The record of the second meeting follows:

SUPERIOR ADVISORY BOARD, BUREAU OF PUBLIC INSTRUCTION.

SECOND REGULAR MEETING.

Manila, P. I., September 3, 1902.

Pursuant to the annexed notice, the second meeting of the superior advisory board was held in the office of the general superintendent of public instruction, in the ayuntamiento, on the above date.

The meeting was called to order at 10 a. m. by Dr. Fred W. Atkinson, president of

Present: Sr. Tomas G. del Rosario, of Manila; Sr. Pedro Serrano Laktaw, of Manila, members; also Frank H. Bowen, secretary, and Joaquin Aurteneche, interpreter.

Absent: Sr. Mena Crisologo, of Vigan, Ilocos Sur, who telegraphed that on account of cholera, etc., he did not consider it advisable to leave his province before October;

Sr. Demetrio Larena, of Negros, from whom no message was received.

After the opening remarks, it was agreed that the next regular meeting of this board shall be held on the first Wednesday in October, and every second month thereafter on the first Wednesday of the month, a meeting of the local members to be held on the first Wednesday of the intermediate months.

Agreed that the recommendation of the first regular meeting as to compulsory attendance be repeated to the secretary of public instruction.

The president reported the establishment of provincial high schools in fifteen provinces, including normal courses in Vigan, Iloilo, Nueva Caceres, Cebu, Cagayan (Mindanao), also in San Fernando, Pampanga, and mentioned other high schools in process of formation. Also reported the correspondence in regard to site of agricultural school in Negros, and stated that he had selected La Granja as the site and had forwarded the selection to the secretary of public instruction for the action of the Commission; that this letter had been returned to him with instructions to refer the matter to this board for selection, according to act 74.

Moved, by Sr. del Rosario, that the president of the board is hereby expressly delegated by the board to recommend to the Commission for final determination a proper site for the school of agriculture in the island of Negros, with instructions to urge the immediate securing of a site and the establishment of the school.

Agreed that the recommendation of the first meeting regarding inspection of private schools be repeated; recommendation to include inspection of sanitary conditions.

Recommended, that special attention be called to the necessity and expediency of encouraging construction of suitable and durable school buildings of brick, stone, and wood, with good floors and well roofed; that the insular government be asked to aid in this work either by direct appropriation or by the loan of money to municipalities for such construction.

Agreed, that each municipality should have at least one American teacher, and that vacancies should be kept filled.

Remarks by the members voiced the sentiment that by the educational work the Government has its best means of showing its purpose toward the people of these islands. Whatever else is slighted, the work of the schools should be kept up. By education the country is to make its great gains. Teachers should be brought from America to supply the demand at present.

The president stated the purpose of the bureau in educating the native teachers in the normal schools; also in placing one or more native teachers in each provincial high school, to ultimately put the Filipino teachers in more and more responsible and higher positions.

Discussion of means for bettering condition of American teachers in isolated towns occupied considerable time. The members stated that the remoter towns were very sensitive and feel slighted if American teachers are not furnished them.

Discussion of the deaths among American teachers and question of general health

The members urged the teaching of etiquette, the compelling of cleanliness, and the wearing of decent, whole, and clean clothes, favoring the prescribing of a uniform It was agreed that circulars should be sent out calling attention to cleanliness of dress and person.

Sefior del Rosario called attention to some instances of transfers of Filipino teachers to places where the increased expenses could not be borne on the small salaries.

Especial attention was called by the members to the fact that men and women teachers are getting smaller salaries than policemen, houseboys, cocheros, cooks, and even laborers; that they can not live and dress decently on account of increased cost of living; that they get the education in public schools and normal schools and then take the civil-service examination and leave the educational work. In this way the school work loses the best teachers. Salaries of from 12 to 20 pesos a month are absurd. Higher salaries will bring out a much better class of men as teachers and will have much influence in the provinces.

Señor del Rosario stated that native teachers still take too much interest in religious matters, teaching religion in schools and compelling attendance of pupils at church. This is confined to the native teachers. President stated that attention would be called to this in circulars.

Agreed, that the recommendation of the first regular meeting urging the establishment of an insular university be repeated. This was vigorously urged. Some discussion followed as to the proposed Methodist university.

Adjourned at 12 o'clock noon, subject to call for next regular meeting.

SCHOOL LEGISLATION.

During the past year three laws directly relating to the work of this bureau have been passed. The first one (act 232) was enacted on September 20, 1901, adding to section 9 of act No. 74 the following paragraph, providing for the appointment of deputy division superintendents and making the necessary incidental amendments in other parts of act 74:

"The deputy division superintendent shall be a teacher actually engaged in instruction. He shall act for the division superintendent in the absence of this officer, and he shall exercise all the functions of the division superintendent, subject to the confirmation of the division superintendent: Provided, however, That he shall not have power to appoint school-teachers or to fix their salaries. The number of deputy division superintendents and the territory within which they shall act shall be determined by the secretary of public instruction, but the number shall not exceed in any division the number of provinces in that division."

"(n) To provide, if deemed expedient by the provincial board, by construction or purchase, or renting, such school building or buildings in the province as in the opinion of the board may be necessary, to be used for the free secondary instruction of pupils resident in the province, such secondary instruction being understood to include, in addition to academic and commercial subjects, manual training, instruction in agriculture, and normal school instruction, and to provide for the payment of all expenses of maintaining such public school or schools of secondary instruction as may be established in the province, and the schools in their establishment and conduct shall be subject to the general supervision of the division superintendents and the general superintendent of public instruction in accordance with the provisions of act No. 74: Provided, That temporarily and until such time as the Commission shall decide that the condition of the finances of the province will justify for the future the payment of the salaries of teachers and the expense of supplies and equipment for secondary schools from the provincial treasury, such salaries and expenses may be borne by the the insular government: Provided further, That if for any reason a province is not prepared to establish a secondary or high school, the provincial board of such province may provide from provincial funds for the payment of the tuition in a high school in any other province or in the city of Manila of such pupils as may wish to enter such high school and are declared by the proper examining authorities of the school which they wish to enter to be fitted to receive secondary instruction; and the principal of the high school in question shall, provided the provincial board of the province in which the school is located, or the municipal board of the city of Manila, as the case may be, shall approve of the admission of pupils from other provinces, make provision for their accommodation, and when the school to which such pupils are admitted is a provincial school, the provincial board may authorize and direct the provincial treasurer to collect from the province, sending them a reasonable tuition fee for each pupil so admitted. When the school is in the city of Manila, the municipal board of Manila may make provision for the collection of such fee.

The plans for school buildings subject to the approval of the insular architect and the division superintendent or general superintendent of public instruction, as

"In preparing plans and specifications for the construction and repair of buildings for secondary schools to be undertaken by the provinces as hereinafter provided, the provincial supervisor shall consult with the insular architect and with the superintendent of the school division in which the province is located, and such plans and specifications shall be subject to the approval of the latter, or of the general superintendent of public instruction, in accordance with the provisions of act No. 74, before the work may be undertaken."

Under the authority of section (n) the five tributary normal schools which have been planned and partially established under insular support at Vigan, Iloilo, Nueva Caceres, Cebu, and Cagayan were incorporated as parts of the provincial high schools, under provincial support except for the salaries of American teachers and the necessary text-books and supplies, which were furnished by the bureau of public

The third important amendment (act 373), passed March 7, 1902, provided that "all secondary instruction in the schools established by the several provinces shall at least be free to the pupils resident in the province in which the schools are established." Act 74 was further amended by the substitution of a new section, 15, as follows:

"SEC. 15. Authority is hereby given to the general superintendent of public instruction to obtain from the United States one thousand trained teachers at monthly salaries of not less then seventy-five dollars ($75.00) and not more than one hundred and twenty-five dollars ($125.00), and such other additional trained teachers as may be necessary for the provincial schools of secondary instruction, at monthly salaries of not more than one hundred and fifty dollars ($150.00), the exact salary of each teacher to be fixed by the general superintendent of public instruction in accordance with the efficiency of the teacher in question and the importance of the position held. Any teacher residing in the United States who is appointed to service in the bureau of public instruction shall pay his traveling expenses from the place of his residence in the United States to the point of embarkation for Manila, but his traveling expenses from the said point of embarkation for Manila shall be borne by the chief executive of the islands: Provided, That at the expiration of six months of satisfactory service in the Philippines his traveling expenses from the place of his residence in the United States to the point of embarkation for Manila shall be refunded to him."

Owing to the falling off in revenues and the large expenses of the many important lines of work necessary in these islands, and the extra expenditure necessitated in combating the epidemic of cholera, it was deemed advisable by the Commission that the appointment of American teachers to increase the force or to fill vacancies should be suspended until conditions improved. As a consequence, the organization of the provincial schools, together with the falling off of teachers from sickness, death, resignation, etc., decreased the number of teachers actually in the elementary work and threw larger duties upon many, and the benefits of the new provisions for increased teaching force were lost for the present in so far as the elementary work

Another act, passed August 15, 1902, in amendment of the municipal code, promises to be helpful in training deserving Filipinos as teachers, if the municipalities take advantage of its provisions. The municipal council is empowered-

"To provide, when no American public-school teacher is assigned to the municipality or when no public school of secondary instruction is maintained therein, for the expenditure from the school funds established in accordance with paragraph (b) of section forty-three of this act, or from any other municipal funds not otherwise appropriated, of not more than forty pesos per month during the school year, to be used in equal parts toward the support of two residents of the municipality while receiving training for positions as public-school teachers in the municipality at any public secondary school established under the department of public instruction. The persons thus supported shall be one young man and one young woman, whose respective ages shall not be less than fifteen nor more than twenty-five years, and whose parents are not able to pay their expenses while attending schools of secondary instruction. They shall be appointed by the president, by and with the consent of the majority of the members of the council, subject to confirmation, after one month's attendance, by the principal of the school in which they are appointed to receive instruction."

NIGHT SCHOOLS.

Act No. 430, enacted July 14, 1902, made provision for the paying of $1.50 per night for teaching of night school, but the following proviso was added: "No night school shall be maintained either in the city of Manila or elsewhere at the public expense in which the average attendance is not at least twenty-five pupils over the age of fourteen years." This has had a serious effect upon the whole night-school work, as will be more fully discussed under the heading "Night schools."

CLERKS FOR DIVISION SUPERINTENDENTS.

The same act contained the following provision:

"The detail or assignment of any teacher to perform clerical duties in any branch or division of the bureau of public instruction is hereby prohibited."

In September, 1901, a request had been made that division superintendents be furnished with a competent clerk, at a salary of $1,200. This authority was not granted, but the law providing for deputy division superintendents was soon thereafter enacted. During the great activity of the organizing work of the past year, it became indispensable to provide clerical assistance for division superintendents, and accordingly a teacher was detailed to assist each division superintendent with his office work. In many cases teachers were secured who had had successful office experience, were stenographers, and with a good knowledge of Spanish. Since the middle of July the clerical assistance has been denied the division superintendents, and they have been forced to give a large part of their time to mere clerical duties.

SUPERVISION OF PRIVATE SCHOOLS.

Since the coming of the Americans private schools have sprung up like mushrooms. Within ten months, since June, 1901, 29 new ones have been opened in Manila alone. There are three classes: Parochial schools; branches of the Liceo de Manila, designated as feeders to that institution, and primary and secondary schools established by private parties on their own account. All of these schools are patterned after the old order of things and are teaching either Spanish or the vernacular.

The popular demand for English has compelled many of them to make a show of teaching a little of it, but it is generally being attempted without English teachers worthy of the name. The curriculum of these schools, especially those of a primary grade, should conform to the course in the public schools, but with full latitude in matters of religious instruction; and the inspection of them should be made to the extent of seeing that they are schools in fact and not in name only.

I have therefore recommended that section 25 of act 74 be amended by adding thereto the following:

The object should be to raise the standard of these schools and get them in line and harmony with the general educational movement. If this is done, these schools are to be welcomed and encouraged; if not so regulated, they are a positive menace to educational advancement.

COMPULSORY SCHOOL ATTENDANCE.

The supervision of private schools will insure a general standard of excellence in all of the schools of the islands, and incidentally will make it possible to have a compulsory school law of real worth.

One division superintendent has recently summed up the situation in his field as

"The amendment to the school law most urgent at present is a mandatory clause, even if limited, whereby the attendance can be increased in each school sufficiently to justify the expense entailed. Under the present law, money, time, and energy are being sacrificed. I do not advocate an unqualified compulsory law. The desired ends can be reached by a law so qualified as to be unobjectionable to any fair-minded Filipino. Of course the rabid church element must be eliminated from this category, as it is in all progressive countries. I would recommend one of the following:

"(a) That all parents or guardians of children between the ages of 6 and 14 years be obliged to send their children to the free public schools for at least five months of each school year.

"(b) That all parents or guardians of children between the ages of 6 and 14 years be obliged to send said children to the free public school during at least one session (morning or afternoon) during the entire school year.

"(e) That all parents or guardians having children between the ages of 8 and 14 be obliged to send said children to the free public school for at least six months during the school year.

"The first proposition would be similar to the school laws of Cuba, which, judging from reports, are very satisfactory. The second proposition would permit the children to spend either the morning or afternoon in the public school and the second session in the church school. This would mitigate the objectionable freature of the present law, as they see it. The third proposition would eliminate all children below the age of 8 years, thus allowing them to attend the church school and master the catechism, which they contend to be essential. At the same time it would relieve the overcrowded condition of the public schools, which would prevail under such a law, filling the schools with children sufficiently advanced in years to realize the value of their time and make great progress. Of the three above propositions I prefer the third."

A compulsory school law is a necessary thing for any country where the purpose is to secure general education. Twenty-nine States and two Territories in the United States have passed compulsory school laws, defining the ages to which the law shall apply, the annual term of school attendance, and the penalty imposed upon parents and guardians for violations of the law.

To attempt general education here without such a law would presuppose a greater interest in education than exists in the most cultured nations.

It is respectfully recommended that the Commission empower the presidents of the pueblos to compel attendance by proclamation on the advice of the division superintendents (who would not give such advice unless there were sufficient school accommodations). This law should require attendance at some authorized school of all children between 6 and 12 years of age. It should by no means limit the attendance to the public school. It should make special provision for servants within this age, compelling their attendance but a portion of the regular time. Only where the municipal authorities are in sympathy with such a law can it be successfully enforced. The division superintendents have recommended it, stating that many presidents were willing to pass such a regulation were they so empowered.

the question whether municipal councils have the right to make an ordinance compelling attendance of children at school, says:

From 8 until confirmation; in towns from 7 until confirmation.

Special dispensation after 7 years' attendance and 1 year's prolongation for ignorance.

Compulsion not enforced.

"Our opinion is that the municipalities of the Philippines have not the power to compel attendance under a power to 'establish and maintain primary schools,' and that it is not such exercise of police power as can be inferentially granted by a general authority, but must be expressly delegated by or necessarily implied from a specific act. Finally, the legislature not having itself exercised the power, it can not be deemed to have delegated it, and the action of the municipality would be ultra vires, because contrary to public policy."

The question was raised by the action of several municipalities which had taken upon themselves the making of provisions to compel attendance. The lack of attendance in the majority of cases does not arise from hostility to the public schools, but from the fact that the labor of the children is desired by parents and guardians in household work or in the fields to such an extent as to almost empty school houses in some sections of the country during the rice harvest and similar seasons.

The opinion above quoted simplifies the problem. The Philippine Commission has but to pass an act permitting the municipalities to pass such an ordinance if they This will leave the matter in the hands of the local authorities, who will see to it that no hardship is thereby imposed.

I therefore repeat the recommendation which has recently been reaffirmed by the superior advisory board, that such provision be made for the passage of compulsory attendance ordinances by the municipalities, with authority for the municipality to fix the fines for violation thereof, within fixed limits.

Some complaints of irregularities in payment of salaries of native teachers have been received, and these cases have led division superintendents in some cases to recommend provision for collection and payment of school funds through provincial treasurers, instead of municipalities. Such a departure from existing provisions is not to be hastily recommended, but the following quotation will show the opinion that is held by a few supervisors:

"To sustain the work at the present standard and supply teachers for the secondary school there should be 25 American teachers in this division. This leaves 11 pueblos without teachers."

PAYMENT OF SALARIES OF NATIVE TRACHERS.

Many letters on this subject have been received, of which the following is a good example:

"The municipal code should be amended in such a manner as to leave no question that the municipality is to pay the native teacher.

"Not once but several times I have found municipalities who did not feel that is was expected of them. They argued that since a government employee this was expected of them. appointed the teacher and fixed his salary, the government expected to pay that salary. Others when instructed to pay the salary have assumed the right to fix it and also to appoint the teacher. The municipal code should be so amended as to make these points perfectly clear. I believe it advisable to so amend the school law that it may be permissible to change salaries of native teachers during the school year, for the following reasons:

"First. Through local stringency in public funds it may be impossible to pay a teacher the salary he is worth. During the year local conditions may change for the better, and it may be possible for the underpaid teacher to share this increased prosperity.

"Or (second), the reverse might be the case. Larger prosperity might make it possible for the teacher to receive a salary that would not be justified under straitened circumstances. During the course of the year crops may fail, municipal resources fall off, and make it impossible for the town to meet expenses on its former scale of expenditures. But the municipal code does not permit a pueblo to get into debt. This expenditure can not be changed. It can not be met and the town can not get into debt. How could such conditions be reconciled? But the most important reason for making a change of salaries possible is the incentive it will give the native teacher to strive for better work, to work for advancement, for he will know that by his work he will be gauged and his salary fixed. If a teacher feels that after the Christmas holidays he may secure a raise in salary through progress in his work, it will serve to keep him up to his best efforts."

SCHOOL OF FINE ARTS, MUSIC, AND PAINTING.

It is recommended that there be substituted for the art course now offered by the normal school a school of fine arts to furnish instruction in music, drawing, painting, etc., to students from all parts of the archipelago. Such a school is very much desired by the Filipino people and would be in the line of strongest intellectual interest and capacity.

SPECIAL SCHOOLS.

Attention is again called to the need of reform schools and schools for the deaf, dumb, and blind.

SUMMARY.

To sum up in a word: Popular education, on which the whole structure must naturally rest ultimately, has been strengthened and broadened. Steps have also been taken at the same time in the direction of higher education, especially in the preparation of Filipinos to teach their own people. The instruction of English is the cardinal point of the present system of education.

Respectfully submitted.

FRED W. ATKINSON, General Superintendent of Public Instruction for the Philippine Islands.

APPENDIX B.

REPORT OF THE CHIEF OF THE BUREAU OF ARCHITECTURE AND CONSTRUCTION OF PUBLIC BUILDINGS FOR THE PERIOD FROM OCTOBER 18, 1901, TO SEPTEMBER 1, 1902.

Manila, P. I., September 1, 1902.

Hon. BERNARD Moses,

Secretary of Public Instruction.

Sir: In compliance with instructions conveyed in your letter dated September 4, 1902, I have the honor to submit the following report of the work of this bureau covering the period from October 18, 1901, to September 1, 1902:

ORGANIZATION OF BUREAU.

Act No. 268, passed October 18, 1901, created under the department of public instruction a "bureau of architecture and construction of public buildings, which shall have charge of the construction and repair of public buildings belonging to the insular government, and such other buildings or proposed buildings as may be assigned

A large, light room at the rear of the assembly hall in the ayuntamiento building was assigned for the use of the bureau, and under the authority of this act two Filipino draftamen were promptly appointed and assigned to duty in connection with the preparation of plans for the new public printing office building. It was very early demonstrated that these men were without the experience and training required for this work, and inasmuch as the Philippine civil-service board were unable to furnish men of more advanced technical knowledge, requisition was made November 29 on the board for four American draftsmen, to be selected from the eligible list of the United States Civil Service Commission at Washington, D. C.

On November 18, 1901, the services of a stenographer were secured, duly appointed to the Philippine service from the lists of the United States Civil Service Commission.

On December 9 the services of an American with experience in architectural office practice, but whose recent occupation had been of a general business character, were secured.

On January 16, 1902, the services of an electrical engineer were secured by transfer from a clerkship in another bureau.

Additional Filipino draftsmen were appointed, one in January and one in June, and an American draftsman, whose services were secured from March 7 to July 4 only, the appointment being of a distinctly temporary character.

On March 27 it was found necessary to send one draftsman to Baguio, province of Benguet, to superintend the construction of the new civil sanitarium and cottages at that place, and who is still engaged on that work, so that up to July 4, with the exception of the time between March 7 and 27 and June 9 and July 4, the bureau was able to secure but one technical assistant. The work of the bureau therefore up to June 10, 1902, the date of the arrival of the first of the four American draftsmen sent by the United States Civil Service Commission, has been necessarily limited, and it may be said that the effective organization of the bureau did not take place until the arrival of the other men asked for, on July 4, 1902.

On May 28, by an executive order, the building No. 158 Calle Anloague was

On May 28, by an executive order, the building No. 158 Calle Anloague was turned over to the bureau to be used as a storeroom for building supplies and material, a storekeeper being appointed on that date to take charge of same. This building, 50 by 175 feet and one story in height, is now used for the above purpose, and is shortly to be enlarged by the addition of a second story, which, when completed, will be used as the main office of the bureau.

Act No. 268 was amended November 7, 1901, February 4, 1902, and March 3, 1902, with respect to its personnel only. The first amendment gave the needed authority to employ American draftsmen, the second provided for the employment of skilled and unskilled laborers, and the third reclassifies the American draftsmen, it having been found impossible to procure them at salaries authorized under the previous act.

At this date the personnel of the bureau is as follows: The chief of bureau; 1 superintendent of construction, class 6; 1 chief clerk, class 7; 1 draftsman, class 7; 3 draftsmen, class 8; 1 engineer, class 8; 1 assistant chief clerk, class 8; 2 stenographers, class 9; 1 storekeeper, class 9; 2 draftsmen, class G; 2 draftsmen, class H; 1 janitor at an annual compensation of $210, and 1 messenger at an annual compensation of $150.

There are also in the service of the bureau four American foremen and an average of 150 laborers, skilled and unskilled.

Of the laborers mentioned probably 97 per cent of the carpenters are Chinamen, the native population as yet furnishing very few efficient skilled workmen. All of the ordinary laborers, however, are of the native class. The subject of labor is discussed under a later heading.

PUBLIC PRINTING OFFICE BUILDING.

While the larger proportion of the work hitherto undertaken by the bureau has been in the nature of repairs and renovations of existing structures owned by the insular government, the extensive nature of the alterations and additions to the Philippine public printing office practically remove it from this category and admit of it being described as a new building.

The chief of bureau arrived in Manila October 10, 1901, and promptly prepared preliminary studies for the building, which were duly accepted by the Commission on October 29, 1901. The sum of $50,000 was appropriated for the construction of the building, and on November 2, 1901, the contract for the foundations for the

As some of the printers had already arrived in Manila and the printing outfit was daily expected, it was deemed inadvisable to delay constructional work until plans and specifications could be completed on which a contract for the whole building could be let in the usual form. A survey of the premises, however, showed that, in any event, new lines of interior posts and foundations for same were necessary, and the order for this part of this work was given on the date above mentioned.

The printing office building, before being remodeled, was a one-story structure 184 feet long and 135 feet deep, with an interior court or patic 65 by 105 feet, and was originally occupied by the Spanish Escuela de Artes y Oficios. A small boiler house, 17 by 40 feet, occupied the center of the court. The building is situated on a square of ground surrounded on all sides by streets, and, setting well back from the Calzada de Vidal, forms an ideal location.

The first floor was about 1 foot above the general level of the ground, and tiled throughout with 6-inch square cement tiles. The walls of the building were of sound construction, and consisted of 7-inch square hard wood posts, set well into the stone foundations below the floor line, 13 feet apart. The space between the posts and between the floor and plates was filled in with one thickness of brick, wedged in between the posts and the vertical continuations of the window stude, sills, and heads. The walls were plastered both inside and out, the posts being hidden from view on the exterior by brick pilasters; also plastered and finished with molded

The new post foundations consist of 4 8-inch by 12 feet dungan wood piles, driven so that the heads are below the water line, and capped into a block of concrete 3 feet 8 inches square and 30 inches deep. The posts are 9 inches square in two sections, the lower of molave and the upper of ipil or tindalo, tusked at the bottom into a 4-foot length of 6 by 10 inch molave, crossed by another stick of the same size immediately under, and both pieces bearing directly over the heads of the piles and embedded in

As the alignment of the new posts differ from that of the old ones, all the piling and concreting was done before the old roof was removed. This part of the work was performed as rapidly as the crude local appliances permitted, no steam pile-driver being available. An acetylene gas machine was installed for illuminating purposes, and the work was pushed day and night.

At this stage of the construction a large part of the printing machinery arrived in Manila, and immediate provision for its storage had to be made. On November 16, therefore, a contract was made for building a temporary shed, 30 feet wide and 130

feet long, along the northern side of the printing office building

As fast as the arrangements for the various parts of the building could be determined and the plans and specifications, therefore, completed, the contracts were let. On March 10 a blanket contract was let, covering all the previous smaller contracts and providing, further, for fully inclosing the building.

Briefly summarizing the constructional details involved in this contract, it may be stated that all the new structural timber is of native hard wood, of the superior group, with the exception of the floor joists, which are of guijo, a native hard wood of the third group. The floors of the second story consist of 1-inch redw diagonally, with a 1 by 4 inch Oregon pine tongued and grooved top floor. The floors of the second story consist of 1-inch redwood, laid old roof trusses, purlins, galvanized roofing, etc., were used again in the new roof, the new extension on the front necessarily requiring new material. The paneled exterior and finishing wood of the second story is of clear California redwood.

To prevent all possible danger of damage by water, which sometimes rises in this vicinity during the rainy season sufficiently to cover the plat, the tiling of the first story was removed and the level raised another foot. The entire surface was then concreted and prepared for a smooth cement finish. Samples of cement finish to this floor were prepared by an expert, but, at the request of the public printer, the idea of a cement floor was abandoned and a tongued and grooved Oregon pine floor substituted therefor, laid on sleepers embedded in additional concrete.

For convenience of reference a statement of the arrangement of the building is as follows: On the first or ground floor is the press room, containing 3,549 square feet; aper warehouse, 4,056 square feet; roller-making room, 728 square feet; ink room, paper warehouse, 4,000 square feet, tonor-manning toom, 130 square feet; delivery room, 1,521 square feet; storage for unbroken cases, 2,117 square feet; unbound volumes, 1,326 square feet; paper cutting and storage, 2,054 square feet; total, 15,472 square feet.

On the second floor are the general offices of the public printer and his chief clerk, containing 1,000 square feet; proof room and library, 693 square feet; composing room, 4,256 square feet; bindery, 5,648 square feet; photo-engraving and electrotyping room, 4,416 square feet, and a storeroom for special papers and inks,

General toilet and locker rooms are provided on both floors, besides a private lavatory, shower bath, etc., on the second floor for the public printer's private use, and a toilet room and locker space for women employees. Six dark rooms are provided for the photographers' use, and between these and the engraving room is a room 15 by 20 feet, with a tile floor, for that part of the work requiring the use of

An elevator, with a capacity of 4,000 pounds, runs from the press room up to the bindery.

Arroceros, 30 by 114 feet, for which a contract was let March 19, 1902.

The engine and boiler were purchased in Washington, D. C., and at the time it became necessary to construct the foundations, therefore, only the engine drawings were at hand. It was necessary, however, to construct both these foundations at this time, and, in the absence of complete data, a sufficient amount of material was used to cover all possible contingencies, ten piles being driven under each engine foundation, with heads buried in concrete blocks and stepped up with brick bed above. Only one boiler and engine unit was installed. The engine room is 26 by 29 feet; boiler room, 22 by 29 feet; carpenter shop, 18 by 29 feet; machine shop, 18 by 29 feet; cold-storage room, 14 by 29 feet. These, with the engineer's room and bath room, completed the plan of the power house.

The work of the bureau of architecture, in connection with the machinery equipment, was limited to the erection of the foundations for engines, boilers, and pumps and to the erection of the boiler and stack, together with the installation of the requisite steam exhaust, drainage, and certain other minor piping.

A stable for the printing office, 50 by 73 feet, was built on the northerly side of the property, with accommodations for eight native ponies, two American horses, hay and grain room, harness room, and men's room, besides storage space for ten carretelas, two carromatas, and two American delivery wagons.

The small boiler house, formerly in the center of the patio, was taken down and recrected in the southeast corner of the lot, to be used as a storeroom for explosive acids, oils, gasoline, etc.

This bureau has furnished the bureau of public printing with detailed working drawings for all the tables, make-up and dumping banks, chase racks, furniture cabinets, font cabinets, proof readers' desks, benches, bindery and slug racks, and other special furnishings.

Steam was first turned on the engine May 20, 1902.

MALACANAN PALACE.

In December, 1901, shortly before his departure for the United States, the civil governor requested an inspection of his official residence, known as the Malacanan

Palace, to the end that certain needed repairs might be made.

Such an inspection was made immediately after his departure, and a report thereof made to the Commission through the honorable the secretary of public instruction. It was recommended that the partitions in some of the sleeping apartments be shifted, the river front of the building jacked up, all the roofs of the main building repaired, the kitchen range shifted so that the smoke pipe would extend up through the dining-room roof, the interior walls and ceilings neatly repainted, and that other numerous and needed repairs of a minor character be made. The above work has since been done.

In addition to the above it was mentioned in the report that the building was in a bad state of repair, and that to do the necessary work to put it in such a condition as would render it a fit and proper residence for the civil governor would require an expenditure of money which would go far toward the cost of a new building suited

It was apparent last December that radical repairs to the stone pier supporting the river balcony would eventually be required, but it was suggested, in view of the expense attached to this, that the same be not included in that estimate, and an examination be made of the stone foundation at a favorable time during the dry season.

In the light of experience gained from the recent renovations at Malacanan the property would seem to be an expensive one, not only for the government in the way of repairs required from time to time, but also for the civil governor to maintain, as there is a large amount of waste space and a great number of outbuildings, which must necessarily be lighted and kept in condition with the same care and attention as those parts which are utilized.

The grounds are sometimes flooded during the rainy season, and while not advantageously adapted to their present use would be extremely valuable for other governmental uses. It is believed that with an appropriation of $35,000 United States currency a modern and commodious residence could be erected in a more desirable locality, using in part some of the building material now on hand in the storeroom of the bureau, and by turning over the Malacanan grounds to some of the business departments the net financial result would be greatly to the advantage of the government.

CIVIL SANITARIUM, BAGUIO, PROVINCE OF BENGUET.

On March 25, 1902, the sum of 10,000 pesos was appropriated for the purpose of constructing six three-room cottages at Baguio, province of Benguet, for use in connection with the convalescent hospital at that place, popularly known as the civil sanitarium, and a rest house at Sablan, the halfway station on the trail between Naguilian and Baguio.

This work has been attended with no little difficulty, but it has developed a knowledge of building operations in Benguet which will prove of great future value. No small amount of the appropriation was expended in getting the laborers to Baguio and in bringing up the necessary tools, subsistence supplies, and building material.

On the 9th of April, 1902, a party of Chinese laborers in charge of an American foreman arrived at Baguio, followed on the 14th by a second party in charge of a draftsman from the office-30 laborers all told.

The men left Manila during the cholera epidemic, and were necessarily detained five days in the bay before the ship was permitted to sail for San Fernando. Laborers willing to go could not be obtained except at an increase of the rate paid in Manila. Packages and boxes of tools and materials, such as shovels, picks, saws, axes, nails, flexible roofing, hardware, and subsistence supplies of rice, fish, tea, etc., were sent up by ship to San Fernando de la Union, thence transported by army mule teams 12 miles to Naguilian, and there repacked so that no single package weighed more than 60 or 70 pounds, the maximum load which the Igorrote polistas or carriers are willing to carry over the 29-mile trail to Baguio. The greatest difficulty was experienced in getting a sufficient number of polistas to carry this material, all of which did not arrive at Baguio for several weeks.

After the arrival of the men the first few days were spent in constructing a suitable "shack," or rough building for living quarters. The whole party were then put to work felling pine trees and sawing them into boards and dimension timber.

An examination of the premises at this time by the chief of the bureau, followed by a consultation with the honorable the secretary of public instruction, led to the recommendation that the sanitarium building be enlarged and repaired before the construction of the cottages was begun. Recommendation was also made for the construction of a suitable road to the new cottages, and for the construction of an experimental dam looking toward the installation of a water supply for the buildings.

On July 14 the sum of $4,500, United States currency, was duly appropriated by

At the date of this report the sanitarium building is almost completed, and construction of two of the cottages has been started. The general character of the construction is superior to anything in the province. The posts which support the building (no stone foundations being used) are obtained from Igorrotes, who select for this purpose trees that have fallen and to a certain extent rotted away. They hew the log away, using only a bolo, until it is reduced from a diameter of perhaps 36 inches to 12 inches. These posts are hauled sometimes many miles, but are furnished at the uniform price of $1.50, Mexican currency, each. The frame of the building is put up in the same manner as the construction of similar buildings in building is put up in the same manner as the construction of similar buildings in Manila, with double plates, double girders gained into each side of the post and secured to the same with one bolt. The sides and roofs, as well as the floors, are laid with 1-inch boards, all sawed by hand, and the floors and sideboarding smoothed off, tongued and grooved. The construction of the cottages is the same as that of the sanitarium. The roof boarding is covered with patent flexible asphaltic roofing.

The nucleus of the sanitarium building is a cottage built by Otto Shearer. As will be seen by the drawings accompanying this report the old grass roof is replaced by a new roof, the interior rearranged and generally renovated, forming one pavilion of the completed structure.

Work on the buildings has been retarded by the continuous rains of the season. The carpenters have been put to work at such times making doors, windows, sash, and similar appointments. Inability to secure supplies over the trail for the Chinese carpenters has, on several occasions, caused a stoppage of the work. On this account Ilocanos were employed from time to time to take the place of the Chinese carpenters, and at present 15 or 20 are at work. It is believed that the Ilocano carpenter, whose work is exceedingly crude, will learn something from the Chinese carpenters, and in future be able to carry on similar work satisfactorily.

The delays in transporting supplies and material will, in the near future, be lessened by the establishment of a pack train of ponies from San Fernando to Baguio, under

It is to be regretted that the Igorrotes themselves can supply no skilled labor, but they are very willing workers and of a happy disposition and, therefore, are very easily managed. Skill in the trades of carpentry and masonry will undoubtedly be acquired by them in time.

SEMAPHORE STATION.

This building is a very old structure, situated on the Malecon wall. It is about 53 feet square, one corner of which is a tower, 36 feet square and 50 feet high, built of exceedingly heavy masonry and surmounted by a steel mast and cross tree. The building is used by the bureau of coast guard and transportation for observation of incoming vessels and the display of weather and other signals for the benefit of the shipping in the bay. The entire building above the foundation, with the exception of the tower, has been rebuilt, sinks, closets, and shower bath installed, and the building generally put in first-class condition.

CASH ROOM, INTENDENCIA.

In accordance with a request of the treasurer of the Philippine Islands, plans were prepared, and on the 8th of April, 1902, a contract was let for reconstructing one of the rooms and adjacent corridor on the ground floor of the intendencia, or treasury building, in order that the space could be utilized as a cash room. This room is 22 by 44 feet inside, and is partitioned off and fitted with counters, gates, new electric lights, and other usual appointments of a small banking office. In one corner there is a spiral staircase from the cash room to the main offices of the treasurer on the second floor. The walls and ceilings are neatly painted and decorated. The space immediately in front of the entrance to the cash room, which also commands an entrance to the new vaults hereinafter described, has been partitioned off from the corridor by means of heavy iron gratings and double iron gates.

In connection with this work alterations are now in progress on the present vault toward making a thorough system of ventilation. No provision was made for venti-lation when the vault was built over a year ago, and in consequence the treasurer has been unable to use it for the storage of papers and paper money for any considerable length of time.

SMALL ADDITIONS, RENOVATIONS, ETC.

The following list of buildings, which have been repaired, enlarged, or otherwise attended to by this bureau, will show the general character of the work which is constantly in progress:

Audiencia building.—Court room: Platforms and railings and new office for the

Bureau of agriculture.—New plumbing and new system of electric-light wiring.

Santa Mesa detention hospital.—New nips retreats and installation of shower baths. Besides the foregoing, numerous repairs of a minor character have been made from time to time on most of the Government buildings.

NEW TREASURY VAULT.

Although the work is not yet completed, still the new vault to be built in the intendencia building for the treasurer of the islands would hardly come under the category of future operations. This vault was contracted for on July 30, 1902, and the steel casing is now being manufactured in the United States, from whence it will be shipped to Manila. The vault is in two sections, 19 feet 2 inches by 17 feet 2 inches and 19 feet 2 inches by 9 feet 6 inches, respectively. The general construction consists of a lining formed of three-eighths-inch chilled steel plates, secured to I and channel beam top and bottom and four sides. The vault is subdivided into seven compartments by division walls of three-eighths-inch chilled steel plates, with fronts of three-fourths-inch iron rod extending from floor to ceiling, furnished with doors of the same construction. The vault door is to be of a manufacture which accords with the Treasury regulations, with triple movement time lock, vestibule, and day A system of exhaust ventilation, with small blower, is provided, as well as a complete electric-wiring system.

GOVERNMENT CORRAL.

On January 15, 1902, papers were referred to this bureau by the acting civil governor, through the honorable the secretary of public instruction, ordering plans and specifications, with estimates of cost, to be prepared for a corral to accommodate the transportation division under the insular purchasing agent. The plans and specifications were shortly thereafter drawn up, and contemplated the construction of a stable 50 by 208 feet, with provision for 176 native ponies and a large hay and grain loft; a stable with hay and grain loft above to accommodate 56 American horses; 2 sheds, each 200 feet long, for carromatas; a shed for American wagons, 160 feet long; office, large harness room, sleeping quarters for the men, carriage washstands, and paddock.

Estimates were obtained on the above buildings, which it was proposed to erecton Calle de Nozaleda, at the Estero Santa Monica, approximating $60,000 Mexican currency, but no action in the matter has as yet been taken.

CUSTOM-HOUSE (NEW BUILDING).

The work of the bureau so far described has been fully completed, or so far toward completion (with the exception, as already stated, of the treasury vault) as to justify its description in the category of completed operations.

Some of the most important work, however, has been completed so far as the plan and specifications are concerned, and it would seem proper at this time to describe it. The first building of this kind for which an appropriation has already been made, and contracts for which will shortly be let, is the new custom-house building. These plans contemplate a structure in the shape of an L, on the corner of Muelle del Rey and Calle Numancia. A continuation of the present main structure on Muelle del Rey, 156 by 45 feet, runs to the corner of Calle Numancia, thence back on this street 198 feet, with a width of 62 feet. When completed this addition will add greatly to the efficiency of this department in all directions. The building will be two stories in height, excepting the corner structure, which will be three stories. On the first or ground floor, adjoining the old building, will be located the baggage room (70 feet by 39 feet), the baggage office, baggage storage, and two private examining rooms, making this department complete in itself, the entrance for baggage being from Muelle del Rey and the exit at the rear, where a place is provided for baggage wagons and carts.

Just about the center of the structure, in front, is the main entrance and stair hall, from which the main stairs ascend to the second and third floors. At the rear of the stair hall is the emigration department (43 feet by 22 feet), consisting of two rooms. At the side of the hall is a fireproof vault (21 feet by 9 feet by 16 feet) for the storage of records.

The balance of the ground floor, a space 62 by 192 feet, is for storage and runway. Here particular pains have been taken to provide for quickly unloading and disposing of incoming goods without unnecessary handling. By the aid of two steam derricks, located at either side of the entrance, and a series of overhead trolleys, goods will be conveyed from the lorchas on the river front to any part of the runway with dispatch. The two sides and rear have openings 10 feet wide by 16 feet high, occurring at intervals of 15 feet. The openings on Calle Numancia and the rear are for the loading of carts and baggage wagons, while those on the remaining side are for loading goods to be conveyed to the storehouse. All of the openings are provided with steel frames and steel rolling shutters, while those in front are also provided with flexible gates.

The entire second floor, comprising an area of about 16,000 square feet, is for the occupancy of the customs offices. A continuation of the corridor of the old building, with offices on one side and court on the other, leads to a rotunda in the corner structure, and continues from there at right angles to the end of the building on Calle Numancia, with offices on either side. At this point are the offices of the collector of customs, which include a waiting room, clerks' office, collector's office, and collector's private office, with toilet room.

On the court side of this corridor are the offices of special agents, the deputy collector, the assistant deputy collector, and clerks' offices. On the street side are massigned offices. At the junction of the two corridors the rotunda (32 feet in diameter) extends from the second floor to the top of the roof, a distance of about 40 feet, and is there surmounted by a dome. In the second story the walls of the rotunda are pierced with eight arched openings, 10 feet wide and 14 feet high, and between the openings are fluted pilasters, with Ionic capitals supporting a cornice at the base of the dome. At the line of the third floor and above the arches are square openings into a passageway around the rotunda. These openings, in connection with the sixteen openings which pierce the dome, supply the light for the rotunda. The whole structure of the dome is classic in design. Surrounding the rotunda and opening into it are the offices of liquidation, stamp office, etc., and a public writing room. On the front corridor are the offices of the surveyor and deputy surveyor, the guards' room, and an additional office for the cashier.

All of the dividing partitions in the second story are paneled 7½ feet high, with the corridors and offices of the collector wainscoted to the same height and paneled in the same manner.

The collector's office is to be finished in native wood, and all other finishing wood throughout the building will be of California redwood. All woodwork to be in the natural finish excepting the rotunds, which will be finished in white.

The floors are to be of selected Oregon pine. In the construction concrete footings are to be used, with stone walls for the first story. The posts and girders and timber used below the grade line are to be of native timber, and all other structural work is to be in Oregon pine.

In the exterior design, where the building is a continuation of the old one, no attempt has been made to elaborate upon it, for it was considered advisable to have the whole appear as one complete building without any dividing line. So any special effort at design was left for that part of the building at the corner, where the two wings intersect, a square structure, 62 feet on a side through two stories to the main cornice. The cornice has a projection of 3 feet 6 inches and is supported by heavy modillions, carved in wood. On each side, starting at the line of the second story, are projections of 2 feet and 20 feet wide, running up one story above the main roof, forming dormers, which run back, intersecting the octagonal base, and covered with a spherical dome, which is surmounted by a cupola. The second story is provided with three large windows on each side, with molded architraves and cornices supported on carved brackets. The dormers in the third story are treated as balconies, with columned openings and heavy balustrade in front, supported on heavy carved brackets. The octagonal base of the dome has windows in four sides, which light the rotunda. The circular base is treated with eight pilasters, dividing the wall into eight divisions, each provided with two circular-top windows, which, with the windows in the octagonal base, furnish light to the rotunda. The dome itself is divided into a series of circular and triangular molded panels and is surmounted with a circular cupola with four openings and four columns, with Corinthian capitals. The cupola is 85 feet from the ground, and will be used as a lookout station.

NEW GOVERNMENT LABORATORY.

Perhaps the most important undertaking of the bureau has been the designing of a building for the bureau of government laboratories.

Site.—The building is to occupy the southeast part of the plot of ground known as the "Exposition grounds," facing on Calle Herran. These grounds extend between Calle Herran and Calle Padre Faura, a distance of approximately 275 meters. A broad avenue, lined with trees, runs directly through the premises from street to street. It is purposed to place the laboratory building so that it shall form a definite and symmetrical part of a collection of buildings which will be eventually required. Provision has been made in the power house of this building for furnishing all the electric light and power for such a series of buildings, which, when completed, in the form of a quadrangle around a large central court, will form an interesting and imposing group.

Soil.—A careful investigation was made of the ground on which the building is to stand, and of the conditions of adjoining buildings built upon the same soil. It was found that the soil would safely bear the weight of the building.

Foundation.—The foundation walls of the main building are to be constructed of concrete made of Portland cement, sand, and broken stone, in proportions of one, three, and five, respectively. It was decided in this case not to use the soft local stone for this part of the work, as it is inferior to the Portland cement concrete, and during the rainy season furnishes a ready means for carrying moisture from the ground to all the lower part of the building. In fact, in order to have the lower stone perfectly free from dampness the specifications call for a damp-proof course of hot asphalt to be laid through the wall of the foundation and on the inner and outer surfaces of same up as far as the underside of the water-table course.

Superstructure.—As this is the first new building of importance in connection with which there has been either demand or opportunity for any radical departure on the part of this bureau from the established local methods of construction, proportionate thought and care have been expended upon the construction of the superstructure.

This construction differs from the local methods in that the posts do not extend into the foundation wall, but, instead, are to be set on a 9 by 9 inch sill plate, running continuously around the foundation walls, the foot of each post being let into the sill by a small tusk and both sills an dposts belted to foundation with anchor bolts, extending 4 feet into the concrete foundation wall.

Girders and plates throughout are doubled and gained into each side of the posts and secured with only one bolt. No mortising or tenoning is used.

The roof is supported on the usual form of truss, modified, however, in that the lower chord of each truss is divided, gained, and bolted with one bolt to the supporting posts, instead of being in one piece resting on top of same. In other words, a double truss is built on each line of supporting posts.

The exterior walls are to be studded in and sheathed with 1-inch boards. On the outside of the sheathing wooden furring strips will be nailed, to which expanded metal lath will be attached by means of 1-inch round galvanized iron staples. On the inside of the walls a metal lath will be attached to the studding by similar staples. The entire surfaces of the interior and exterior walls will then be plastered and finished with a surface of cement roughly floated on. Interior partitions will be metal lathed and plastered similarly. This form of construction provides an air space in the walls, which will not only prove a nonconductor of heat, but also prevent dampness from penetrating to interior. Structurally this method will make a strong, elastic wall, which will withstand the strain of earthquake shocks.

The floors are of the usual construction, 3 by 4 inch beams being used for the second story and 3 by 9 inch beams for the first story. The tops of the beams are beveled off and cleats and rough boarding attached between, which supports a layer of concrete 4 inches thick. The finished floor in the main halls and toilet rooms will be of a neat pattern of encaustic tile, and the floors in all the laboratory rooms will be surfaced with a form of asphaltic floor finish which is impervious to acids.

The roof rafters will be covered with boarding, which, in turn, will be covered with a neat pattern of galvanized metallic tile, a layer of building paper being placed between.

All the timber used in the building will be West Australian jarrah, a wood of excellent qualities, both as to strength and its resistance to the anay, or white ant.

The building in its arrangements has been very carefully laid out, and before even the foundation was started each desk, hood, and fixture was located in every room. As the laboratory will be used for purposes of research and experiment on lines hereinafter mentioned, and not for class instruction, no lecture or class rooms are Lavatories and toilet rooms are provided at each end of the main corridor on both floors for the general use of the occupants of the building. Toilet rooms for the engine room force, native employees, both male and female, are situated on the first floor of the power house. A special toilet for women is provided in the second floor

Power house.—A power house containing the engine and boiler equipment, refrigerating apparatus, pump, etc., as well as the serum institute, will be constructed immediately at the rear of the main building with a second story corridor connecting The power house is approximately 50 by 100 feet, two stories in height, excepting the engine, boiler, and coal room, which are one story.

The arched colonnade around the power house will be continued in the form of covered passageways to the subsidiary buildings. It is purposed to lay out the grounds surrounding the whole series of buildings with ample driveways, the space between which will be turfed and set out with nips and bungo palms and other tropical trees, diversified by cretons and other hardy ornamental shrubs.

Laboratory arrangement.—Provision is made for the accommodation of the various laboratory departments as follows:

The chambers will be cooled by means of a carbonic anhydride compression plant of 6 tons' capacity, which will be installed in that part of the engine room immediately adjacent to the cold-storage chambers and operated by a 12horsepower slow-speed multipolar electric motor, fitted with rawhide gearing. Refrigerating plant will be fitted with submerged condenser, gauge board, and traps, and a liquid receiver. Direct-expansion piping will be carried from the refrigerating machinery to the refrigerators in the incubation rooms on the first and second floors of the main building.

Filter pump.—A duplex air compressor, operated by a 1-horsepower motor, will be installed in the serum kitchen to furnish an air pressure of 200 pounds for the

Crematory.—A steel plate fire-brick lined crematory or garbage destructor, having a capacity of 3 barrels per day and fitted with pans for the evaporation of liquids, will be erected in the crematory room adjacent to the boiler room, to provide for the disposal of laboratory refuse. The gases of combustion from the destructor furnace proper will be subjected to the heat of a subsidiary furnace and completely deodorized before passing to the boiler smokestack, with which the destructor will be connected by a steel smoke breeching.

Future requirements.—Provision has been made in planning the laboratory buildings and equipment not only for immediate requirements, but also for such growth in the same as may reasonably be anticipated within the next five years.

The buildings thus far authorized will be so located upon the site selected as to provide for the future additions of two wings each of dimensions approximately equal to those of the main building, while the power house and its equipment have been designed to permit the economical future installation of an additional boiler, engine, and dynamo, adequate to supply any anticipated demand for increased steam or electric power from all existing, already authorized, or projected government buildings upon or in the vicinity of the "exposition grounds" or campus.

It is proper to add in conclusion that the evolution of the completed plans for this building and its equipment has been greatly facilitated by the able assistance rendered this bureau by the superintendent of government laboratories and his hearty cooperation at all stages of the work.

SCHOOLHOUSES.

Under the existing law the designing of school buildings is not the work of this

Section 1 of act No. 268 directs the bureau only in respect to "public buildings" belonging to the insular government and such other buildings as may be assigned to it by the civil governor." Section 3 of act No. 74, the "educational act," so called, states as a part of the duties of the general superintendent of public instruction that "he shall prescribe plans for the construction of schoolhouses to be built by the municipalities." This is modified by section 10 of act No. 83, the "provincial government act," as amended by act No. 372, as follows: "In preparing plans and specifications for the construction and repair of buildings for the secondary schools to be undertaken by the provinces as hereinafter provided the provincial supervisor shall consult with the insular architect and with the superintendent of the school division in which the province is located, and such plans and specifications shall be subject to the approval of the latter, or of the general superintendent of public instruction, in accordance with the provisions of act No. 74, before the work may be undertaken."

This bureau is thus charged only with the duty of consultation with the provincial supervisors in respect to contemplated operations. It is felt that in the city of Manila at least entire charge of such work could be given to this bureau, and subsequently, as intercommunication with the provinces improves, an increased amount of such work should be performed by this office.

CONDITIONS AND REQUIREMENTS.

This bureau has now in its employ an expert cabinetmaker, selected from the eligible list of the United States Civil Service Commission, and it is intended to select from among the native carpenters such as are more advanced and place them directly under his charge; that is to say, they will be instructed in the use of American tools and methods of carpentry, and permitted to assist in the construction of the various finished parts of buildings. There appears to be no good reason why the native Filipino should not make a good artisan. While there is no sort of appreciation on his part of the dignity of labor, and while there is a noticeable absence of earnest application to work, still the capacity to do good work is undoubtedly possessed by him, and he has the qualification which will be of the utmost advantage to him, viz, he can be dealt with as an individual.

Most of the carpenter and mason work is performed by Chinese. This applies to laborers employed by contractors, as well as those employed directly by this bureau. This applies to The number of native Filipino carpenters capable of being classed as such has been found to be extremely limited, but it is believed that their number will increase in view of the demand for such artisans.

The supply of Chinese laborers has become so limited that operations on a large scale have become seriously hampered. It is also further hampered by the fact that the Chinese laborers and carpenters from the districts of Amoy and Macao refuse to work together. Chinese carpenters and other skilled workmen are organized into companies controlled by agents or bosses, with whom it is necessary to negotiate when they are required in any number. A few carpenters can be dealt with individually, but, as a rule in the employment of Chinese labor, the "padrone" system prevails. So far the Filipino laborers appear to be independent of any such control. Undoubtedly, as the future develops expert carpenters and masons in the ranks of the native laborers, they will unite in proper and lawful association, which will be a source of pride to its members as well as an inspiration to others.

There has been a marked public demand for more Chinese carpenters and labor-Undoubtedly more such are needed from the point of view of those who are engaged in building operations. But the prevalence of the above system, as above mentioned, would render the result of such accessions somewhat problematical, at least from the financial standpoint, as competition would still be limited in great part to the bosses and not to the individuals.

The efficiency of this bureau could be increased by a more complete equipment. The nature of a large class of the work is such that the facilities for its performance and for furnishing material should be more complete, as it has been demonstrated that work done by labor employed directly by the bureau is more economical.

There are in the direct employ of this bureau a great many carpenters, masons, and laborers for the purpose of doing small jobs and repairs, which can not be contracted for without considerable expense and delay in the execution. For these reasons arrangements should be such that material can be delivered without the delay now being experienced through inadequate equipment. At present all material has to be secured through the insular purchasing agent, and this not only takes valuable time but in many cases incurs an expense incommensurate with the value of the work. This is especially so when small quantities of material of a certain class are required.

One of the most important requirements is a lumber yard, at some convenient central location, easy of access. At present there are no facilities for such storage, and the inconvenience is a serious drawback. Requirements in connection with this would be: Sheds for the storage of the more bulky building material, a metal workers' shop, and a carpenters' shop. There is a constant demand for small quantities of sand, lime, cement, brick, and material of like nature; also for the storage of fine lumber, which can not be kept in the required quantities without suitable accommodation. The metal worker now occupies quarters in the storeroom of the bureau, which can not for long be available for that purpose, consequently provision should be made for this branch also, with its supply of machinery for the proper execution of all kinds of metal work, such as iron folders, cornice brake, groovers, forming machines, seamers, and such other tools and implements required by metal workers generally. The equipment of a carpenter shop, with machines for turning out a general class of millwork, is a need that can not be too strongly recommended.

There is a continuous and increasing demand for this work, and very often sacrifices and substitutions have to be made in order that the construction may proceed. Sometimes orders for this work through the insular purchasing agent can not be filled and at other times, because they are not executed under supervision of this bureau, they are found to be unsatisfactory. By having the shop directly under the supervision of this bureau and operated by its employees a better class of work can be secured without the delay and inconvenience incident to the present method. This equipment could consist, to begin with, of a cabinetmaker's double saw, an edge-molding machine, a variety woodworker, a sander, a mitering machine, lathe, and a general line of such tools usually found in such plants.

Lack of adequate transportation equipment has been a great source of annoyance in the past. While the insular purchasing agent has furnished all the transportation he could spare, still it has been wholly insufficient. Two lumber wagons and two escort wagons are needed, and if these could be supplied they would meet the requirements of this office in a satisfactory manner.

ARCHITECTURE IN MANILA.

Architecture in Manila is, in a certain sense, disappointing, although it presents some points of interest not to be found elsewhere. One usually associates good things in architecture with Spanish settlements, and in Manila one would think to find something equal to that in Mexico or southern California. It does not, however, compare favorably, lacking the originality, pleasing composition, and proportion which that work displays. One must look to the ecclesiastical work for the best expression of architecture. The churches in Manila are very numerous and are the only monumental structures. The style, when built, was probably well defined, but numerous misfortunes, necessitating rebuilding and additions, have greatly disfigured and obliterated the original designs, although in many cases adding to their picturesqueness. These misfortunes which have attended the churches were chiefly due to earthquakes. The buildings are built of stone, with walls of great thickness—built so evidently to withstand these same disturbances. In most cases the principal feature of the design is the entrance, of one or three heavy arched openings with numerous enriched recesses, the enrichment consisting of heavy bold carvings in stone on the face of the arches, well proportioned as to position and in keeping with that part of the design. Many are treated much more simply with molded archivolt and architrave, and the doors are heavy and massive, with carved panels executed in a skillful manner, the design being taken from ecclesiastical subjects.

Above the entrance is a semicircular or rose window, and most have one or two towers flanking the entrance, and, no doubt at one time some of them were sur-

The cornices of stone are corbeled out or bracketed, plain and simple. When of wood the rafters and ceiling joists are exposed, terminating in carved or molded work. The side walls are either plain, straight wall surfaces, divided horizontally with molded courses or vertically by buttresses or pilasters surmounted with terracotta ornaments. Ornamentation is the indication of style. The ornaments of these churches do not always convey this information. The window openings in the side walls are few, the principal light coming from clere-story windows.

The exterior walls have the appearance of age, which gives that sense of antiquity that seems to belong to this class of building.

The crossing has quite often a dome, with octagonal or cylindrical bases. The principal features of the design seem to be borrowed from various sources and not very cleverly put together.

The domestic architecture is a curious problem, but is peculiarly adapted to the local conditions. The seismic condition and the climate have resulted in a type of domicile, that, at first thought, seems strange to the foreigner. As a matter of fact, the scheme is rational, and serves the purpose well for which it is intended. The design impresses one mostly with its constant repetition, and, however much they differ in matter of detail, plan, and construction, never loses its identity. We meet with it everywhere and it is unmistakable. There is a lack of originality which it is hard to understand. A designer of ability might do surprising things with these simple methods. Although, many things may be said against these methods, it must be admitted to be the frank acceptance of conditions prescribed by the country. It is certainly much easier to evolve a system of design if it has for its foundation solid masonry instead of timber.

Under the local conditions masonry is out of the question. The stone in the islands is of an incomplete formation, very soft, and without a great deal of sustaining power, and the cost of importing stone makes it prohibitive. Aside from this fact it has been demonstrated conclusively that masonry construction will not stand as successfully as timber in earth disturbances.

The system of construction would have been considered unique a few years ago. It would not be surprising to learn that the inventor of the steel frame or skeleton construction received his first ideas from this class of building, for it is skeleton construction pure and simple, with the substitution of wood for iron and masonry. matter what the external appearance of the building may be, whether massive, stone, brick, plaster, or frame, the construction is always the same. Wood posts are erected at the corners of the building, at the angles, in the interior opposite the outside posts, and at intermediate points. These posts extend into the ground some three or four feet, and are framed into crosspieces at the bottom. One of the things to be contended with in timber construction is the anay, an insect which destroys the timber, working on the inside until nothing remains but the outside shell. there is nothing in the external appearance of the timber to indicate their presence, the results are often very disastrous. The native molave seems to be the only timber the anay will not attack. This timber is used for posts, but, as the cost is very great, it is only used to a point a little above the grade, where it is scarfed to the posts above. Around the posts underground are built stone piers, or, where the wall above ground is stone, they are encased in the wall. The posts extend to the roof to receive the trusses. At the floor lines and roof line girders are run entirely around the building and intersected by girders on the inside posts. These girders are in pairs, one either side of the post, gained in and bolted through them. This constitutes the frame of the building. The floor joists rest upon these girders, and those at the second floor line extend over the line of the posts four or five feet, in this way making balconies for the rooms on that floor, and protection from sun and rain for the openings below. The walls of the first story are constructed in various ways. One way is to build the walls of solid masonry, embedding the posts therein. Another is to build masonry in between the timbers, making a sort of half-timber construction. Still another way is to ceil the walls up with wood. The half-timeer construction would seem to be the most capable of development into something, but the present examples are scarce worthy of the name.

The second-story walls are built up at the ends of the projecting floor joists, and are very light in construction, consisting of thin wood molded panels. Sometimes the panels are filled with an applied ornament, very often of artistic merit and quite

The construction of the roof consists of a series of trusses carried across at the line of the posts and projecting well beyond the face of the second-story wall. Here, again, we find a construction calculated to withstand the earthquake shocks. the angles are bolted together and the tie member bolted to the posts. Only one bolt is used at the different angles, and the theory is that, in case of disturbance, the angles are not very liable to tear apart. Purlins are supported between the trusses which carry the roofing material. This is usually galvanized iron, but some of the older buildings have a tile roof. These tiles are V-shaped, very heavy, and made of clay. One row is laid on the roof with the point down, and over this a row with the point up, covering the joints, and all laid in cement. The tile, being short and laid with a great deal of cement, makes an enormous load for a timber roof to carry. The roof rafters or joists are sometimes exposed, terminating in carved or molded work, but more often the cornice is boxed in and supported by ornamental wood brackets. The panels formed by these brackets in the frieze and soffit of cornice have perforated design, a mode of embellishment which is characteristic of all work. These patterns are sometimes quite intricate and well developed.

The treatment of the outside walls is occasionally varied by a scheme of narrow pilasters and arched windows. The window openings are very high and wide, often being nearly as wide as the room in which they open. The openings are filled with a series of sashes the full height of the window, and are operated by sliding to either Below the windows panels are arranged to slide, so that the opening really extends to the floor.

There are many examples of really fine wrought-iron work, which are entitled to a great deal of praise. Many of the suburban residences are located on large grounds, inclosed with wrought-iron fences with masonry posts. While the masonry work is not particularly attractive, the ironwork in many cases is so beautifully designed and executed that it is worthy of better surroundings. The same class of work is used in the window openings, and it is always varied enough to be interesting and instructive.

In the crowded districts of Manila the houses and other buildings are built close together, with the walls on the street line, and the overhang at the second story

There is no doubt that the future will see marked improvement in the architecture of the islands. The past work is all in a well-worn path, exceedingly hard to get out of, but the introduction of new methods and new people will soon make a better field of operation and present greater opportunities. A style must develop which will have something characteristic of the nationalities here resident, but still retain those points of excellence so well adapted to local conditions. Just what this will develop is problematical. To this end it would be advisable to investigate and study the style and construction characteristic of some of the neighboring countries, particularly Japan.

In the work of the Spaniards there seems to be no effort to introduce ideas characteristic of location. This probably accounts for the inferiority of the work performed here by them, and, as a contrast, it is pleasant to review the results of the native Filipino constructor. Reference is made to the nipa construction, which is original, natural, and worthy in every way. These nipa buildings are very picturesque and capable of being developed into a much more substantial and serviceable type of building. It is believed that the artistic and constructive ability of the natives of these islands could be pleasantly illustrated at the St. Louis Exposition by the constructing of some of these buildings there by the constructing of some of these buildings there.

The nipa construction may be briefly described as one employing the use of hamboo for the entire structure and floors tied together by withes or "bajuco" (the outer bark of young bamboo in the form of long strings), with sides and roof built from the nips grass. Photographs of examples of nips work appear with this report.

One of the most peculiar compositions of the islands illustrative of the intermixture of styles is the Chinese cathedral. Built in stone, it is a curious mixture, but is harmonious in composition and is very pleasing. It might be said to contain a majority of these features which determine style—a combination of circular windows, windows with circular arches, pointed arches, elliptical arches, and straight lintels. The whole is surmounted by a typical Chinese pagoda roof, seemingly an incongruous mass, without any reason for so being. The thing is neither Chinese, Japanese, Spanish, nor Filipino, but shows the effect the mingling of the different races has upon architecture.

REPORT OF THE PUBLIC PRINTER FOR THE PERIOD FROM MAY 29, 1901, TO JUNE 30, 1902, WITH APPENDIX COVERING THE PERIOD FROM JULY 1 TO AUGUST 31, 1902.

BUREAU OF PUBLIC PRINTING, OFFICE OF THE PUBLIC PRINTER, Manila, P. I., September 16, 1902.

Sm: In compliance with your letter of September 4, 1902, I have the honor to present the following report for the period from May 29, 1901, to June 30, 1902, with appendix covering the period from July 1 to August 31, 1902:

It is a matter of great pleasure that I am permitted to announce the installation of the public printing plant for the government of the Philippine Islands.

I was appointed to my present position on May 29, 1901, in the manner suggested by the civil governor, upon the recommendation of Hon. Frank W. Palmer, Public Printer of the United States, and approved by Hon. Elihu Root, Secretary of War.

Certain instructions embodied in cablegrams were furnished to me by the Chief of the Insular Bureau as a basis for the equipment of this plant. These instructions indicated the quantity of body type and the number and size of cylinder presses required, and further stated that the Philippine Commission desired a complete printing plant, including stereotyping and electrotyping outfits and a photo-engraving plant, together with necessary supplies.

In accordance with these instructions I prepared the following schedules. The same were duly advertised in the newspapers and bids invited. Copies were sent direct to well-known firms in the respective mechanical lines:

A. Type. (July 2, 1901.)
B. Electrotyping and stereotyping outfits. (July 11, 1901.)
C. Bookbinding outfit, etc. (July 11, 1901.)

D. Composing room and press-room equipments. (July 17, 1901.)

E. Readvertised and additional machinery, etc., for bookbinding and prese-room outfits. (August 5, 1901.)

F. Photo-engraving outfit, supplies, etc. (August 15, 1901.)

G. Power plant, etc. (August 12, 1901.)
H. Printing inks and copying printing inks, bronzes, dry colors, varnishes, etc. (August 16, 1901.)

I. Electrical supplies, etc. (August 15, 1901.)
A glance at the above dates will show that all the schedules had been prepared and printed by August 16, 1901, two and a half months after the selection of the public printer.

When the bids were received abstracts of all prices submitted by the several bidders were prepared by item number, my recommendations being indicated thereon and the reasons therefor given. The abstracts, bids, and awards, with letters recommending to whom awards be made, were then submitted to the Chief of the Insular Bureau and by him transmitted to the United States Public Printer for his indorsement and such suggestions as he might deem proper. The recommendations I had the honor to make received his concurrence in every instance. Copies of abstracts of bids and of the awards made to each bidder, along with the letters recommending to whom awards should be made, the letters of transmittal of the Chief of the Insular Bureau to the Public Printer of the United States and his indorsement thereon, accompanied my preliminary report to the Chief of the Insular Bureau on August 19, 1901, which was forwarded to the civil governor with his report on the status of the plant at that time.

The award on the cylinder printing presses was made, under cable instructions, to the Miehle Printing Press Company.

Acting under the verbal order of the chief of the insular bureau of August 12, 1901, I made requisition on the Mergenthaler Linotype Company, based on a proposal submitted by them, for 4 linotype machines, complete in every detail, with all necessary supplies and extra parts. Purchase was ordered on August 15, 1901. The original letters of this purchase are in the files of the insular bureau.

The automatic feeder for the folding machine, an acetylene gas plant, and a few minor articles of equipment were purchased on circular bids.

Mr. J. G. Jester, United States disbursing agent of Philippine revenues, purchased the reference books, copying press and supplies, file cabinet, 2 typewriters, deeks for same, and some office supplies, on lists furnished by me.

All necessary cabinets, wood furniture, tables, benches, make-up and type banks,

purchasing agent.

There have been added to the equipment 2 ruling machines, 2 numbering machines, 2 perforators, all in fair condition; 2 Challenge Gordon presses, in poor condition, transferred from the insular purchasing agent printing branch, and 2 Gordon presses, in fair condition, from the post-office printing branch

In the absence of specific instructions from the Philippine Civil Commission, a difficult problem presented itself in the question of supplies to accompany the plant. The War Department queried the Government Printing Office officials on this point, receiving a reply to the effect that "it was not possible to make even an approximate estimate of kinds and quantities of supplies to be purchased in the absence of data as to the amount and character of the work." The matter was then placed entirely in my hands. This being determined, an endeavor was made to have them purchased by the Public Printer of the United States under his contracts, who was unable to do so owing to legal obstructions. I therefore recommended the following plan, which was approved by the War Department:

To take the contracts for paper for public printing and binding made by the Joint Committee on Printing of the United States Congress, for envelopes made by the Postmaster-General of the United States, and for stationery, material, etc., made by the Public Printer of the United States, and to address the several contractors a circular letter asking them to furnish this bureau under said contracts and at those prices f. o. b. ship, Manila Bay, plus freight rate from New York, payment to be made from Philippine funds on cable notification of invoice verification at Manila, The supplies listed in this report other than those enumerated in schedules

In selecting the personnel of the force the following method was adopted:

Tender of application, submitting recommendations and medical certificates, my indorsement to the Chief of the Insular Bureau, inquiry by him of the Public Printer of the United States as to efficiency, qualifications, and general character of the applicant, the reply of the Public Printer thereto, the necessary transfer papers through the Civil Service Commission, and tender of appointment, as follows:

WAR DEPARTMENT, DIVISION OF INSULAR AFFAIRS Washington, D. C.

Sie: By virtue of authority conferred by cablegram from the Philippine Commission, and by proper transfer from the United States civil service, you are appointed

Meanwhile, while under my direction, you are to assist Mr. John S. Leech, the recently appointed superintendent of the Philippine printing office. Your tenure of office of this position is to be at the pleasure of this office until you start for Manila, and at that of the civil governor of the Philippines upon your arrival there.

Your duties will be such as may be prescribed by proper authority, and will specially include the instruction of any unskilled or native laborers that may be employed in said office in Manila.

Kindly acknowledge your acceptance of the position on the foregoing terms.

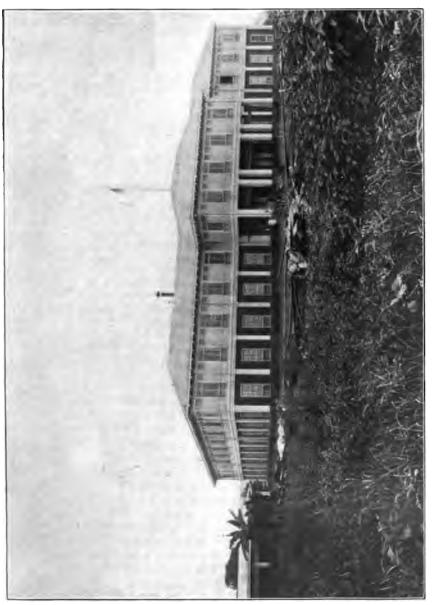

Respectfully,

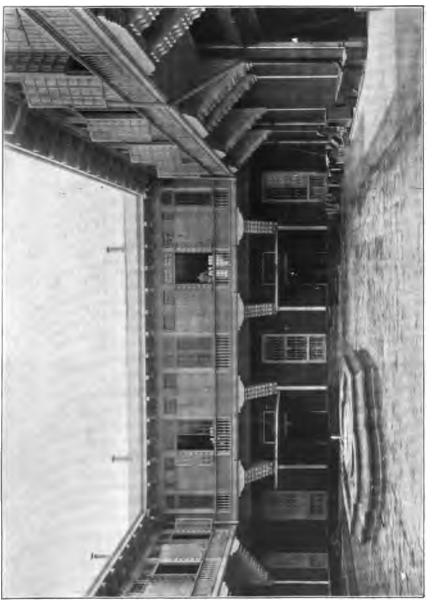

CLARENCE R. EDWARDS, Chief of Division.

Upon the acceptance of an appointment the prescribed oaths of office were administered. The first member of the force was appointed on August 1, 1901.

On August 17, 1901, a cablegram was sent to the civil governor, giving approximately the floor space required for the plant as a whole and for each mechanical branch.

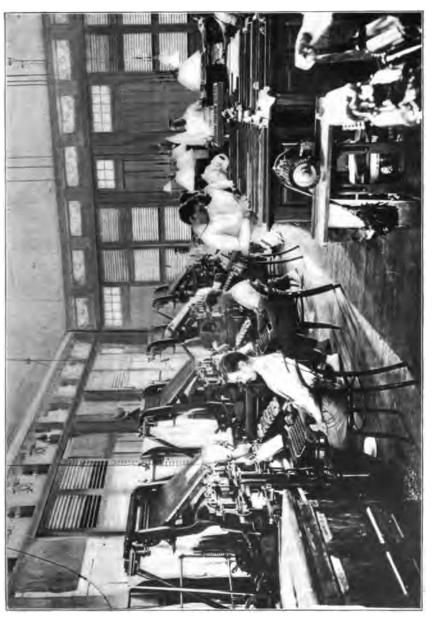

Believing it would expedite the preparation of the building for this bureau, on the approval of Col. Clarence R. Edwards, Edwin C. Jones and James A. Hoggsette were ordered to proceed to Manila in advance of the force to install the plant.

arrived here on October 15, 1901, reported to you, and were taken in consultation as to a building for the plant. Then they were assigned to the insular purchasing agent to take charge of contract printing and of the insular purchasing agent printing branch located at the quartermaster's shops.

On October 31, 1902, the insular auditor requested a detail of four printing experts to reaudit bills for contract printing. With your approval, the following employees were assigned: E. E. Gessler, proof reader; Jerome Kendall, printer; L. M. Allen, bookbinder; Fred. A. Anderson, pressman. This assignment lasted approximately two months.

The volume of office work so increased that I had to recall Messrs. Jones and Hoggsette, and Jerome Kendall and W. G. Vandever were assigned in their stead, the former in charge of contract printing and the latter of the branch office. Other employees were assigned to the branch office from time to time when their services were needed.

Act 296, "An act creating a bureau of public printing," was enacted November 7, 1901, and the bureau was organized thereunder on November 13, 1901.

During the month of November shipments were arriving from the States, so it became necessary to erect a temporary shed for housing the equipment and to rent a warehouse for storing supplies. A shed 130 by 30 feet was erected at the north end of the present building to invoice the plant in order to cable payments according to agreement. Necessary electrical connections were made with the ice plant to test the machinery. The supplies were stored at 254 San Miguel.

The civil governor and the secretaries of the departments were notified by letter on June 9, 1902, that on and after that date this bureau would assume control of the public printing and binding, being at that time able partially to operate in the com-

Allowance should be made on account of the services rendered by employees as instructors of native craftsmen, and this ought to be borne in mind in any comparison

If some provision can be made whereby employees may secure wholesome food at more reasonable prices than prevail at present, and suitable houses rented at lower rates, it will no doubt tend to the retention of efficient employees and render it comparatively easy to secure additional men.

There was appropriated in act 283 for "making repairs and additions to the building to be occupied by the public printing office, for grading and laying out the grounds about the building, and for repairing the fence surrounding the grounds," $50,000 in United States currency. Act 389 made a further appropriation of $34,555.33, United States currency, for the above purpose. Act 437 provided $1,475.20 "for expenses in grading and laying out the grounds about the public printing building, including filling and sodding and the hire of laborers in the above by paragraph 3, section 2, act 296.

Of the amounts appropriated to this bureau in acts 311 and 389, it will be seen from Table 1, financial statement, that the sum of $52,895.46 was returned to the treas-The estimates for these quarters were based on representations that portions of the building would be ready for occupancy during those periods.

A supplemental statement is appended showing the operations of the bureau during the months of July and August, 1902, as requested. (Exhibit B.)

As the plant stands to-day, having its own power plant, with boiler adapted to use coal or crude oil as fuel, a machine shop, gas plant, and the latest improved machinery in the mechanical branches, each machine run by an independent motor, economizing space and power, it appears to be admirably adapted to do the work required by the government of the Philippine Islands.

In conclusion I desire to call attention to the short time in which the schedules were completed and to testify to the mechanical skill of the employees in installing the plant. The machinery in this office is of a very intricate nature and arrived from the United States in parts. The machines were erected and operated successfully without delay.

JOHN S. LEECH, Public Printer.

Hon. BERNARD MOSES Secretary of Public Instruction.

REPORT OF THE CHIEF OF THE BUREAU OF ARCHIVES.

BUREAU OF ARCHIVES, Manila, October 25, 1902.

SIR: Under the Spanish Government the archives of the different departments were not regularly organized and were in charge of clerks. This was due to the constant changes among the Government employees, who held their positions only for a short time before they were suspended or transferred to other offices. Furthermore, as a consequence of the war which terminated Spanish sovereignty in these islands, all the offices were left in a state of absolute confusion, and the documents, the furniture, and the office material were thrown together and mixed up in such a way that when the army of occupation entered the city the archives were full of way that when any or occupation entered the city the archives were full of documents proceeding from the departments of the general government, civil administration, inspection of public works, forestry, mines, council of administration, auditor of state, paymaster and treasurer general, direct and indirect imposts. To these were added later the documents derived from the civil government of the province of Manila, the court of accounts, and the post-office. All these documents were formerly distributed among the different buildings occupied by the various offices.

When the undersigned was appointed to reorganize this immense accumulation of papers and documents, which occupied nearly the entire intendencia building, his first care was to select the personnel of his office from those Filipino employees who had rendered long and satisfactory service and who were well acquainted with the organization and conduct of the late Spanish administration. A definite and uniform system was then adopted in order to proceed properly to arrange, classify, and separate

The documents were then distributed among the different offices or rooms in the building, and divided into branches or departments. The work was difficult, as under the Spanish Government there was barely room in the intendencia building for the five sections of the treasury, and we had now to add nine divisions for the general government, civil administration, forestry, mines, public works, civil government, court of accounts, council of administration, and post-office. Although the space was only occupied by the documents of each branch, without the personnel, we had to use even the passages and galleries.

At that time the new bureau of forestry, auditor's office, civil-service board, and coast and geodetic survey were organized and occupied three-fourths of the building, the space occupied at present by the archives being thereby reduced to one-fourth, and many of the documents having to be left on the ground in the galleries of the lower part of the building, under the stairs, in the hallway, and in the court, exposed to be destroyed by the inclemency of the weather, the dampness, and the white ants.

I must also state that on account of the constant transfers, due to the establishment of the above-mentioned offices, our work has been greatly delayed, which was unavoidable with the confusion resulting from so many changes and removals.

It is only lately that the bpreau of archives has been able to go on with its work with due regularity, to classify by dates all royal briefs, royal orders, and letters addressed to the Madrid Government from 1660 to 1898, and to prepare the corresponding indexes by items, branches, and chronology.

In this manner the work of separation and classification is being carried on, and it must be borne in mind that we are obliged to deal with archives running back for nearly four centuries, and it is therefore a long and arduous work. Aside from this, we are somewhat hampered in our work by having to attend to the demands of every department of the government for information and reports, which cause necessary delay.

As the work progresses we are arranging the documents under our charge in chronological order.

Indexes are being made for different subjects similar to those for royal orders, so as to facilitate the search for any particular document.

There being many duplicates, and even triplicates, of a single subject, when the same was a matter for investigation, or of record in several distinct departments, it is our purpose to bring them together under one head.

In spite of our having requested the sending of all records belonging to the department of finance and the Manila custom-house to this office, the same has not yet been done; and when the mint and forestry bureaus were created, as well as the bureau of public lands, all documents pertaining to those bureaus, which had been recorded during Spanish times, were taken out of these archives and transferred to them.

The documents and records which existed in the governmental and administrative archives in the provinces have been in large measure destroyed by the insurgents, and they have been replaced by others existing in these archives.

In accordance with the stipulations of the treaty of Paris, all documents, books, and other papers belonging to the time of Spanish domination ought to be kept in these archives, where anyone wishing to consult them or make a copy of any docu-

As the employees of this bureau are the only persons who, on account of special training, have a knowledge of the documents under their charge, the transfer of these documents to another bureau entirely ignorant of the legislation to which they were incident would be entirely useless. This is proven by the fact that employees of the municipality frequently come here to consult the archives upon matters the antecedents of which are to be found in the archives of the city attorney. thing happens with respect to the Manila custom-house and the department of finance. If, in accordance with the treaty of Paris, all of the records of the Spanish Government ought to be conserved, they should be kept in one single place and in an orderly manner. Commissioner Ide, being of the same mind, ordered that the old archives of the "audiencia" be attached to this bureau, which it has not been possible to do on account of lack of room, but the work of enumeration is now going on so that it may be done as soon as there is sufficient space.

It can not be denied that if the above plan is to be carried out, more adequate space is needed, as at the present time the records in the archives are too numerous to be taken care of properly, for which reason many of them are in a sad state, and their preservation is impossible under present conditions. The archives should be housed in a single edifice capable of containing the immense number of documents, although some of them might well be consigned to the flames on account of their uselessness.

The filing cases which are at present in use are too few in number and not suitable for the purpose. It would be well to have all documents kept in tin or zinc boxes similar to those which are used for royal cedulas, which have kept these documents in excellent state of preservation for three hundred years. These boxes systematically numbered might be kept on shelves instead of in such filing cases as are now in Such are the improvements which I have the honor to recommend for the betterment of the service.

Very respectfully,

The honorable the Secretary of Public Instruction.

M. DE GRIARTZ, Chief of Bureau.
